Army Bill, Due in House Today, Asks 850 Planes

Sheppard Warns of 'Hostility' Abroad as Senators Clash on Foreign Policy

Warnings rang through the Senate yesterday that "hostile attitudes" of dictator nations necessitate immediate expansion of American defense, and the House Military Appropriations sub-committee prepared to present tomorrow a $520,000,000 Army supply bill carrying funds for 850 new warplanes.

Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, opening debate on the $367,000,000 measure authorizing the principal features of the President's emergency defense program, declared the attitudes of the totalitarian states "are becoming more menacing toward free, independent, self-governing democratic nations." He urged passage of the bill as necessary to the "efficient conduct" of our defense, even though "this special world situation did not exist."

Vandenberg Critical

Joining him in support of the measure were Democratic Senators Logan, of Kentucky, and Connally, of Texas, while Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, without declaring his stand on the bill, attacked the Administration's conduct of foreign relations.

Replying to Vandenberg's criticism of President Roosevelt's recent efforts to assist England and France to rearm, Logan declared unimpaired existence of those nations was as important to American defense as protection of Latin America from aggression. The Michigan Senator had indorsed the Monroe Doctrine.

Borah Challenges Logan

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, challenged Logan, with the declaration that in maintaining the Monroe Doctrine "we are defending the United States. We enter into no entangling alliances. We simply say that the invasion of that territory endangers the United States and defend it upon the same theory as if were the Port of New York."

"If we stand by and let England and France go down," countered Logan, "we are as much endangered as if we permitted an attack on South America."

House Debate Today

Chairman Snyder (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, of the House Military Appropriations sub-committee, said he planned to bring in the Army supply bill for debate tomorrow. House action on the measure, which will raise next year's Army expenditures to a record peace-time high, is expected before the end of the week.

The bill would make $50,000,000 immediately available for building 565 airplanes, to enable factories to make an early start on the air expansion program. An additional $67,000,000 will become available July 1, for the remaining 285 planes and other aviation needs.

1,932 Planes in Two Years

Under this appropriation and that of last year, 1,932 airplanes would be delivered in the calendar years 1938 and 1939, committee members said, giving the Army a total of 2,950 first class planes by the end of this year.

It is expected the supply bill will make available funds in excess of budget estimates, through reappropriations and contract authorizations. Additional funds will be allowed for additional antiaircraft and seacoast defenses, with an ex-

Silver City, Nev., Feb. 27 (I.N.S.). With a taxi driver and a woman store proprietor as witnesses, Erskine Caldwell, 35, author, and Margaret Bourke-White, 31, the photographer, were married here tonight.

Obtaining a marriage license at Reno late today, they drove to Carson City, where they picked up the Rev. C. H. Sloan, Baptist minister, and drove to Silver City, where the ceremony was performed.

Caldwell is the author of the book "Tobacco Road," on which the stage success was based. It was the second marriage for both.

Senate Odds 6 to 4 Against Amlie on ICC

Subcommittee Delays Showdown Vote On Nomination

President Roosevelt will be informed shortly after his return late this week there is no prospect of the Senate confirming Thomas A. Amlie as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, it was learned last night.

An informal poll of the Senate on Amlie's confirmation chances, conducted at the behest of the Senate leadership, was reported reliably to show the odds 6 to 4 against him.

This word may be carried to the President by Senate Majority Leader Barkley, Vice President Garner, or some other intermediary.

Showdown Vote Delayed

A Senate Interstate Commerce sub-committee meantime delayed a showdown vote on Amlie's nomination. Although possibility that the President might withdraw the nomination was reported to be slight, the subcommittee is not expected to act until the President is acquainted with the facts.

Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, chairman of the subcommittee, has declined to make his position known. The same subcommittee is considering the President's appointment of J. Haden Alldredge, of Alabama, to another vacancy on the commission.

Published reports in a New York paper that Mrs. Roosevelt had recommended appointment of both Amlie and Alldredge were denied by her yesterday.

Denies Knowing Nominee

Mrs. Roosevelt said she did not know either Amlie or Alldredge, and declared she had never initiated anyone's appointment or suggested anybody for office.

Arab Control Of Holy Land Is Rejected

Jewish Delegates At London Term Proposal Bow to Fascist 'Blackmail'

Plan Is Turned Down

Special Cable to The Post.

London, Feb. 27.—The Jewish delegation to the Palestine Round Table Conferences today flatly rejected proposals of the British government which would have given the Arabs a superior voice in the imperial administration of the Holy Land and would eventually have led to the establishment of an independent Palestine under Arab domination.

The rejection was submitted by Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the Jewish agency. The enraged Jews, who saw Whitehall's suggested "solution" of the Jew-Arab-British deadlock as another bow to totalitarian blackmail in the Munich manner, earlier had approved unanimously the terms of the rejection among themselves.

In stiff language their spokesman told the government the Jews of Palestine would never submit to Arab domination and declared the British plan totally ignored the Balfour declaration and repudiated the international obligations to give the Jews back their ancestral home.

New Confidence Gained

The Jews had gained new confidence, first of all by the visit of Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy to the foreign office, where he saw Viscount Halifax and reportedly discussed the Palestine situation, and by a cable from American Jewish leaders including former Associate Supreme Court Justice Louis Brandeis, Benjamin V. Cohen, Roosevelt adviser, and United States Circuit Court Judge Julian Mack. They urged a "firm stand" and characterized the British plan as "entirely inadmissible."

The Jewish rejection brought negotiations to the highest diplomatic stone wall since the start of the talks—but one not too high for 35-year-old Colonial Secretary Malcolm MacDonald. The Jews, it was officially announced tonight, will continue to meet with their British "betrayers"—but informally, rather than in full congress assembled.

Tomorrow the Jewish delegation will consist of only four men, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, American delegate; Dr. Weizmann, Moshe Shertok, head of the political department of the Jewish Agency, and Ben Gurion. Possibility of further formal meetings will be considered then.

Plan Called Not Final

The Jews were apparently appeased by official reassurance the British plan was not final. At any rate, they did not refuse to discuss the British suggestion, an official source revealed, and plan to stay on in London in the hope of compromise. To show their feelings, however, about 12 Jewish delegates were guests at dinner tonight of

Judge's Stiff-Neck 'Cure' Results In His Hanging

Carson City, Nev., Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Judge Benjamin W. Coleman, 67, for 25 years a member of the Nevada Supreme Court, suffered chronic pain from a stiff neck.

Stretching his neck afforded him some measure of relief.

His body was found today, dangling from a strap in a fuel shed behind his home.

Police Hunt Mystery Man Seen With Dancer Before Slaying

Copyright, 1939, by International News Service.

Los Angeles, Feb. 27.—A "mystery man" who entered the last few hours of life of Anya Sosoyeva, one-time Ziegfeld Follies dancer, was hunted tonight as the key figure in the slaying of the beautiful Russian-born blonde.

This development came as police were able to establish that the fatal attack on Miss Sosoyeva took place on the Los Angeles City College campus at exactly 9 p. m. last Friday.

Joey Glandall, 17, senior at Hollywood High School, reported he heard a "blood-curdling scream" from the scene of the slaying as the clock tolled the hour. He was sitting only 50 feet from where the 32-year-old dancer was brutally beaten.

Glandall added that he saw a woman running, but was frightened and hurried away.

The dancer collapsed at 9:20 p. m. in the arms of Wally Myar, her partner, in a dramatic sketch they were to have presented in the college auditorium. She moaned, as she lost consciousness, that she had been struck and tried hard to describe her assailant.

The mystery man who entered the dancer's last hours was seen with her at 7:45 p. m. Friday when she left her apartment, and again at 8:05 when he returned alone, apparently excited.

$50,000 Movie Prize Won by Housewife

D. C. Residents Get 1,660; Georgetown Man $500

A modest little Italian housewife, Mrs. Elizabeth C. Benincasa, of San Francisco, Calif., won the first prize of $50,000 in the National Movie Quiz Contest sponsored by the entire film industry, it was announced last night.

Washingtonians took down 61 of the 5,404 awards for a total of $1,660 of the $250,000 offered.

Mrs. Laura W. Carpenter, of Barberton, Ohio, was awarded the second grand prize of $25,000.

Twenty other winners of prizes ranging from $10,000 to $1,000 were scattered throughout the country.

Washington's leading winner was Carl R. Greimel, of 6369 Ridge drive, Georgetown, a patron of the Earle Theater, who received his award of $500 from Eddy Duchin, piano playing maestro now making a local appearance.

Edward Arthur McGreevy, of 1238 New Hampshire avenue northwest, a patron of the Capitol Theater, received a prize of $250 from Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, member of the House District Committee.

Winners of $100 prizes were Miss Elizabeth May Singe, of Fairfax, Va.; Miss Virginia Sherman, office of the doorkeeper, U. S. Capitol; I. M. Kramer, 1615 Kenyon street northwest, and Miss Alice C. Hunt, 1317 Otis street northeast.

All other local winners received awards of $10.

Greimel, a special claims examiner at the General Accounting Office, said he felt "swell," and that he had known since Friday that he was a winner but had not been informed of the amount until called to the Earle stage.

District Fire Chief Schrom Dies at 67

Department Head Served Since 1892; Ill Several Years

District Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom succumbed last night to a kidney ailment in Emergency Hospital. He was 67. The veteran firefighter, who joined the department 48 years ago, had entered Emergency last Thursday.

SCHROM

Several times since he became chief engineer in September, 1934, Mr. Schrom had suffered from high blood pressure attacks. He had wanted to retire in 1936, but was urged by the Commissioners to retain his post. Mr. Schrom took a three months leave of absence instead in an effort to recover his health.

It was the second death within the department two weeks. Deputy and Acting Chief John Carrington died last week.

A native of York, Pa., Chief Schrom came to Washington in 1890 and the next year entered the department as a substitute. He became captain in 1900, battalion chief in 1921, and deputy chief ten years later. He also served on the Policemen and Firemen's Retiring and Relief Board.

Chief Schrom had admitted on occasion that as a youngster he had

50 Who Played Numbers, 'Sweeps' Rejected for Jury

Because they admitted playing either the numbers or the Irish Sweepstakes, 50 prospective jurors yesterday were excused from duty in a numbers trial at District Court and only eleven were selected in more than three hours. The court adjourned when available jury lists had been exhausted.

The question of the jurors' gambling habits came up in the case of Lorenzo White, 23, charged on nine counts of numbers violations.

Defense Attorney Edward Buckley said he planned to extend the question on gambling habits to include bingo and the stock market.

Mrs. Roosevelt Quits D.A.R. in Anderson Row

Protests Barring Colored Singer at Constitution Hall

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt resigned from membership in the Daughters of the American Revolution yesterday as a protest against the D. A. R. ban on the appearance of Marian Anderson, colored concert singer, at Constitution Hall.

The First Lady, in intimating her action at her press conference yesterday and earlier in her daily column, mentioned neither the Anderson case nor the D. A. R., but she left little doubt as to her position.

Mrs. Roosevelt's resignation followed by one day her telegram sent to 1,500 persons attending a protest meeting in Lincoln Congregational Church, declaring: "I regret extremely that Washington is to be deprived of hearing Marian Anderson, a great artist."

Meanwhile, it was reported in New York that Miss Anderson's manager, S. Hurok, announced he is planning to present the artist here in an open-air free concert April 9, "within hearing of Constitution Hall," as a means of protest. At the same time, Descendants of the American Revolution, formed two years ago as a rival to the D. A. R., have invited Miss Anderson to give a recital in New York under its auspices, according to the United Press.

In refusing definitely to name the D. A. R. as the organization she

25-Mile-an-Hour Speed Limit Goes Into Effect Here

Washington's new 25-mile-an-hour speed limit became effective "with rigid enforcement" yesterday, according to an announcement by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Boosted recently from 22 miles an hour, the new limit has been advertised for 10 days and signs designating the change have been posted throughout the city.

The 25-mile limit applies to all parts of the city where the speed is not otherwise designated by official signs, Maj. Brown, police superintendent, pointed out.

Chicago to Reveal '39 Political Trend In Primary Today

Mayor Edward J. Kelly, seeking renomination on the Democratic side, was pitted against State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney.

British Labor Flays Franco Recognition

Anglo-French Action Accepting Insurgent Rule Made Official; Truce Imminent

Chamberlain Assailed

By Thomas C. Watson
International News Service Staff Correspondent

London, Feb. 27.—The war in Spain sped toward a conclusion tonight after Great Britain and France formally announced their recognition of the regime of Gen. Francisco Franco as the legal government.

Unconditional British recognition was announced by Prime Minister Chamberlain in a stormy Commons. His statement aroused a violent attack from the laborite opposition, and the lone Communist member demanded his impeachment as "a traitor to Britain."

Less than an hour later, the French government publicly revealed it had taken the same action regarding insurgent Spain.

Loyalists Prepare to Yield

Tonight the final steps toward surender were being taken in Paris and London.

Closing of the loyalist embassy in London at 4 p. m. tomorrow was announced by Ambassador Pablo de Azcarate y Florez, who added:

"We are refugees now. We have no passports and we have no country. If we went to Spain now, we would all be shot to death."

Chamberlain, announcing the recognition, declared:

"As a result of the fall of Barcelona and the overrunning of Catalonia by the insurgents, Gen. Franco now controls the greater part of Spanish territory.

"It seemed impossible to the British government to regard the Spanish republican government, scattered as it was and no longer exercising settled authority, as the sovereign government of Spain.

Franco Notified of Action

"His Majesty's government have decided therefore to inform Gen. Franco of their decision to recognize his government as the government of Spain. Formal action has been taken in this sense today."

Chamberlain's words were punctuated by catcalls, but when he finished cheers were added by government supporters to the veritable bedlam.

Maj. Clement Attlee, Laborite leader, precipitated a heated scene by asking for more detailed information. Chamberlain excitedly replied:

"I am not going to be cross-examined without due notice."

Attlee charged the prime minister with deliberately misleading the House last week when he said he had nothing to tell Commons regarding the recognition.

A Laborite motion formally censuring Chamberlain was tabled for

The Socialists attacked the cabinet's financial policy. The uncertain situation was reported to have caused a flight of capital.

Football Captain Slays Girl And Self on 'Lover's Lane'

RUTH UNDERWOOD

He opened the door and saw on the floor the fully clothed body of his son, William, 18, high school senior and football captain, and the nude body of 16-year-old Ruth Virginia Underwood, William's sweetheart.

Coroner Londus B. Brannon said an examination showed "it is a clear case of murder and suicide." He said Miss Underwood, high school junior, was strangled by her 200-pound suitor after he had attacked her and that Engimann died two hours later, apparently of carbon monoxide fumes.

The deaths touched off an investigation into student vice. Brannon revealed he had information "which indicates that high school girls between 14 and 18 years of age have been taken to hotels in afternoons."

Refuses to Order Fansteel to Rehire Workers; NLRB Sustains 3 Upsets

By Robert C. Albright.

The Supreme Court yesterday roundly denounced sit-down strikes as a "high-handed" procedure completely outside protection of the law and refused to order reinstatement of workers who participated in one.

In one of three thumping reversals dealt the National Labor Relations board, Chief Justice Hughes said Congress clearly intended to recognize only "lawful" strikes.

He called a sit-down "illegal in its inception and prosecution."

The decision upheld the right of the Fansteel Metallurgical corporation to discharge employes who seized possession of two of its buildings a year ago and resisted police efforts at arrest.

Compares It to Assault

In its far-reaching implications, the ruling recognizes an employer's right to bar re-employment to participants in future sit-downs and denies them protection of the Wagner labor relations act.

Hughes said "the ousting of the owner from lawful possession is not essentially different from an assault upon the officers of an employing company, or the seizure and conversion of its goods, or the despoiling of its property or other unlawful acts in order to force compliance with demands."

Giving immediate force to the decision, the court, in a separate action, refused to review the contempt-of-court sentencing of 39 employes who took part in the Fansteel sit-down. The workers had appealed their conviction by an Illinois State court for alleged violation of a court injunction against their occupation of the company property.

Upset in Two Other Cases

In two other decisions the Supreme Court yesterday:

In an opinion by Justice Stone, set aside a National Labor Relations Board order for reinstatement of striking employes of the Columbia Enameling & Stamping Co., Inc., of Terre Haute. Stone ruled that the board failed to prove the company failed to bargain collectively with employes.

In an opinion by Justice Roberts, set aside an order of the board requiring the Sands Manufacturing Co., of Cleveland, to reinstate 48 employes. Roberts ruled that workers who strike in violation of a contract sever their relations with an employer.

First Major Reversals

The decision by Chief Justice Hughes was the high tribunal's first pronouncement on the controversial sit-down issue. The trio of opinions against the Labor Board were the first major reversals that agency has suffered at the hands of the court.

Justices Reed and Black dissented from all three decisions, and Justice Frankfurter did not participate. The sit-down decision had the effect of a 5-to-2 ruling, as Justice Stone, in a partial concurrence agreed the Labor Board lacked statutory authority to order reinstatement of the discharged sit-downers.

Abrupt termination of a short-lived sit-down strike in the aircraft division of the Bendix Corporation, at South Bend, Ind., was one of the first apparent fruits of the ruling. Some 400 sit-down strikers left the plant shortly after they were informed of the Supreme Court decision. Strikers accused the company of failing to make certain promised wage adjustments.

While Chief Justice Hughes, in his majority opinion, called the

Hamilton Hails Dewey Blow At 'Machines'

Says It Hits at Heart Of New Deal Support; Refuses 1940 Forecast

Success of Thomas E. Dewey, New York County district attorney in effecting the conviction of Jam. J. Hines, Tammany district leader, was hailed yesterday by John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, as striking "at the very heart of the unholy alliance between the national Administration and corrupt political machines in our large cities."

He viewed it as bearing on Democratic political situations in Jersey City, Kansas City and Chicago.

Hamilton refused to discuss 1940 political implications of the Dewey victory, which other Republicans here view as putting the 1938 Republican gubernatorial candidate in the forefront among possibilities for the party's Presidential nomination. He confined himself to its implications as a "decisive blow in behalf of morality and decency in local government'

"Dewey has made an invaluable contribution not only to the people of New York, but to the entire country," he said, and added:

"But I think Dewey's service to his country goes far beyond that, for his action necessarily strikes at the very heart of the unholy alliance between the National Administration and corrupt political machines in our large cities. New York is not the only large city that has been under the domination of a corrupt political machine.

"The same type of political gangsters who have dominated New York City likewise have their heel on the neck of the people of Chicago, Kansas City, Jersey City and several other cities, depriving the citizens of these communities not only of decent government but also of their right as American citizens to a free and untrammeled political expression in national as well as local elections.

"If others in positions of responsibility follow Dewey's lead with the vigor he evidenced, we shall see soon

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

A NEW DEALER RETORTS

By LOWELL MELLETT

Director, National Emergency Council.

Newspaper work isn't what it used to be. It used to be work. But the editors having relinquished their space to the columnists and the columnists having relinquished it to their friends, how can you call newspaper work work?

* * * *

Bachrach.

Lowell Mellett . . . retorts

There's one thing about this work (still using the word in its lighter sense): A columnist not only has an opportunity to share with the public his own dear intimate whimsies about himself, but each day he can get even with some person he doesn't like!

* * * *

Think of that. Getting paid for plastering people you don't like! You know, Harlan, I don't believe you take full advantage of your opportunities in this respect. Reading your column, when you write it yourself, one would think there's nobody you don't like! (Editor's note: That's because my liver is healthy; and to know all is to forgive all.)

Now, me, today I don't like Bruce Barton. And I'll tell you why.

"—coupla lifelong friends"

I knew that sophomore statesman—is it all right to make dirty cracks like that? He can't sue you for it. And he can't punch you in the nose; you'll be in Hawaii. And even if he gets you into court you can say that what I meant was that he hadn't been a statesman very long, while all the time you and I would know what I really meant. Let's leave it in.

* * * *

As I was saying, I knew that—I knew Bruce when he had hardly one million to rub against another. This was after he had discovered there was gold in them thar Lebanon hills but hadn't fully exploited the discovery.

All I'm trying to say is that Bruce and me, we're old friends, "lifelong friends," as he expressed it in a letter last week.

So, why don't I like him? I'll tell you.

* * * *

This lifelong friend of mine meets another lifelong friend, name of Franklyn Waltman.

You know Frank. Used to work on your paper; that is, he thought he worked, but that was before he undertook his present job of selling the Republican Party to a skeptical public.

Well, Bruce and Frank meet up. They ask one another how's tricks and agree that tricks aren't so good. Then the crafty Frank says (and I quote):

"Howdja like to getcher pitcher in the papers?"

Bruce (and I quote) doesn't say anything; he is too overcome by the thought.

"—a law a week"

"Remember your last year's idea of repealing one law a week?" Frank asks.

"Why bring that up? I haven't repealed one yet," says Bruce.

"No," says Frank, "but it sounds good to the voters; or, at least, I think maybe it does."

"All right; what'll I repeal?" asks Bruce.

"Why, the National Emergency Council. Oh, it's awful, Bruce. You know what? They got 290 press agents over there, Bruce!"

* * * *

Frank, the slicker, knew that would get Bruce, because Bruce is in the press agent business himself and he doesn't believe in government competition with his business. So, he borrows Frank's pencil and drafts a resolution to put this government competition out of business.

"What about a statement for the papers?" Frank asks.

"Oh, you fix that up," says Bruce and Frank does, making sure to mention all the imaginary press agents.

* * * *

How do I know that conversation took place? I don't. But I'll bet my chance of being President against Bruce's—which is giving neither of us odds—that it is nearer the truth than anything that appeared in Bruce's published statement concerning the National Emergency Council . . . Don't say a word, Harlan. The pleasure is all mine!

Morgenthau To Tell Secrets of Stabilization

Submits to Questioning By House and Senate Units Today, Tomorrow

Hitherto secret inner workings of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund will be disclosed by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau in testimony before the House Coinage, Weights and Measures Committee today and the Senate Banking and Currency Committee tomorrow.

The Treasury head will testify on the Administration bill to extend the stabilization fund, the power to cut the gold content of the dollar down to 50 per cent and the authority to pay Western mining interests a subsidy for newly mined silver. All expire June 30.

Morgenthau revealed his willingness to answer questions on the stabilization fund before the proper Congressional committees in letters to Senators Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, and Lodge (Republican), Massachusetts. But he declined to disclose the information in the letters to the Senators, as they had asked, saying that would be discourteous to the committees.

Requests Full Publicity

Morgenthau said he had asked Representative Somers (Democrat), New York, chairman of the Coinage, Weights and Measures Committee, to make the hearings public. His request presumably was because of publicity which followed his "secret" testimony before the Senate Military Affairs Committee on the French airplane purchase.

Morgenthau will appear before a sub-committee of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee tomorrow afternoon. Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, bitter critic of the dollar devaluation experiment, is chairman.

The secretary will be questioned concerning a monetary co-operation with France and Great Britain under the tripartite agreement. Members of the Senate group are expected to ask whether the fund has been used to extend aid to foreign countries. Morgenthau has denied it has been used to extend credits to France or any other country for purchase of airplanes or other American goods.

Some Transactions Secret

Morgenthau said a short time ago that it would not b wise to make public stabilization fund transactions. The reason, he explained, was that the fund on occasions had acted as agent for France, Great Britain and other countries co-operating under the tripartite agreement, and the Treasury had given its pledge that such transactions would be kept secret.

Vandenberg and Lodge may be permitted to attend the Senate subcommittee hearing and question Morgenthau with regard to the fund. Glass said the group would decide that question when it meets.

Neither is a member of the subcommittee. If not permitted to attend, they plan to have other members of the group ask their questions.

WPA Workers Now in Demand, Mrs. Kerr Says

WPA production standards are on a par with those set by private industry, Mrs. Florence Kerr, director of all nonconstruction projects for the agency, declared yesterday.

Mrs. Kerr, answering questions at Mrs. Roosevelt's press conference, declared: "Relief workers were looked upon as totally unable to do a skilled job. The competition for what they can do is strong today, however, especially for white collar projects."

Every effort is made to discover and develop individual talents, she said.

Senate Merit Unit Meets Today

The Senate Civil Service Committee will hold its first meeting this morning, an executive session. If no difference develops on the Neely retirement bill, upon which hearings were held last year, the measure may be reported favorably.

Green Legislative Demands Held Peril to Labor Peace

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Three labor leaders named by William Green, president of the A. F. of L., to negotiate for peace in the labor ranks, after an appeal by President Roosevelt, are (left to right) Daniel J. Tobin, teamsters' union; Harry C. Bates, bricklayers' union, and Matthew Woll, vice president photoengravers union. Naming of a similar C. I. O. group was awaited today

A. F. of L. President Insists on Changes in Wagner Act; C. I. O. Opposed; Senate Hearings Postponed

Proposals for peace between the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations met difficulties yesterday when William Green, president of the A. F. of L., insisted Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, proceed with consideration of the A. F. of L. amendments to the National Labor Relations act.

After the protest by Green, Senator Thomas said the hearings had been postponed indefinitely, but only to give opportunity to the representatives of both warring factions to meet and draw up a peace plan, as requested by President Roosevelt last Saturday. If the hearings on a controversial subject, of which the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. had already taken opposite sides, were to be continued during the peace efforts it "would be deemed unfortunate by all," Thomas said.

So far, there has been no word from John L. Lewis, president of the C. I. O., as to whether he will appoint representatives to meet with A. F. of L. spokesmen. While it is considered almost certain that he will do so, with certain reservations, nevertheless the intractable attitude of the A. F. of L. over its amendments to the Wagner act, is not considered conducive to harmony. The amendments sponsored by the A. F. of L. were introduced by Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts.

Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, yesterday called at Senator Thomas' office, and there the Senator suggested formation of a seven-man board, made up of members from both dissident groups to co-ordinate the labor legislative program. He later said that "if nothing else comes out of President Roosevelt's suggestion for a peace conference between the rival labor factions something should be done to co-ordinate their legislative activity."

Thomas proposed a committee to be composed of two members each from the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O., two members from the railway brotherhoods and one nonpartisan member, not a member of any labor group.

Justice Roberts' Memory Amazes Hearers; Average Age of Court Rises to 64.6 Years

By the Associated Press.

The phenomenal memory of Associate Justice Roberts of the Supreme Court amazed the courtroom audience yesterday.

JUSTICE ROBERTS

For nearly a half hour he spoke from the bench, delivering opinions without once glancing at the printed documents containing the words he was reciting.

Justice Hugo L. Black, the Supreme Court's youngest member, became 53 years old yesterday, thus raising the average age of the justices to 64.6 years, compared with 71 two years ago.

The average dropped sharply when Black succeeded 78-year-old Willis Van Devanter, who retired June 2, 1937.

Then 75-year-old George Sutherland was succeeded by Stanley Reed, now 54; Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo, who died at the age of 68, was followed by 56-year-old Felix Frankfurter and Justice Louis D. Brandeis, 82, retired two weeks ago, and a successor has not been named.

Representative Burch (Democrat), Virginia, reported he and Representative Kerr (Democrat), North Carolina, had held a satisfactory conference with State Department officials in the interest of Kerr's bill to prohibit exports of tobacco seed.

The bill has been opposed by the State Department on the ground it might complicate the trade agreement program, but Burch said the department agreed to re-emine the proposal.

Proponents of the measure contend it would be of value in reducing competition in domestic markets from foreign tobaccos.

Congress will be in session during the "dog days" of August, Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, veteran Democratic "whip" of the Senate, forecast last night.

"This is a political session of Congress, with thoughts turning to the 1940 Presidential race," he said. "The issues are now being formed. By the next session of Congress the issues will be pretty well defined."

The House approved a provision in the Treasury-Postoffice appropriation bill abolishing the time-honored office of surveyor of customs at the Port of New York.

The post, which pays $8,000 a year, is now held by Harry T. Foley. The House was told it is one of several offices in the customs service traditionally appointed by the President, and "purely political in nature." It is not "essential to the proper functioning of the customs service," said a report to the appropriations committee. The provision recommended by the Treasury Department also abolishes the offices of controller of the customs in several seaboard cities.

Planter Sues To Recover Tax Exemption Fees

Dothan, Ala., Feb. 27 (AP).—Suit was filed in Federal District Court here today attacking constitutionality of the 1934 cotton control act and seeking recovery of sums paid for tax-exemption certificates on cotton produced above quotas stipulated for individual farmers.

The case was filed by J. Hubert Farmer, acting for T. J. Cook; cotton planter, asking return of $1,531.

The law was repealed after the Supreme Court held unconstitutional certain phases of the 1933 AAA act.

NLRB Suspends Aide for Talking About Policies

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday announced suspension of Dr. Towne Nylander as regional director at Los Angeles, after an Inglewood, Calif., news article reported he said in an address that "the employer doesn't have a chance before the board."

The board accused Dr. Nylander of "expressing views which obviously are in no sense the views of the board."

House Steering Unit Sets June Adjournment

Meets to Speed Action On Key Bills and Kill 'Nonessential' Items

By Cecil B. Dickson.

(Copyright, 1939, by International News Service.)

The House Democratic steering committee, in secret session, yesterday mapped plans to speed action on key legislation with a view to final adjournment of Congress early in June.

The meeting was held as a part of the Administration leaders' program to reweld factions into a united front to assure quick passage of essential legislation and rapid disposal of controversial proposals.

It followed a survey of membership sentiment in connection with the Administration's business "appeasement" program. Party leaders established that the House will stand firm against inflationary and similar proposals, including the Townsend old-age pension plan.

Nonessentials Sidetracked

The steering committee, composed of Representatives from 16 areas in the country and the Democratic leaders, was reported as backing the Administration's peace overtures to business and as welcoming the decision not to press for new taxation at this session. Members also reported overwhelming support for the new Government reorganization bill.

Representative Scrugham (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the steering committee, in an exclusive statement to the International News Service, said:

"While no formal action was taken, there was a unanimity of spirit to speed action on key legislative bills and to sidetrack the nonessentials. We are looking toward adjournment early in June. The House will dispose of all the regular appropriation bills by the first of May. There is little opposition to the new Government reorganization bill and its passage appears certain. Contrary to some reports, the Democrats in the House are in accord and this will be demonstrated as legislation is speeded toward enactment."

Meet Again Next Week

Scrugham said another meeting would be held probably next week, when the problem eliminating "unessential" legislation would be considered.

There is some talk that a special House Ways and Means sub-committee will be appointed to work out a general revision of the tax structure during the recess of Congress to permit quick action early in the next session.

FTC Ends Price Control System In Sponge Trade

Control of the sponge trade by the Sponge Institute of Washington and the Florida Sponge Packers Association has ended, the Federal Trade Commission announced yesterday.

Since 1935 the two organizations, representing 22 wholesale distributors and packing companies, have enforced a "legitimate" channel of distribution under which nonmembers could only acquire sponges at at 20 per cent increase in price.

Such action was held by the commission to deprive middlemen and the public of the advantages of free competition.

Joint Committee Votes 17 Millions For TVA Dams

By the Associated Press.

A joint Senate-House Conference Committee approved yesterday a $17,206,000 TVA appropriation voted by the Senate after it had been rejected in the House.

The committee's report now goes to both chambers for final action.

Hamilton Fish Defends Roosevelt

Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, one of President Roosevelt's harshest critics, yesterday defended the Chief Executive on the House floor against what he termed "personal abuse" heaped upon the President by speakers at the recent German-American Bund rally in New York.

"Every one of these Nazis know that if they attack Hitler in Germany they'd lose their heads before night," Fish said.

Philadelphia Again Indicts Mayor Wilson

Four Police Captains Also Accused; Earle Aides Under Fire

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Feb. 27. — Mayor S. Davis Wilson was indicted a second time today at the recommendation of a special grand jury investigating charges of police collusion with gamblers.

Indictments against the mayor last September on the same charges —misbehavior in office, failure to suppress gambling and preventing witnesses from testifying before a legislative committee studying criminal courts—were dismissed in county court as an infraction of grand jury procedure. The Superior Court upheld the decision.

4 Police Captains Re-indicted

Re-indicted with the mayor today were four police captains against whom the original indictments had not been dismissed. Deputy Attorney General Hermes explained they were obtained to forestall any future question.

Attorney General C. T. Reno said the new indictments corrected the procedural errors to which the courts objected.

Judge James C. Crumlish indicated the mayor would be permitted to sign his own bond for $10,000, and the police officers for $5,000 each. Wilson is vacationing at Mineola, Fla.

The special grand jury which recommended the indictments began work 17 months ago after Philadelphia District Attorney Kelley, the day after the May, 1937, primary election, had requested a grand jury investigation of charges of police collusion with gamblers.

Wilson Charged Politics

Mayor Wilson, nominal head of the city police, declared Kelley's request was motivated by Wilson's support of Independent and Democratic candidates in the primary rather than the city Republican committee ticket. He also charged laxity by the district attorney's office in prosecuting gamblers.

Earle Aides Accused

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 27 (AP).—A special grand jury investigating charges made against Democrats in the Pennsylvania primary campaign last spring recommended today the indictment of 14 persons, including four who were cabinet members under former Gov. George H. Earle.

One of those named is dead. The grand jury reported it was "not prepared to make any specific findings" respecting Earle. It announced it would continue its work.

The former cabinet members include David L. Lawrence, Democratic State chairman and former Secretary of the Commonwealth; Ralph M. Bashore, secretary of the Democratic State committee and former secretary of labor and industry; Roy E. Brownmiller, former secretary of highways, and the late Warren Van Dyke, secretary of highways before Brownmiller.

Three Specific Charges

The grand jury's 36-page presentment enumerated charges generally and specifically. It said it had been found that:

State highway contractors were compelled to place construction bonding business with certain favored insurance agencies.

State employes were forced to contribute to campaign funds under threat of dismissal.

Highways department pay rolls for Luzerne County were "padded" more than $1,000,000.

Others named in the presentment were lesser Democratic officials concerned with party finances, a former highways engineer and representatives of bonding companies.

SEC Seeks Stock Issue Data for Monopoly Probe

The monopoly division of the Securities and Exchange Commission has sent out letters to 1,000 dealers and underwriters seeking pertinent data regarding the distribution of some of the choicest bond and stock issues offered in 1938.

The commission wants to present the data before the monopoly committee.

The monopoly division is anxious to ascertain whether such choice issues are acquired by large institutional investors and whether the public generally has participated in the financing, also, whether the distribution is concentrated in large financial centers and whether outlying districts have a chance to participate.

1,200 Police Guard N.Y. Red Celebration

22,000 Attend Rally in Garden; Two Arrested Outside

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 27.—Guarded by more than 1,200 police, the New York State Communist Party tonight celebrated the twentieth anniversary of the Communist International and the fifteenth anniversary of the Daily Worker, the New York organ, in Madison Square Garden where only a week ago the German-American Bund met.

A special police precinct headquarters was set up in the Garden basement.

Communist officials estimated the attendance at 22,000; police officials at between 16,000 and 17,000.

Two men, identifying themselves as Chris Andrews, 27, a newspaperman, and Arthur Burch, 41, an attorney, were arrested and charged with disorderly conduct in a disturbance outside the Garden when circulars reported to have been issued by the Socialist Workers Party were distributed.

The names of Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Committee Investigating un-American Activities; the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, of Detroit; former President Herbert Hoover, Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini were booed when mention by Israel Amter, Communist State chairman.

Earl Browder, general secretary of the Communist Party of the United States, said, "we have learned the most profound lessons from our affiliation to the Communist international, and above all are American Communists indebted to the individual contributions of three men—Lenin, Stalin and Dimitroff."

Clarence Hathaway, Daily Worker editor in chief, accused the "bourgeois" press of printing "biased" news representing the viewpoints either of "outright Fascists or of those who are pursuing a policy of capitulation to fascism."

Bailey Rules Ambulances Out Of Taxi Class

Justice Bailey yesterday ruled the W. W. Chambers undertaking firm could operate its ambulances as private passenger vehicles without obtaining hackers' licenses. The undertaker's limousines would be required to carry vehicle-for-hire tags, however, he said.

He overruled the District's petition to dismiss Chambers' suit for a permanent injunction against enforcement of the Commissioners' order withholding private passenger vehicle tags for ambulances.

Obliging Council Changes Name Of Gravel Alley

Easton, Md., Feb. 27 (AP).—Gravel alley is no more. Here's why:

Folks living on the street, long irritated at its name, finally got provoked to the petition point. In a long petition they recounted their displeasure, and suggested that some nice name be found for their thoroughfare. City councilmen agreed. They went to work on the problem.

Now the people on Gravel alley are living on Cherry street.

Thus encouraged, the councilmen decided to make a clean sweep. So Easton doesn't have a Wilson alley any more.

In its place is Lilac lane.

Preparation Made To Plant 6,000 Dogwood Trees

D. C. Realty Man Shot to Death As Hundreds Shop Nearby

Nathan Sternberg Found in Auto With Revolver on Floor Between Legs; Friend Drove Him to Shopping Center

A middle-aged real esate operator was found mysteriously shot through the heart last night within earshot of hundreds of rush-hour customers in a park and shop area at 3501 Connecticut avenue northwest.

The man, Nathan Sternberg, 53, a resident of Cathedral Mansions, 3000 Connecticut avenue northwest, was found slumped in the rear seat of an automobile, a .32 caliber revolver between his legs on the floor of the car.

He was discovered by persons shopping nearby who had heard a muffled report. Police were unable to find anyone in the nearly 400 that quickly thronged around the car who had seen the shooting.

Former Partner Says He Was Ill

Harold C. Acker, 51, an attorney, 7542 fourteenth street northwest, who had been Sternberg's real estate partner until five months ago, told police he had driven Sternberg, who was ill, to a drug store in the parking area to get medicine. He said the shooting took place while he was in the washroom of an adjacent gasoline station.

Wife Had Dinner Ready

A reporter who went to Sternberg's apartment half an hour after his death found his wife waiting for him. The table was set for two, decorated with flowers and lighted candles.

She had not yet been informed of his death.

Acker said Sternberg had met with recent financial reverses and had been brooding about money matters.

Coroner A. Magruder Macdonald said an autopsy would be performed today and he would issue a certificate stating cause of death.

Economists Say 'Slight' Recession Will End by April

(Copyright, 1939, by International News Service.)

The United States is experiencing a "slight" recession which will disappear by April 1, to be followed by a "healthy" improvement in economic conditions, leading economists of the National Capital told International News Service last night.

"There should be a favorable recovery from the current slight recession," said David C. Elliott, chief of the statistical and economic division of the RFC.

Ernest M. Fisher, FHA director of economics and statistics, said, "The general impression is that home financing and building has very good prospects this year."

Congress Acts To Pay 4,000 in FHA

$2,500,000 Emergency Fund to Be Rushed, Despite Senate's Ire

Congress yesterday laid aside its row with the Budget Director over the creation of deficiencies in administrative expenses long enough to make an emergency appropriation of $2,500,000 for 4,200 employes of the Federal Housing Administration.

To avoid the possibility of having Government employes work for nothing after March 1, Congress voted to push the appropriation ahead of the independent offices supply bill, now in conferences, although the Senate had withheld the appropriation from the general money bill.

$2,500,000 Available

As a consequence of the Senate's action, taken as a rebuke to Budget Director Daniel W. Bell and FHA officials for creating a deficiency, the emergency measure will make the $2,500,000 available earlier than was expected.

FHA officials, who created the deficiency to meet administrative expansions, said they have enough money on hand to meet the pay roll today and possibly enough to carry on for several days in March. After that, had not the special appropriation been made, they would have been confronted with the dilemma of asking the employes to work in anticipation of an appropriation or placing them on furlough.

Hits 1939 Appropriation

The money actually comes out of the FHA regular appropriation for the next fiscal year, which does not begin until July 1. The issue thus may arise again when a deficiency estimate is submitted to restore the FHA's appropriation for next year to the budgetary estimate.

FHA officials blamed the shortage of funds for this year on the increasing work placed on the agency by the passage of the 1938 housing act.

Treasury Plans No New Borrowing On March 15

The Treasury will borrow no new money on the March 15 income tax installment date, Secretary Morgenthau announced yesterday. Instead, it will merely call for refunding $1,294,000,000 of 2½ per cent notes maturing June 15.

Nature and terms of the security issues to be offered holders of the maturing June notes will be discussed by Morgenthau tomorrow morning with members of the executive committee of the Federal Reserve Open Market Committee.

Coed, 17, Kills Self, Silent to the End

Her parents told police she took the poison after an engagement with a boy, who said she was cheerful and that they had not quarreled.

House Committee to Visit Gallinger in Row on Control

Rep. Bayes Announces Investigation; Social Service Leaders Volunteer Information on Controversy

A sub-committee of the House District Committee probably will make an inspection trip to Gallinger Hospital and may hold hearings in an effort to get to the bottom of the current row over administrative troubles.

After having the reports of the Public Health Service and Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of the hospital, turned over to him, Chairman Bates (Democrat), of Kentucky, of the sub-committee on hospitals, said that an investigation will be conducted.

Social service leaders appeared before the full committee to state they have pertinent information relating to Gallinger. They were referred to the Bates sub-committee.

Meanwhile, Richard Mackenzie, who was hired last week by the Commissioners to study the Gallinger problem, conferred at length with Health Officer George C. Ruhland, but neither one would comment on the parley upon its conclusion.

The current controversy centers about the dispute between Health Department officials and Georgetown and George Washington universities over the authority of five resident physicians set up at Gallinger last year by the District supply act.

A directed verdict by Judge Edward M. Curran yesterday cleared two boys in Police Court of larceny from a church poor box because the Government was unable to prove the box held money.

Madrid Envoy Here to Join 'Exiled Faculty'

De Los Rios to Resign When U. S. Recognizes Franco, Live in N. Y.

By Walter Fitzmaurice.

(Copyright, 1939, by International News Service)

Dr. Fernando de los Rios yesterday completed plans to resign as Ambassador of the vanishing Spanish republic to join the faculty of the "University in Exile" in New York.

Friends said his course was influenced by expectations that the United States Government will recognize the Spanish nationalist regime "within a few weeks," thus depriving him of diplomatic status.

The State Department announced, meanwhile, that the American provisional embassy to Spain at Perpignan, France, was being closed as a result of collapse of the loyalist government.

Fears Treason Charge

Advices from Spain had warned de los Rios, friends said, that his championship of the republic's lost cause would probably confront him with a treason charge if he returned there.

Accordingly, they revealed, he had accepted the University in Exile's" invitation to join the distinguished scholars, including the German novelist, Thomas Mann, and the physicist, Albert Einstein, who are teaching there.

He was once rector of the University of Madrid, first minister of education in the republic, and a noted historian and philosopher.

His daughter, Laura, 24, has already established herself as a Spanish instructor at Wellesley College, and the family has become resigned to exile, friends said.

State Department officials indicated to him the desire to bolster Anglo-French efforts to maintain an independent Spain, plus the duty of safeguarding the $60,000,000 American stake in Spain will result in recognition to Franco "very soon."

The plan entails withdrawal of the present American Ambassador, Claude Bowers, and his replacement by a career diplomat acceptable to the Franco regime.

Secretary Hull was noncommittal on the recognition question at his press conference. No decision is likely before President Roosevelt's return, March 3.

It was learned, however, that Franco's registered agent Juan de Cardenas, stands ready to take over the embassy and ambassadorial rank as soon as recognition is accorded. Cardenas is expected here from New York late this week.

One-time ambassador of King Alphonso here and ambassador for the republic in Paris when the war broke out, Cardenas experienced a personal tragedy from the conflict as profound as that of De los Rios, whom he is expected to succeed. His son died fighting under the nationalist flag.

action tomorrow when a House debate is scheduled.

Chamberlain stated recognition was "unconditional," and added:

"His Majesty's government have noted with satisfaction the public statements of Gen. Franco concerning his determination to secure the traditional independence of Spain and to take proceedings only in cases of those against whom 'criminal' charges have been laid."

On the basis of this last Chamberlain statement a delegation of Spanish government representatives, apparently certain the war's end is near, approached the British government tonight to ask assistance for those in government Spain who do not feel themselves covered by Franco's assurances against reprisals.

This group also asked specifically for information regarding the kind of reprisals Franco planned for Spanish government officials in event of unconditional surrender.

To all these questions the British government reserved replies, but it was understood that out of humanitarian considerations the foreign office is undertaking to do what it can to aid the defeated group.

According to diplomatic circles, Sir George Mounsey, assistant undersecretary of state, has been proposed to Franco as Britain's ambassador.

It was learned Senator Leon Berard, special French emissary to insurgent Spain, rejected an offer to represent France at the insurgent capital.

Franco Thanks Allies

Burgos, Spain, Feb. 27 (AP).—Gen. Franco told a wildly cheering throng here today he would not "forget those countries who came to our aid in time of need." His remarks were interpreted as referring to Italy, Germany and Portugal.

Franco said Spain has "fought a winning battle against communism and the forces seeking to destroy her."

France Seeks Friendship

Paris, Feb. 27 (I.N.S.).—The French government followed its formal recognition of Generalissimo Franco with an announcement tonight that France and insurgent Spain will begin at once to establish "good neighborly relations" between them.

Premier Daladier's council of ministers, the highest ruling body in France, said the government had entrusted the mission of officially notifying Franco of the recognition to M. Charveriat, director of political affairs in the foreign office.

President Azana of Spain, whose signed resignation was shown to French government officials in Paris last night, arrived at his sister-in-law's residence in Collonges, near the Swiss frontier.

Following a meeting at the Spanish embassy today during which the resignation was discussed, the Azana document was sent to Madrid, where it will be officially announced whenever Premier Negrin deems such action advisable. This was learned despite embassy denials, which, according to an authoritative source, were issued upon instructions from Azana himself.

Franco, it was understood, already has named three Spanish consuls who will proceed to Marseille, Bordeaux and Bayonne tomorrow.

Palestine

Labor M. P. Tom Williams, "where they could really say something."

The date served a double purpose. It was Williams who urged the government consider inviting the American delegates to the round table conference. And it was the Conservative Party in power whose invitation to a luncheon today was turned down by the Jews.

The second back-handed snub was not merely perverse. Secretary MacDonald, in his first statement in the House of Commons on the progress of the talks, refused today to give assurance that the government was not departing from the principles of the mandate providing for a Jewish national home. On the ground that any statement he might make while the discussions were still "fluid" would be a mistake, he not only refused a direct answer but cautioned the press not to speculate on the terms of the British agreement—which have been available in the press for two days.

League Provisions Studied

Experts in Whitehall and at the American Embassy were tonight studying the exact provisions of the League of Nations mandate under which the British govern Palestine, to determine just where Washington would stand should the British definitely take a new line to appease the Arabs. America's legal rights as regards Palestine have never been explored to their dark limits, although her right to be informed in case of a change in the form of government, and her right for protection of American interests there, go unquestioned.

However, the London News-Chronicle will say tomorrow the government of Iran (Persia) cabled to the President before the Palestine Round Table Conference began, inquiring as to the Administration's attitude toward an independent Arab state in Palestine. The paper said the President had replied that if Great Britain decided in favor of such a state, the United States would not interfere.

Among the prominent American Jews who telegraphically cheered their London representatives were Rabbi Solomon Goldman, president of the Zionist Organization of America; Leon Gellmann, head of Mizrachi Organization, Association of Orthodox Zionists; Mrs. Judith Epstein, of the Hadassah, and Louis Wertheim, member of the American Labor Zionists.

Berlin Jews Get Passports

Berlin, Feb. 27 (AP).—Germany began handing out "J" passports to Berlin Jews today as fast as formalities could be completed, a reversal of a previous policy which required that passports be granted only to those likely to receive permission to enter foreign countries.

The reason, apparently, was to provide Jews with passports as swiftly as possible and tell them to leave Germany soon under an order effective today that requires the emigration of 100 Berlin Jews daily.

A new wave of Jews descended on foreign consulates beseeching them to speed up promised visas or asking to be placed on waiting lists.

The order requires leaders of Berlin's 160,000 Jews to furnish daily the names of 100 persons who are to leave within two weeks.

Defense

pected increase in the National Guard funds from $43,000,000 to $45,000,000.

Meanwhile, Chairman Scrugham (Democrat), of Nevada, of the House Naval Appropriations subcommittee, announced hearings would begin March 15 on the Navy supply bill, also expected to reach a record peace-time total. He said he planned to insert funds in the measure for starting work on 12 new naval air bases provided in an Administration bill which passed the House last week, after the controversial Guam project had been eliminated. The Senate Naval Affairs Committee is expected to take up the bill this week.

Senator Sheppard told the Senate "we cannot draw a line around the sea and land frontiers of continental United States" and defend this alone. The Panama Canal, Puerto Rico and Alaska are "vital links in our defense chain," he declared, and not "outposts" or warning points from which we can withdraw.

Fears "Slow Penetration"

The "western world belongs to the western nations" and "freedom and democracy must be preserved on this hemisphere," Sheppard said, adding:

"A violation of the Monroe Doctrine would probably not occur as a sudden, overt act. It could easily take the form of . . . a peaceful penetration . . . until definite and powerful minorities would be established with the result that . . . hostile nations might already have a foothold in areas that would threaten the most important link in our entire system of defense, the Panama Canal."

Vandenberg Asks "Calm"

Vandenberg charged that "the bill flows not from the danger of attack but from propaganda." He declared we are a "long, long way from war, unless we seek it," and asked that a "calmer atmosphere" be maintained in connection with defense and foreign policy. He assailed the idea of aiding the democracies against the totalitarian states by "means short of war."

"We must never take the first step unless we are ready to take the final step," Vandenberg declared. "Taking sides can be a provocative speech as well as sanctions. There is no safe twilight zone of partisan support that will not inevitably lead to war or unsufferable humiliation."

Challenging Vandenburg's statement that we should stay "wholly neutral" Logan asked him if he would follow this course if the foreign policy of some countries were to destroy democracy. Vandenberg replied that he would have us "mind our business" until public opinion in the United States was settled that in aiding them we were prepared to "go the whole way" and become an ally openly.

Connally Joins Debate

Connally ridiculed Vandensberg's suggestion that the program be delayed for a Congressional determination of foreign policy, stating that the drafters of the Constitution had given the President sole power of foreign relations after committees of Congress had "made a muddle of foreign affairs" between 1775 and 1787.

"I cannot imagine the President, any President, deliberately bringing about a situation requiring war," he stated. "We will never go to war until the people want that war."

Connally indorsed the proposal to fortify the Island of Guam, declaring:

"We are told that we mustn't hurt Japan's feelings by building an air base at Guam," he declared sarcastically. "Hurting Japan's feelings, Japan with its bloody hands leaning over China. When Japan decides she can whip us, she'll come after us, Guam or no Guam."

Vandenberg quoted extensively from Post columnists Walter Lippman and Ernest K. Lindley, and the Gallup Poll. Referring to a story in last Saturday's Post that naval circles viewed the defeat of Guam as an invitation to dictators for further aggression, Vandenberg assailed the Navy as "being guilty of saber-rattling" and declared that they had no business "interpreting Congressional action."

New Nazi Bomb Reported

The Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday made public testimony of Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of Air Corps, that the War Department is investigating reports that a new German aerial bomb, first used by insurgents at Barcelona killed "every human being within a radius of a quarter of a mile."

"Further investigation indicated that the Germans did have some kind of a bomb loaded with compressed air, carbon and some form of oil, which combination was supposed to have provided a terrific detonating effect when the bomb hit the ground," Arnold stated. "In proof of that we received pictures showing halves of buildings torn away in Barcelona. But we have not been able to get any more information on it."

3 Blasts at Haifa Market Slay 20; Arabs Celebrate

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, Feb. 27.—Armored cars with machine guns patrolled turbulent centers of the Holy Land tonight following a week-end renewal of Arab-Jewish strife in which 32 persons were killed and 54 wounded.

Haifa was the scene of heaviest bloodshed, which came in the midst of an Arab celebration over reports Britain proposed to make an independent state of Palestine. Bombs planted in vegetable baskets at the Arab market killed 24 Arabs and wounded 39.

Bomb Blasts in Jerusalem

In Jerusalem's market place three Arabs were killed and six were wounded by bombs and one Arab was shot to death.

Three land mine explosions outside Jaffa killed one Arab and wounded four others, and in Jaffa two Jews were reported to have slain an Arab youth.

Two Arabs were shot to death near the Jewish community of Tel Aviv.

Arabs Cheer Reich Consul

The mayor of Tel Aviv telegraphed Prime Minister Chamberlain and Colonial Secretary Malcolm MacDonald he would "not accept a denial of our rights."

Arabs who paraded in Haifa cheered the German consul when he appeared after receiving 100 Arabs. A consulate official said the Arabs "merely informed the consul of the details of the outrages."

An estimated 3,000 persons have been killed in Palestine during the strife of the last 30 months.

Japan Pledges Fairness to Jews

Tokyo, Feb. 27 (AP).—Foreign Minister Arita promised today Japan would abstain from any discrimination against Jews.

Replying to Katsuji Debuchi, former Ambassador to Washington, Arita told the House of Peers the government had adopted formally the policy that Jews living in Japan should be treated as fairly and justly as are all other foreigners.

'Mein Kampf,' Uncensored, Appears Today

U. S. Firm Publishes First Unexpurgated Edition of 'Nazi Bible'

By Harry Bergman
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

New York, Feb. 27.—The American public for the first time will be given the opportunity of reading the full, uncensored basic program of the Nazi movement tomorrow when an unexpurgated edition of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's book, "Mein Kampf," is published.

This edition, "unauthorized" by the German Fuehrer and brought out by Stackpole Sons, is replete with illuminating passages left out of the original expurgated English translation published in the United States in 1933. Many of these hitherto suppressed passages will provide American readers with revealing keys to phases of Hitler's policy and course of action in the past and what might be expected in the immediate future.

France, according to "Mein Kampf," as written by Hitler 15 years ago, is "by far the most terrible enemy of Germany." One passage, omitted from the previous editions, declares "that in the destruction of France, Germany sees only the means finally to give to our people the possibility to expand elsewhere."

The words and phrases, now brought to English-speaking readers for the time, disclose also inconsistencies between Nazi policies and Hitler's "unalterable" credo. For example, one such passage states:

"Any political party which attempts to interfere with religion is committing suicide."

This pronouncement is significant in view of the treatment of Jews and other religious minorities. Hitler's controversy with the Catholic Church, his imprisonment of Protestant clergymen and Nazidom's "neo-paganism" can be seen in a new light when one reads another previously expurgated paragraph:

". . . The first intellectual terrorism befel the much freer ancient world with the appearance of Christianity; but he will not be able to dispute the fact that since then the world has been driven and dominated by this coercion and that coercion can be broken only by coercion, and terrorism by terrorism. Only then can a new condition be constructively created."

Nazi penetration of South America, as well as the German drive for colonies, might be explained at least partially by Hitler's written tenet that his National Socialist Party must strive to realize a "world concept whose effort it is, rejecting the democratic mass idea, to give the world to the best nation, that is to the highest human being. . . ."

Another illuminating paragraph in the new edition:

"An alliance whose goal does not embrace the purpose of a war is foolish and valueless. Alliances are made solely for the purpose of battle."

Stackpole Sons declare their edition "pays no royalty to Adolf Hitler," that "Mein Kampf" is in the public domain because in filling out a copyright agreement for the book's first American publication the Fuehrer stated he was a "Statenlcser"—a stateless man.

On Wednesday, Reynal & Hitchcock, publishers of the original censored version, will publish an unexpurgated authorized edition. Their lawyers are applying for an injunction to restrain sale of the Stackpole edition.

Polish Students Stage New Riots Against Germany

Warsaw, Feb. 27 (AP).—Polish students rioted against Germany at Krakow and Poznan today and clashed with Nazis at Danzig, while Germany accepted a Polish apology for an attack Saturday upon the German Embassy.

These demonstrations occurred along with a new clash in the Nazified Free City of Danzig and the Danzig Senate made a second protest against agitation for incorporation of Danzig into Poland.

Polish students and non-Poles fought in the streets of Danzig, where the Poles have protested against their treatment by the Nazi German majority.

Japan Accepts Foreigners' Reply To Shanghai Note

Tokyo, Feb. 28 (Tuesday) (I.N.S.).—The reply of the Shanghai municipal council to Japanese proposals for dealing with terrorism in the International Settlement has been accepted in principle, the Domei (Japanese) News Agency said today.

(A Shanghai dispatch reported discovery yesterday of three decapitated heads of Chinese impaled on fence posts within the western suburbs of the city, an area controled by Japanese troops. Two heads were those of women.

Lenin's Widow Dead

MME KRUPKSKAYA

Lenin's Widow, Revolutionary Leader, Dies

Recently Made Presidium Member; Soviet Educator

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Feb. 27.—Nadejda Konstantinova Krupskaya, widow of Nikolai Lenin and a leading revolutionist and educator in her own right, died today.

The woman who fought beside the father of the Soviet Union until his death in 1924, was 70 on Saturday.

Messages congratulating her on the anniversary had arrived from all parts of the country, and an exhibition honoring her as "outstanding in the sphere of education" had opened in Moscow.

On January 18, 1938, she was named a member of the presidium, the government organization which acts as an executive and directive body between sessions of the supreme council of the union—the Soviet Parliament.

The central committee of the Communist Party and the council of people's commissars had addressed a birthday message to Mme. Krupskaya, greeting her as an "Old bolshevik and Lenin's friend."

Oumansky Sorrowed

Word of the death of Lenin's widow brought an expression of regret from Constantine A. Oumansky, charge d'affaires of the Soviet Republic here. In a statement to The Post, he said:

"The whole Soviet Union is plunged into mourning at the unexpected passing of Nadezhda Konstantinovna Krupskaya. Her death . . . ended a half century of unflagging and uninterrupted devotion to the building of a socialist society.

"She was the faithful companion and collaborator of Lenin. She shared with him the hardships of underground work, prison and exile as well as the joys of victory and accomplishment. Her writings about Lenin are of great and lasting value. She occupies a special place in the hearts of Soviet women as a champion of their emancipation.

"She was a hard worker, devoted to her country's cause, a great humanist. She will be remembered by our people forever."

Birth Control Killing Brains, Educators Told

America Is Breeding Low Quality Citizens, Woman Warns

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Feb. 27.—Speakers told the American Association of School Administrators tonight that birth control is "rapidly breeding the brains out of the American people" and that when nearly a million Californians vote for $30 every Thursday there is a "need to re-examine the public school program of Iowa."

The result of birth control, said Miss Mary B. McAndrew, superintendent of Carbondale, Pa., schools, challenges educators to make the most of the "seemingly low quality child" and to realize "the root of every tragedy, whether it is behaviorism, decayed homes, unemployment or communism, is lack of education."

Cost to Society Appalling

"Advocates of family limitation have lost sight of the appalling cost of birth control to society," she said in an address drafted for a session of approximately 10,000 educators affiliated with the association.

"We are raising more and more low quality citizens. This breeding from the bottom up means more juvenile delinquency, more crimes, more public charges and unemployables, fewer real leaders."

America's educational program will decide whether the country is intelligent enough to keep on governing itself, said Willard E. Givens, of Washington, executive secretary of the National Education Association.

"Blatant orators of the day say that the American system of constitutional government is on trial. It isn't. The people of America are on trial. The question is, do we have intelligence enough and character enough to keep on governing ourselves? This depends upon the quality and quantity of the educational program.

"When nearly a million people in the golden State of California vote as they did last November for $30 every Thursday, we need to re-examine the public school program of Iowa." (He apparently referred to the large population of former Iowans now in California).

Ickes Sees Crisis

Cleveland, Feb. 27 (AP).—Secretary Ickes said tonight the way Congress "meets" the issue of Government reorganization this year "will indicate how our Government is going to meet the critical problems of the next few years."

Recalling Congress' refusal last year to grant the President's request for authority to reshape executive departments, the Interior Department chief declared "the crisis which impends in our social and economic order" rises above party or party faction.

Ickes addressed the American Association of School Administrators.

He told the educators the United States "cannot survive indefinitely, as a self-governing republic, with our Government reduced to a paralyzed inertia by a sinister propaganda whose aim is national confusion and governmental prostration."

"This is a time when democracy is put to a severe test, to prove its ability to function in a world of new problems and fast-moving events," he said.

Brandeis' Retirement an Incomparable Loss, Justice Roberts Tells 400 at Barristers' Fete

Mourns Passing of His 'Balance and Sanity' From Court

In the retirement of Justice Brandeis the United States Supreme Court has "suffered a loss not comparable to any loss suffered in my term," Associate Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts told the barristers last night at their fifteenth anniversary dinner in the Willard Hotel.

Justice Roberts called Brandeis a "great democrat, a man who really loved democracy and thought democracy had not worked in this country as well as it might because it had not been given the chance it ought to have been given by the free citizens of this great republic."

Although his personal loss was great, Justice Roberts said, the country's loss was much greater, as Justice Brandeis had "desired above everything that a free democracy should thrive on this soil, and with a singleness of purpose and analysis of cold fact seldom equaled, had worked that a true democracy should exist in this country."

"I hope long to associate with him," Justice Roberts concluded, "but I mourn the loss of the balance and the sanity of that man as a judge in the court in which I sit."

Other guests of honor at the dinner were Justice T. Allan Goldsborough, recently appointed to the District Court; Justices D. Lawrence Groner, Justin Miller and Fred M. Vinson, of the Court of Appeals; Justices Oscar E. Bland, Charles S. Hatfield and Joseph R. Jackson, Court of Customs and Patent Appeals; Justice Fenton W. Booth, Court of Claims; Justices Jennings Bailey, Peyton Gordon, Jesse C. Adkins Oscar R. Luhring, Joseph W. Cox, F. Dickinson Letts, James M. Proctor, of the District Court; Judges George C. Aukem and Nathan Cayton, Municipal Court, and Judges John P. McMahon, Hobart Newman, Walter J. Casey and Edward M. Curran, of the Police Court.

Nearly 400 members and guests of the barristers attended the dinner and the reception tendered the justices beforehand by President R. Aubrey Bogley and society officers. Entertainment was provided by the Columbia Light Opera Company, under the direction of Ethel Manning, who presented "Down South," a fantasy set to old and new American music.

Hague Upholds Speech Ban as State's Right

Supreme Court Hears Defense of Refusal To Let C. I. O. Meet

By the Associated Press.

Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City told the Supreme Court yesterday "the State has the absolute power to control the use of streets and public places for the benefit of the public at large."

Hague has appealed from a third circuit court decision that he and his police had unconstitutionally denied to the C. I. O. the right of free assemblage. His contention was contained in a brief filed in connection with oral arguments.

The Hague brief asserted:

"Under the law of New Jersey no one has the right to hold a public meeting in the streets or public places of a municipality without the consent of the local authority. It having been held by this court that such a law does not conflict with the Federal Constitution, the Jersey City ordinance which restricts the right to speak in such places under certain conditions, is necessarily valid. The ordinance has been legally enforced in this State."

Simultaneously the committee on the Bill of Rights of the American Bar Association filed a brief as a "friend of the court" asserting that the conduct of Jersey City officials ". . . constitutes a serious abridgement of the constitutional rights 'peaceably to assemble' of so deliberate and important a character as to be of national importance."

In a third brief the C. I. O. and the American Civil Liberties Union declared "no prior case has presented, as does this case, the obliteration of virtually all the major civil rights of whole groups of people in a single community."

Justice Frankfurter left the bench at the beginning of the argument, indicating he had disqualified himself from the case. He has been a member of the Civil Liberties Union.

Hines Fingerprinted

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Feb. 27.—Chief Magistrate Jacob Gould Schurman, jr., notified Mayor LaGuardia today he already had begun work on a report for the appellate division, covering charges and evidence against Magistrate Hulon Capshaw in connection with the trial of James J. Hines, convicted Saturday night of protecting the Dutch Schultz policy racket.

Hines, meanwhile, was fingerprinted at general sessions court. His lawyers began preparation of an appeal, but District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey announced he would oppose any move to permit Hines to remain free in bail pending the decision.

was leaving, Mrs. Roosevelt said: "I have always had the feeling that announcement of a resignation should come from the organization rather than the person." She repeated emphatically, however, her deep regret that Washington should be deprived of the privilege of hearing Miss Anderson.

First hint that the First Lady had severed connections with the D. A. R. appeared yesterday in her syndicated column, and at the press conference she repeated the indicated move.

"If you belong to an organization and disapprove of an action which is typical of a policy, you should either resign, or make a fight for what you think is right," she said.

Pointing out that in the past she has always stayed in and made the fight, Mrs. Roosevelt declared that in this case, since she had done no active work in the organization, the best thing she could do was to resign in protest. "To remain as a member implies approval of that, and therefore I am resigning," she wrote in her column.

D. A. R. Is Silent

The First Lady told the correspondents at the press session that she had joined the D. A. R. at the association's request upon first coming to Washington in 1933 and on condition that the group certify her lineal descent from a soldier in the American Revolution.

Throughout her period of membership, Mrs. Roosevelt remained aloof from the D. A. R.'s internal strife despite a strong attempt to inject her name into the society's 1935 election. At that ime Mrs. William A. Becker, of Summit, N. J., who was later elected president general, was opposed by a faction on the grounds that as defense chairman Mrs. Becker praised Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling's "Red Network," in which the First Lady is described as a "radical pacifist" and "coworker with many radicals."

Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., D. A. R. president general, attending a series of conferences in Phoenix, Ariz., last night refused to comment. Aides in the Washington headquarters likewise would not confirm the resignation.

Issues Statement

Informed of Mrs. Roosevelt's act, Marian Anderson, on tour in San Francisco, issued the following statement, according to Associated Press:

"I am not surprised at Mrs. Roosevelt's action because she seemed to me to be one who really comprehendes the true meaning of democracy. I'm shocked beyond words to be barred from the Capital of my own country after having appeared in almost every other capital in the world."

Tomorrow a citizens' committee delegation will appear before the board of education at 2 p. m. in Franklin Building, Thirteenth and K streets northwest, and present a petition, signed by 7,000 persons, urging the board to rescind its ruling barring Miss Anderson from Central High School auditorium.

How To Relieve Misery of Your CHEST COLD

If you are suffering from a miserable chest cold, try this: Massage throat, chest, and back with Vicks VapoRub at bedtime. Then spread a thick layer on chest and cover with warmed cloth.

VapoRub goes right to work to bring relief—two ways at once. (1) Direct through the skin like a poultice; (2) Direct to the irritated air-passages with its medicated vapors.

This poultice-vapor action loosens phlegm—clears air-passages—checks tendency to cough—relieves local congestion.

Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over. VICKS VAPORUB wanted to be a fireman.

In 1893, when still a private, he narrowly escaped death when a fire swept through stables at Connecticut avenue and Twenty-second street. Later he was awarded a ribbon for his work when the old Knickerbocker Theater collapsed in 1922, one of Washington's worst tragedies.

Chief Schrom was also singled out for thanks in organizing firemen as special police during the hunger march.

In his five years as chief, he led the "smoke-eaters" against 11 spectacular fires, including the Gobel's packing plant, Benning, and Harris jewelry store, in 1934, and Northminster Church, warehouse at 600 block New York avenue, paint store in 1300 block of same street, all in 1935.

The last major blaze he participated in was at the new Post-office Building also in 1935.

Mr. Schrom, who made his home at 1314 Maryland avenue northeast, leaves his wife, Elizabeth; two daughters, Miss Bettie Schrom and Mrs. Irene Speakman; a son, Ralph, and a brother, W. H. Schrom, the later two of Berwin, Md.

Deputy Chief Andrew Buscher, 65, acting chief, has been with the department since 1898. He assumed his new post last week upon death of Deputy Chief Carrington.

To Check Constipation Get at Its Cause!

If constipation has you down so you feel heavy, tired and dopey, it's time you did something about it. And something more than just taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat the super-refined food most people eat, the chances are the difficulty is simple—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this common form of constipation is your trouble, eat Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. All-Bran isn't a medicine—it's a crunchy, toasted, nutritious cereal. And it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular, day after day. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

of the House, were completed more than two weeks ago. During the hearings Amlie admitted his advocacy of "production for use, and not for profit," but denied any association with the Communist Party, or sympathy with their methods.

The President subsequently named Alldredge to another vacancy on the I. C. C. created by expiration of the term of Frank McManamy, formerly associated with railroad labor. The Brotherhoods, seeking one spokesman on the commission, had urged McManamy's reappointment.

One Democratic Senator, identified with consideration of both the Amlie and Alldredge appointments, yesterday suggested it would be "a good double-barreled compromise" if the President would withdraw Amlie's nomination and appoint someone identified with railroad labor in his place.

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins is known to have been asked to intercede with the President to withdraw the former Wisconsin legislator's name, because of widespread business opposition.

The President never has withdrawn any appointment, and even when advised of probable Senate defeat of Judge Floyd Roberts, of Virginia, insisted that the Virginia Federal judgeship go to a Senate vote where the nomination was rejected.

Likened to Alexander Hamilton

Cleveland, Feb. 27 (AP).—Secretary Ickes "fears" a present-day nomination of Alexander Hamilton would be attacked as Communist.

"Alexander Hamilton, the conservative spokesman of the moneyed class of his day, declared that all the minerals in the soil of America should be and should remain the property of the United States Government," Ickes said in an address tonight.

"It is fortunate that Alexander Hamilton is not here today, for if he were, and President Roosevelt should appoint him to the Interstate Commerce Commission, I fear that his views on the public ownership of minerals would be cited to prove him a Communist; would be used as an argument against his confirmation by the Senate."

Sen. Bridges Seeks To End President's 'Greenback' Power

By the United Press.

The Administration may add another plank to its business appeasement platform by not opposing Congressional repeal of the authority voted to President Roosevelt to issue $3,000,000,000 in "greenbacks," it was reported last night.

The power was given the Chief Executive as a "rider" to the Agricultural adjustment act and is continuing until repealed. The President never used the authority.

Nevertheless, business considers it a threat and its repeal was asked February 1 by Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire. His bill was referred to the Banking and Currency Committee, headed by Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York.

Appeals Court Refuses to Sustain Thompson Will

The court of appeals yesterday reversed an order of the District Court upholding the will of Mrs. Wena D. Thompson, former Washington society leader, who died here in 1936.

The appeal was filed by John W. Thompson, eldest son of Mrs. Thompson, who challenged the capacity of Mrs. Thompson to draw up the will.

Defendants were Donald Thompson, another son, and John L. Smith, executor.

Survey Points To Pedestrian Rules' Success

Some 'Men-in-Street' Remain Skeptical of Control Enforcement

The District's new pedestrian control laws are destined for success if yesterday's interviews during The Post-WJSV "man in the street" survey are an indication.

At least 80 per cent of those who commented for benefit of the WJSV mobile recording unit approved the rules, but some expressed doubt that the regulations will be as rigidly observed after removal of special details of crossing policemen are removed.

"I for one," said one woman, "will be tempted to take more chances when there isn't a uniformed policeman standing at the corner."

Mailman Fears Delay

Lyle O'Rourke, president of the Junior Board of Commerce, said he believed the public "will try to adhere to the regulations, but I believe it will be difficult to enforce the law against those who refuse to co-operate."

At Fourteenth street and Park road northwest, Edward H. Henry, a mailman, commented that because of his rigid schedule, it would be impossible for him to cross at intersections at all times.

Even in outlying sections, according to Sergt. R. H. Johnson, of the Tenth Police Precinct, Washingtonians are taking to the new rules "better than I thought they would."

Motorists Draw Complaint

Yesterday the recording truck visited nearly a dozen busy intersections. With few exceptions, passersby agreed that the program would be successful "providing we all join to help out."

The most frequent complaint was against motorists who turn right into a line of pedestrians attempting to cross on proper signals.

The Post-WJSV "man in the street" inquiries will continue until the new law becomes effective with fines and penalties March 10.

3,000 Tagless

With the deadline for 1938 automobile license plates only a few hours away, approximately 3,000 District motorists will be unable to operate their cars after midnight tonight, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer predicted yesterday.

More than 5,000 persons stood in line at the Traffic Department yesterday. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen warned there will be no time extension and anyone without 1939 plates will be subject to arrest at one minute after midnight tonight.

Social Security Setup 'Insane,' Sas Dr. Epstein

By the Associated Press.

Dr. Abraham Epstein, executive secretary of the American Association for Social Security, complained to the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday that the present social security system was an "insane" arrangement weighted in favor of persons who have never been social problems.

"Social security can't be gotten," he said, by distributing poverty among the poor. It can be obtained only by everybody reaching into their pockets and helping one another out."

He recommended that the Government match funds with wealthier States so that they might pay pensions of $35, $40 or $45 and grant at least a minimum of $15 for each pensioner to the poorer States, provided the latter retained their present contributions.

Thus in the South, where benefits now are as low as $5 or $6 a month, he said, they would go up to $17, $18 or $19.

Bankhead Denies Part in Week-End Democratic Talks

Speaker of the House William B. Bankhead, when asked about a story appearing in certain newspapers naming him as a participant in an exchange of informal views by conservative Democrats on a program looking to repeal of New Deal laws, yesterday made this statement:

"The statement contained in the article by Arthur Sears Henning today that these gentlemen had conferences and exchanged views informally over the week-end is entirely devoid of any truth as far as I am concerned.

"In my opinion, the so-called conference between these gentlemn is the pure imagination of the author of the article. The author certainly never contacted me and the article with its inferences involving me are utterly baseless and without foundation of fact."

Plea for Dismissal Of McLean Suit Set for Today

Justice Laws today will hear arguments on who should represent Edward B. McLean, former publisher now in a mental institution at Towson, Md., in litigation here over the $10,000,000 estate of his father, John R. McLean.

McLean, through George B. Fraser, asked the District Court to pass on his mental competency, charging that as a District resident he was not within Maryland jurisdiction.

Later Rear Admiral Mark Bristol, trustee for McLean in Maryland and co-trustee in the District, asked the court to throw out McLean's petition.

Fraser yesterday filed his opposition to Bristol's motion. The hearing will be on Bristol's motion.

Admirals Meet Roosevelt at Sea for Parley

Two Flagships Sail For Rendezvous After 'Major' Fleet Battle

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 27.—The cruiser Houston and battleship Pennsylvania, with President Roosevelt and top-ranking naval officers aboard, sailed for a rendezvous in the Caribbean today to talk over results of the most important war games ever held by the fleet in the South Atlantic.

While no word from the Houston, the President's flagship, was received, advices said he planned the rendezvous at Culebra, tiny island 30 miles southeast of Puerto Rico, after witnessing a scheduled "major fleet engagement" ending the maneuvers this morning.

The main bodies of the "black" and "white" fleets were believed to have clashed somewhere north of Puerto Rico.

Houston in Defense Fleet

Prior to this, the Houston had reported, the mimic warfare had involved search problems and raids by planes, destroyers, cruisers and submarines.

Aboard the Houston with the President as she headed for Culebra was Admiral Leahy, chief of naval operations. On the Pennsylvania was Admiral Bloch, commander of the fleet and war game umpire.

Unless the President makes some comment sooner the actual result of the maneuvers may not be known for weeks.

First Game in That Area

The rendezvous was to "discuss the conduct of and lessons from the carrying out of the problem."

The last dispatch from the President's naval aide, Capt. Daniel J. Callaghan, received last night, warned against stressing importance of the "major fleet engagement."

"The work of the two fleets during the last week," he said, "has proved extremely valuable because no similar problem has been undertaken in this part of the ocean in the past."

Congress Wives See for Selves How Government Works

Not content with the inside information they receive, 15 Congressional wives yesterday were on a tour to find out for themselves just how the Government operates.

Led by Mrs. John R. Murdock, wife of the Democratic Representative from Arizona, the group—eight Democrats, seven Republicans—have mapped out an educational program that will occupy them throughout this Congress.

Yesterday they visited the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, the Treasury Department and the United States Public Health Service.

Those in the party, besides Mrs. Murdock, were Democrats, Mrs. Harry R. Sheppard, California; Mrs. Lyle H. Boren, Oklahoma; Mrs. William T. Byrne, New York; Mrs. Herman P. Eberharter, Pennsylvania; Mrs. W. R. Poage, Texas; Mrs. William H. Larrabee, Indiana, and Mrs. Charles H. Leavy, Washington; Republicans, Mrs. Charles A. Plumley, Vermont; Mrs. Lewis F. Rockefeller, New York; Mrs. George W. Gillie, Indiana; Mrs. Clarence E. Hancock, New York; Mrs. Joshua L. Johns, Wisconsin; Mrs. Robert A. Grant, Indiana, and Mrs. Richard J. Welch, California.

That Quarter Minus a Date? It's Good, and So Is New Nickel

There's no use getting excited if you notice the date missing from the next 25-cent piece you handle, or have you heard rumors about the Jefferson "nickel" being a "phony."

You are neither the victim of counterfeiters nor of a miscue by Uncle Sam—and you can take the word of Harry A. Fox, chief of the Treasury's coin room, where doubtful money is investigated.

"Yes, there have been dozens of stories about the 1916-17 quarter"—for such it is, although no date can be seen on the coin—declared Fox. He explained why the date is missing:

"In those two years the coin was minted so that the date was raised, instead of being set in. What with rubbing against other coins, and silver is soft anyway, it only took three or four months for the date to wear off completely."

'And about that Jefferson nickel," Fox continued. "Ever since that radio broadcast from New York saying the new nickel wouldn't fit in telephone slots and that the flag was missing from the 'Capitol,' we've had at least 15 calls a day asking Uncle Sam to recall it."

"Well, you can say for me that he won't. In first place the nickel is the usual size and in the second place it isn't the Capitol that's engraved on the coin, but Monticello, Jefferson's Virginia home."

White House Correspondents Re-elect Officers

All officers of the White House Correspondents Association were re-elected yesterday at a meeting in the White House press room.

The officers are Earl Godwin, Washington Times Herald, president; John C. O'Brien, New York Herald Tribune, vice president; Robert E. Henderson, secretary-treasurer, and the following as members of the executive committee: D. Harold Oliver, Associated Press; William C. Murphy, Philadelphia Inquirer, and Claude A. Mahoney, Wall Street Journal.

The election occurred almost to a day 25 years from the date in 1914 on which the association was formed, with "Bill" Price, original White House reporter, as first president of the association.

Navy Department Restrained From Enforcing 62½-Ct. Wage

3 'Little Steel' Firms Win Right To Bid on Ship Contracts Despite Refusing to Pay Minimum Rate

Three "little steel" firms yesterday won permission to submit bids on two Navy contracts totaling nearly $500,000 without observing minimum wage rates fixed under the Walsh-Healey public contracts act. They agreed to post $25,000 bond as guarantee their employes would not suffer loss of wages.

Permission to submit the bids was granted by Justice Bailey in District Court with an order temporarily restrtaining Secretary of the Navy Swanson from enforcing a minimum wage of 62½ cents an hour for workers employed on the contracts.

This wage was fixed by Secretary of Labor Perkins and her aides in January, as the prevailing Minimum in 18 Eastern States. The three firms, with four others, filed suit in District Court Saturday for a permanent injunction to prevent the Secretary of Labor, and heads of Government departments, from enforcing the 62½-cent minimum, which is scheduled to take effect tomorrow. Justice Bailey said the temporary order would be effective until next Monday, when a hearing on the injunction plea will be held.

The order applies to the Lukens Steel Co., of Coatesville, Pa., the Alan Wood Steel Co., of Conshohocken, Pa., and the Central Iron & Steel Co., of Harrisburg, Pa., the only litigants of the seven firms who want to bid on the contracts. Attorneys said the contracts represented more than 7,500 tons of steel plates for the cruiser Alabama, for which bids are to be received this week.

Representative Francis E. Walter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, filed a brief supporting the plea of the steel companies. Walter, who helped draw up the Walsh-Healy act, told the court the "only way to prevent destruction of the act is through issuing the restraining order." He said the wage determination of Secretary Perkins would lead to a monopoly in the steel industry.

Assistant District Attorney Underwood, who with Gerard D. Reilly, Labor Department solicitor, represented the Government, told Justice Bailey the steel firms were not in a position to sue for an injunction because they were only prospective bidders for the contracts.

2 Killed, 22 Hurt In Georgia Storms

New Orleans, Feb. 27 (AP).—Storms killed 2 and injured 22 over the week-end in southern Georgia, and a freak squall of hail, lightning, rain and wind caused damage estimated at $100,000 here.

A colored minister was killed and four other colored men injured in a windstorm at Bluffton, Ga., late Saturday, and near Cordele, Ga., Lester Mander, 23-year-old carpenter, was electrocuted when a power line was blown down.

Embassy Staff Rejoins Bowers

St. Jean-de-Luz, France, Feb. 27 (AP).—Ambassador Claude G. Bowers was reunited today with his embassy staff and said it would remain until the United States decided whether to recognize the Franco government.

Bowers has lived here throughout the war while the staff has moved successively from Madrid to Valencia, Barcelona and finally Perpignan, France.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

"Darling Daughter" Is Made Safe for the Screen

Film Alters Stage Play Only Slightly; Lunt and Fontanne to Return to the National; This, That and the Other About the Theater

BELL

THE WARNER BROTHERS have contrived an accurate and yet eminently discreet translation of the original stage play of "Yes, My Darling Daughter" in their picturization of Mark Reed's unconventional comedy that ran so long on Broadway and then toured the country with high success. It will open on the screen at the Earle Theater on Friday.

This department always has held that there are questionable implications in the basic idea of "Yes, My Darling Daughter," but they have been so skillfully transmuted into sound sense in Mr. Reed's play that any sinister influence they might exert could apply only to those who would be natural inspirations for the oft-quoted "Honi soit qui mal y pense."

The picture, like the play, has been deftly wrought and is acted with fine skill and an ebullient sense of comedy by Priscilla Lane and Jeffrey Lynn, as the young people intent on a pre-nuptial week-end, sans interference or chaperon; Fay Bainter, as the mother; May Robson, as the grandmother; Roland Young, Genevieve Tobin, Ian Hunter and a considerable list of others.

"Yes, My Darling Daughter" on the screen, just as it did on the stage, will supply an enlivening hour or so of comparatively innocuous entertainment. The complete innocence of the camera version of the story is made conclusively clear by the introduction of scenes on the screen that were not present in the stage play—thus effectually nullifying any pernicious inclinations of unruly imaginations.

It will be recalled that when Priscilla Lane visited Washington briefly months ago—after the exciting premiere of "Brother Rat," under the auspices of the Virginia Military Institute, at Lexington, Va.—she expresed vast enthusiasm over the prospect of hastening back to Hollywood to make "Yes, My Daring Daughter." She perceived in it an opportunity to expand the reputation that had come to her so suddenly after her excellent performance in "Four Daughters." All, or at least most, of her expectations seem to have been fulfilled.

But the most important service that the celluloid rendition of "Yes, My Darling Daughter" may have rendered is to emphasize again the complete incongruity of the present set-up of State censorship boards. No two operate under identical rules, they all work at cross purposes, deletions in one State are restored in the next and so it goes. The net result is a constant emasculation of motion picture prints, a complete chaos, insofar as co-ordinated effort is concerned, and an altogether intolerable situation.

It has always been the contention of this column that if there must be censorship, it should be centralized in a single authority and applied at the source of the screen product — Hollywood. Since the adoption of the production code, under which the industry has operated for several years now, with Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., as executive officer, this has been done efficently and effectively. Even the organizations whose agitation brought about the establishment of the code have admitted freely and enthusiastically that its application has been conspicuously successful.

So what remains for the State censorship boards, beyond such contradictory procedures as recently indulged in by the New York State censors when they first banned "Yes, My Darling Daughter" and then restored it to good standing? There is a condition here that is incompatible with common sense.

The time would seem to have arrived to abolish all State censorship boards and invest complete responsibility for the good behavior of the "movies" in the code administration with the common law as recourse in case of offenses against the public weal.

When your correspondent discussed the matter backstage with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, during their comparatively recent engagement in Chekhov's "The Sea Gull," both expressed eagerness to play a return spring engagement at the National Theater in a repertoire of their earlier successes. That promising augury of a possible "extra dividend" in the theater seems to have come true. While the repertory casually mentioned in our conversation has shrunk to two plays, it still will come as a thrill to local theatergoers to know that Mr. Lunt and Miss Fontanne will return to the National to present "The Taming of the Shrew"—in which they never have been seen in the National Capital—and Robert E. Sherwood's tremendously effective play of "Reunion in Vienna," which had its premiere here several seasons ago and has not been seen here since. This will be a subscription booking under the auspices of the Theater Guild and the American Theater Society of Washington.

A real record is being written into the books by "Ballerina," at the Little Theater. It will be continued for a fifth consecutive week to phenomenal business, unless the bottom drops out of the evidence supplied by the past four weeks.

This places "Ballerina" well in the van of the former record-holders—"Peter the First," "Storm in a Teacup" and "The Informer," all of which enjoyed runs of three continuous weeks. It also places the film of the Paris Opera within striking distance of the all-time record of the house, achieved by "Potemkin," in the "old Little Theater," back in 1928, when that grim Russian film ran up a total of six consecutive weeks to huge patronage. Huge, that is, within the proportions of the Little, which was named that because it is.

For the drama desks this may be a week of spring screening, but for the public it seems to be more or less a week of "Hollywood premieres." Tomorrow night, at Loew's Palace, Washington finally will be given opportunity to discover just how "down to earth" the glorified and pedestaled George Bernard Shaw really is. His "Pygmalion," with Leslie Howard and Wendy Hiller costarred, will have its reserved seat premiere and should dispel any notion that Shaw is a congenital highbrow. Thursday night, at RKO-Keith's, the flags will be unfurled for the world premiere of "Spirit of Culver," costarring Jackie Cooper and Freddie Bartholomew. Nice going for those credo is, "first night or nothing."

The 'Darling Daughter' and a Stage Star

AMONG STARS OF FRIDAY'S NEW BILLS

Above, Jeffrey Lynn and Priscilla Lane in the Warner Brothers' picturization of "Yes, My Darling Daughter," opening on the screen at the Earle Theater on Friday. This is the picture recently in controversy in New York State, where the Board of Censors first banned it and then recanted. The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

RKO HAS submitted an offer of $250,000 for the movie rights to Kaufman & Hart's "The American Way," and the offer has been accepted—verbally. The contracts now are being drawn . . . Marion Talley's court battle for the custody of her daughter surprised her family. The singer's friends insist that even Miss Talley's closest relatives never were aware of the fact that she had a child . . . Mary Lewis, the opera star, will return to the front pages again next month.

GOODMAN ACE of the Easy Aces played bridge at the Friars Club with Bill Brendel, head of the Friars . . . Brendel, who was Ace's partner, bid 5 diamonds, but the opposition took the hand by bidding 5 spades . . . After the game, Ace protested to his partner: "Why did you bid 5 diamonds on those bad cards you held?" . . . "It wouldn't have been so bad if I got the bid," Brendel assured. "All I'd have lost would be two spades, two hearts" . . . "And," Ace added, "one friend."

WARDEN LAWES has been offered a contract by Columbia Pictures to appear in the prologue and epilogue of a series of anti-crime movie shorts . . . Howard Dietz, the playwright-songwriter, is now at work writing a new tune. It will be called "Adolf Hitler Jones."

THE EMERSON Engineers of the RCA Building recently sent a form-letter to a New York company, advertising its special services for large concerns . . . "Are you getting the most out of your men?" was the gist of the business invitation. "Are you interested in speeding up production, etc., etc.?" . . . This letter was sent, inadvertently to a gentleman whose speed-up system for labor practically was responsible for the cancellation of the American visit of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor . . . It was sent to Charles Bedeaux.

CONTRARY to all reports, the International Casino is still waiting for a bidder . . . The Cardinal Hayes Memorial Appeal for Catholic Charities started its campaign this week—a good cause . . . By all means read Edna Ferber's "A Peculiar Treasure" . . . And for exciting reading: Ted Allan's "This Time a Better Earth" . . . Jimmy Durante had to decline an invitation to entertain at Sing-Sing, because "it would break my heart, so many of the boys there know me" . . . A. F. R. A. is having difficulty signing the cast of "Information Please," who insist they're not actors.

"I MARRIED an Angel" will start its road tour next week . . . Vera Zorina, star of that show, is under contract to Sam Goldwyn. But the musical was backed by M.-G.-M. . . . Mr. Goldwyn has no particular liking for M.-G.-M., and has confided that he'd give a million dollars if he could arrange the withdrawal of his name from "Metro, Goldwyn, Mayer" . . . M.-G.-M. is anxious to screen "I'd Marry an Angel," but Goldwyn won't allow them to use Zorina. Sam also wants to make a movie adaptation, but M.-G.-M. won't assign the screen rights to him . . . And even if they would, or if Goldwyn would lend Zorina to M.-G.-M. for that movie, the Hays office would censor it—because of its Angel-loses-wings theme.

AMBASSADOR KENNEDY, who has one son in Madrid and three children in St. Moritz, still has difficulty in assembling his family. Jack Kennedy, who just quit Harvard to become a member of the embassy staff, sailed last week—but will go straight to Paris . . . The sex report of the Citizens Com. on the Control of Crime now is being prepared. The most important parts will be deleted before publication . . . When Alec Woollcott dined with the President a few days ago the President greeted: "Hello, Alec. What d'you know?" Roosevelt then told him that he still is willing to listen to any good suggestions for improving conditions in this country.

ARTHUR GARFIELD Hays took Liam O'Flaherty's movie, "The Puritan"—which has been banned by the N. Y. State Board of Censors—to New York University and showed it to the students. "How many of you," asked Hays, "have been corrupted by seeing this movie and feel that it shouldn't be shown?" Not one hand was raised . . . J. Edgar Hoover's film, "Persons in Hiding," was previewed here and brought loud cheers . . . Tommy Manville purchased a sedan and then took it to the company's service station because it rattled. When the impatient Tommy was asked to wait he told them: "I'm going to sell it for one dollar to the first man I see" . . . And he did.

GEORGE KATZ, whose 4-year-old son, Michael, was kidnaped last week—and then released upon the payment of $250 ransom—will have an opportunity to get back the $250 . . . That sum has been offered him by the sponsors of the "We, the People" program—on which the father of the kidnaped Peter Levine once broadcast . . . Negotiations now are being made for Katz and his son to broadcast. The parent's message will be: "The only way to handle kidnapers is to pay the ransom, get the child back—and then rush to the police."

Stage Writers Copying Films, Author Claims

The charge that screen playwrights ape the dramaturgy of the theater has become "outlawed" by time and events.

It was true once, but the facts are now reversed—the stage copies the screen.

This offensive defense of his craft, likely to bring the burn to the faces of dramatists, comes from Bartlett Cormack, one of Hollywood's highest paid scenarists, who was sent for from London by Mayflower Pictures Corporation to do the script of the Charles Laughton film, "The Beachcomber."

"Screen playwriting now has developed a technique of its own," Cormack points out. "Stage playwriting will no longer do on the screen.

"But I notice that the stage playwrights have learned something from us. Before motion pictures, they had begun to sink back into or very near the old Greek form, which allows little change of scenery. Now they're using the greater scope of the panoramic form, used by the Elizabethans and revived by the movies."

For example, Cormack points to such plays as "Grand Hotel" and "Victoria Regina," which consist of long processions of related scenes, as in motion pictures.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

LOUELLA PARSONS

Hollywood, Feb. 27.—The ladies prefer whom do you think? That meanie and bad man of the screen, Humphrey Bogart. He has played few romantic leads since he left the stage for movies, but the infallible test, the fan mail, shows such an interest in Bogart, that Hal Wallis has decided to put him in "The Old Maid." You'll see him as Clem Spender, a youth who never robbed a bank, organized a gang or did anything outside the law.

Humphrey, the choice of many readers of this column for the Dillinger role, will have those two fine actresses, Bette Davis and Miriam Hopkins for his two loves in "The Old Maid." While naturally the fat roles belong to the ladies, it will be extremely interesting to see Humphrey as a decent citizen for a change.

Those of us who met stalwart, bearded Peter Freuchen when he was in Hollywood working on his story "Eskimo," for M-G-M will never forget him. A fascinating character! He was one of the most brilliant and interesting authors ever to come to Hollywood. Now again he is doing a Hollywood job and this time for Columbia. Commissioned by cable from Harry Cohn, Freuchen has left his native Denmark to travel to Sweden and write a screen play on the great humanitarian, Nobel. He will call it simply "Nobel." After he confers with officials of the Nobel Foundation, he journeys to Hollywood with his scenario, but not before he represents Denmark at the World's Fair.

No blame can truthfully be attached to Hedy Namarr for the shelving of her picture "I Take This Woman." The reason back of the whole thing is that Hedy, advertised as the most glamorous figure in motion pictures, was cast in the picture as a woman men leave behind. What Metro needs is a story patterned after the good old ones that Gloria Swanson and Pola Negri made in their heydays—and Garbo made in the silents—romances of the garden variety, emphasizing Hedy's glamour and permitting her admirers to be just that—men who fall at her feet. Leave the subtleties to the other actresses but keep Hedy what she is—a glamour girl.

Chater in Hollywood: The almost former Mrs. Clark Gable, who is in Las Vegas awaiting her divorce, may marry as soon as her former husband. Hal Strotz, the former Mrs. Jay Gould's widower, flew to Las Vegas to spend the week-end as Mrs. Gable's guest. He telephones her every day and, according to her close friends, is devoted to Ria. Her divorce becomes final on March 6, and while there is no official word she will become Mrs. Strotz, things look serious between her and her admirer.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Is the June Lang-Carl Laemmle, jr., romance on again? They were at a night spot two nights running and acting so happy; Betty Grable (Mrs. Jackie Coogan) and Ken Murray doing the night spots; another suprising twosome, Helen Twelvetrees and her ex, Jack Woody; Paul Warburg and his very pretty bride the honor guests at Milton Bren's Saturday night; Constance Bennett, out of bed after a streptococci sore throat, attended the dinner which was one of the season's nicest parties. Connie and Countess Dorothy Di Frasso have buried the hatchet and were both commiserating with each other over their current illnesses; Lady Bailey trained in from Palm Beach just in time for the party; Madeleine Carroll has rented Bebe Daniels' beach house and is completely remodeling and redecorating it; Phyllis Brooks showing up at the Brens with Cary Grant wearing a new hair-do, bangs and a long bob; Ty Power and Annabella motoring to Palm Springs for lunch and back the same day; Billy Wilkerson gave the reporters extra work when it was learned he and Estelle Brown had planed to Las Vegas. It wasn't an elopement, however.

Walter Wanger reaching home just in time to celebrate Joan Bennett's birthday today; Brian Donlevy, accidentally stabbed in a scene for "Beau Geste," reported not so well in the Yuma hospital today; Alex D'Arcy, local heart-breaker, beauing Marjorie Reed to the Versailles; Lupe Velez reached town today and moved into the Beverly-Wilshire. Meanwhile, Johnny Weissmuller, accompanied by his fiancee, Beryl Scott, is training to Florida. They will be wed in New York within the month; Richard Dix, with two broken bones in his hand, has to forget them and do trick riding in his role of Sam Houston; Bette Davis partied 12 relatives and close friends at Grace Hayes' lodge last eve. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 27.—Reflections of an actress-columnist after the academy dinner.

I've been to practically all of them, but this was the best yet. The Awards ("Rewards" Joe Schenck insisted upon calling them) met with the approval of everyone there. It was an evening for the workers. The youth of our industry took over and did a magnificent job. Not since I entered motion pictures was I as proud of my profession.

HEDDA HOPPER

What a cheer went up when Spencer Tracy said, "This must have been meant for Father Flanagan. I do not deserve it, but will accept it for him."

Little did the Boy's Town savior, Father Flanagan, think when he first came out to talk about his life's work with John Considine that there would be a gold statue sitting on his desk, given for an acting performance by Spencer Tracy. That gesture on Tracy's part will win more friends for Boy's Town than any single contribution.

Bette Davis called on Willie Wyler, her director, and said, "He is responsible for my standing here and getting this award." Bette was a fashion plate and if she's not careful, will be called our best-dressed woman. And how she'll hate it.

No grown-up could have been so unself-conscious as Shirley Temple when she presented the big and little statues to Walt Disney for "Snow White and The Seven Dwarfs." That was a combination which will be long remembered: our "Little Princess" and Snow White's creator. And Disney meant it when he said, "I'm really flabbergasted." He was. Also when he got the other award for Ferdie, the Bull.

A note of sadness crept in when Fred Niblo made a little speech. Because he's no longer working in pictures. Don't ask me why—just another one of Hollywood's little mysteries.

I liked Sam Goldwyn's speech, "Thank you for Mr. Moulton," when he took the award for that gentleman who was unable to be there.

Lloyd Douglas made a funny remark—"I never thought I'd live to see the day when I'd be giving anything to a British consul for George Bernard Shaw," he said. He had nothing on us—neither did we.

Jimmy Roosevelt, of the famous smiling family, brought the house down when he said, "I can't tell which of you are Republicans and which Democrats." After which Frank Capra quipped, "We'll collect the campaign funds later, Jimmy." Capra spoke of the dove of peace hovering over Hollywood, and, of course, referred to the recent battle between directors and producers when he said, "There are a few scarecrows flapping empty wings."

There was a wistful note in Harry Cohn's voice when he accepted the Award for the best picture, "You Can't Take It With You." Then he looked at Capra and said, "Too bad—you can't keep it with you."

Bob Hope got the biggest laugh when he quipped, "Things like "Marie Antoinette" don't bother me. Because 'B's' never worry." Right then and there his boss, Y. Frank Freeman, new head of Paramount, decided to give him an "A" picture. And it was fun watching the various studio workers applaud their alma maters.

Melija Korjus started things off with "The Star-Spangled Banner" which she sang beautifully—under the greatest handicap—without orchestra or proper sound equipment. She's one of the greatest potential stars we've had in a long time.

Devine's Baby to Be Culver Cadet

On record as the youngest boy in history to make application for entrance as a cadet at Culver Military Academy is Denny Devine, new born son of Andy Devine, gravel-throated movie comedian.

The unusual application was made on the school's official entry form, and was signed by the actor in the presence of Brigadier-General L. R. Gignilliat, distinguished superintendent of the Academy. Witnesses included Jackie Cooper, Freddie Bartholomew and a score more of players working with Devine on Universal's "Spirit of Culver" set.

"You told me that if the baby was a boy, he would go to Culver," said the gray-haired General as he shook the comedian's hand. "You can't start him off any sooner."

"Well," chuckled the proud father "at least he won't have to worry about where he's going to school."

The boy will begin his studies at Culver in 1950.

Three Local Bills

On the first "District Day" of the current session, which was yesterday, the House passed three pieces of legislation for the District of Columbia in just under a quarter of an hour.

This was quick work, in itself illustrating the folly of having legislation of this relatively trivial character go before Congress at all. But it is perhaps worthwhile, since talk of economy is always in order, to recall that one-quarter of an hour of the time of 435 Congressmen at $10,000 per year runs into money. Moreover, two of the bills passed yesterday have already been before the Senate while the other one will have to go there. At least one of the measures must also go through conference procedure and all of them will eventually require executive approval.

It is further worth noticing that one of the bills will name the new bridge across the Anacostia River. Another will give the District Commissioners authority to fix the time for turning on and off the lights on Washington streets, while the third will restore to the police force two men who were dismissed from it some years ago.

When measures of this character require the attention of the legislative and executive branches of the Federal Government it is time for the country, as well as Washington, to realize that the Griffenhagen report is an important issue.

Completely Decided

The opinion handed down by the Supreme Court yesterday, declaring the sit-down strike a "high-handed proceeding without shadow of legal right," comes at a time when the issue involved has become largely academic. The sit-down strike as an instrument of industrial warfare has already been wholly repudiated by public opinion and disowned by at least a dominant part of labor itself.

Nonetheless, neither the legal importance nor the social utility of the Supreme Court's stand in this matter can be minimized. As long as there remained any room for discussion regarding the illegality of the sit-down strike, there was always the temptation for irresponsible elements in labor ranks to advocate this dangerous practice.

That temptation is now ruled out. The Supreme Court's decision makes the recurrence of this type of industrial disorder most unlikely. Local authorities are now under notice that sit-down strikes constitute an intolerable infraction of the law and, therefore, must be treated as such. To have this issue so clearly and completely decided is healthy for the body politic and for labor.

Ambassador Saito

The death in Washington of Hirosi Saito, former Japanese Ambassador to the United States, robs Japan of one of her ablest diplomats and the American Nation and people of a sincere and understanding friend.

Mr. Saito knew the United States as do relatively few foreigners. During his long years of residence here he developed a deep admiration for American ways, habits of thought and institutions. And the undisguised affection he entertained for Americans was wholly reciprocated. There have been few foreign envoys more genuinely popular here than Ambassador Saito, none who had more real friends.

It was particularly tragic, therefore, that the last years of his ambassadorship were clouded by increasing friction between Japan and the United States, a development that may well have hastened his untimely death. With American opinion intensely critical of Japan's course in China, Ambassador Saito demonstrated that his tact was as keen as his intelligence. His conduct during those latter days of his ambassadorship was exemplary and won him further admiration from those already charmed by his frank and open habits of speech, his keen sense of humor and his camaraderie.

He will be widely missed, in Washington and throughout the entire United States.

"With Charity For All"

For over 31 months the Spanish civil war has kept civilization on the brink of the abyss. More than any other conflict of modern times, the World War not excepted, it has aroused bitterness and divided communities far removed from the actual fighting. Protagonists of either side have painted partisans of the other in the blackest shades. The actual physical destruction, ghastly though it has been, is perhaps less damaging than the sum total of hatred and passion which has been developed.

Now that this war is all but over every intelligent person, regardless of his sympathies, will breathe a sigh of relief. One of the most dangerous threats to European peace, and to the peace of the United States, is at an end. A deep-rooted disturbance which might easily have engulfed a score of nations, at almost any time since July 18, 1936, is being liquidated. There is no better testimonial to the virility of Europe's intense will for peace than the successful restriction of the fighting to Spain. That must be credited, no matter what is written on the other side of the ledger.

Men of good will everywhere will now be anxious to let bygones be bygones. And Americans in particular will at this moment recall Lincoln's timeless admonition in his second inaugural address. They will hope that Franco will also now proceed "with malice toward none; with charity for all." They will hope that Franco, too, will now "do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves, and with all nations."

It is partly in that hope, and partly because of the inescapable realities of the situation, that the British and French governments are extending recognition to Gen. Franco on the heels of President Azana's voluntary abandonment of his office. Probably it will be only a matter of time before the United States follows suit. For better or worse the republican government is falling to pieces and the sooner the fact of Nationalist dominance in Spain is accepted the quicker that unhappy country will be able to concentrate on the enormous task of reconstruction.

There will be many who will argue that haste in recognizing Franco is unseemly; that he has triumphed because of foreign assistance and that proof of his ability to govern the country is still lacking. All this is true, yet the factors urging a definitive settlement in Spain remain overwhelming. The democracies cannot save the Spanish republic by withholding recognition from Franco. That would merely insure that his government, as his army in the past, will have to depend on German and Italian aid. Such an outcome is not in the interest of Spain nor of the democracies. When Great Britain and France agreed on nonintervention they really decided to recognize Franco promptly if he should win. The logic of their policy demands the action now taken.

Nothing is now to be gained by reviewing the ghastly record of butchery which has given the Spanish civil war an aspect of horror unparalleled in modern times. The memory of the priests, the nuns and the religious murdered by left-wing republicans, like that of the women and children blown to pieces by Nationalist bombs, deserves better than to be exploited for propaganda purposes. On either side they are the martyrs to a breakdown of civilization. There is honor for the fallen in both camps and what now should be emphasized is the bravery, the loyalty, the self-sacrificing determination with which the Spanish people, of both factions, have endured the terrible ordeal inflicted on them.

Historians must decide—and their task will not be easy—whether the popular front government seized power illegally in 1936, and was then overthrown by a righteous rising; or whether an alliance of reactionary groups in 1936 attacked and has now destroyed a promising Spanish democracy. The actual truth is probably somewhere between the two viewpoints. But determination of that controversial issue is at the moment a secondary matter. The vital task today is to get Spain on her feet again. Recriminations injurious to that end are to be deplored.

It does appear, however, that again the so-called "popular front" technique has brought disaster on those who accepted it. In Spain, as everywhere else, the attempted co-operation between communism and democracy has only served to stimulate fascism and to destroy that which it was sought to save. On considering the factors behind Franco's victory there remains no doubt that whole-souled antagonism to the atheistic and ruthless materialism of communism was one of the most potent.

Unfortunately the strength of that reaction has blinded the eyes of many to the equally vicious character of some of the support accorded Franco, and cheerfully accepted by him. In destroying the "red" government he has made himself appear a tool of pagan forces which are more menacing because more efficient, more powerful and more insidious than Russian communism will ever be. Gen. Franco is in the invidious position of one who has fought sin by allying himself with evil. He still has to demonstrate that the end has justified the means.

The System At Issue

In several instances during recent months the integrity of judges on the bench has been called into question. Senior Judge Martin T. Manton of the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals resigned a month ago, after being accused of receiving more than $400,000 from individuals or concerns acting for litigants before his court. The Hines case in New York has once more cast reflections upon the manner in which justice is dispensed in that city.

Wherever suspicion is aroused by the activities of any individual judge the public interest demands full and complete investigation. Mayor LaGuardia is simply doing his duty when he asks that formal charges be prepared against Magistrate Hulon Capshaw as the result of testimony in the Hines trial alleging that this New York magistrate was influenced by Hines in the dismissal of charges against numbers racket employes. It is obviously essential to clear up cases of this sort in order to preserve public confidence in the judicial system as a whole.

The larger issue, however, is not housecleaning in individual courts after suspicions of misconduct have been aroused. That is an entirely negative approach to a problem which demands constructive handling. It is not enough to take remedial action in cases where the quality of justice is called in question. If full confidence in our judicial system is to be maintained, practices which permit men of weak character or injudicial temperament to ascend the bench must be wiped out.

So long as judgeships are in any degree considered legitimate rewards for political service the judicial system will remain under strain. When a judge wins his place through political influence, it will always be difficult for him to maintain rigid independence if the same political influence seeks to fix cases before his court. Considering the political nature of many appointments to the bench, it is encouraging that biased or influenced judgment is not more common.

Washington has a special interest in the problem because of the recent demonstration, in the Warring case, of the effective work that can be done when judges are well chosen, and because of the prospective appointment of two more judges to District courts. The time to forestall inefficiency or misconduct on the bench is in the original selection of jurists. No other procedure can be half so effective as the restriction of judicial posts to well-qualified lawyers, irrespective of political affiliations.

If the Hines case shocks officials into a clearer understanding of their duty to break the vicious axis between crime and politics on the one hand and politics and the judiciary on the other, that may be its most significant consequence.

Democratizing Politics

There is no connection between the Griffenhagen reorganization plan for the District Government and the move to democratize political party machinery here. But the progress of reorganization efforts appears to have rekindled interest in the election of District national committeemen and delegates to the national political conventions.

Senator Capper has introduced a bill setting up a board of elections to supervise the balloting for party offices in this voteless community. Obviously the measure has nothing to do with local suffrage or national representation for the District in Congress. It would simply permit the rank and file of Democrats and Republicans here to choose their own leaders and representatives in party matters instead of having those functionaries hand-picked by political bosses.

Such a patently desirable piece of legislation should raise no question in Congress as to its general principles. All bills require careful checking to determine whether they are so drafted as to carry out their purpose effectively and whether loopholes for possible abuses have been left. When Congress has scrutinized the Capper bill from these viewpoints, its enactment will probably meet with the approval of every one, except the politicians who would thus be deprived of power held without consent of their fellow party members.

It was necessary to tear part of a chimney down in Vincennes, Ind., to rescue a 4-year-old boy who tried to descend it. It is hoped this thing of trying to play Santa Claus doesn't get to be a national obsession.

When a friend told him a joke, an Indianapolis man laughed so heartily he broke two ribs, punctured a lung and almost died. Our friends don't tell us jokes like that, thank goodness.

According to a statistician, the per capita share of the national debt is now about $320. Will someone tell us how an individual can go about repudiating this debt?

"If——"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Harry Hopkins says "this Administration is now determined to promote recovery with all the vigor and power at its command." Mark Sullivan says there are impediments to real recovery which cannot be exorcised by words, but can be removed only by action.

In the same issue of The Post an unknown economist who signs "Tombrick," facetiously suggests "Prosperity by Bookkeeping" as a means of increasing consumption.

If ballyhoo and bunk were sufficient to promote recovery the depression would have been ended ten years ago when Hoover declared prosperity was just around the corner. If bond issues and debt inflation would promote recovery prosperity would have turned the corner before our national debt was trebled.

Although productive enterprise is raring to go, ready, willing and anxious to supply the accumulated demand, after ten years of scarcity, my opinion is that the discredited financial policy of uncontrolled debt inflation must be superseded by the more intelligent policy of controlled currency expansion, before permanent prosperity is possible.

If increasing our per capita circulation medium by issuing currency (instead of more bonds, fountain-pen money or debt inflation) from $50.46 to not exceeding $100 per capita, will end unemployment, double the national income, balance the budget, salvage the railroads, solve the agricultural problems, avoid repudiation, prevent capitalism from committing suicide, save the economic royalists from having their heads chopped off, and restore permanent prosperity, who should complain? Ungarnished Diplomacy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For some time now our Government has been engaged in the periodic dispatch of diplomatic notes to the several dictator nations. The wording of these messages has been admirable and most assuredly the best brains of the State Department have devoted many hours to their smooth construction. They have sought to convey, upon occasion, the protests of this country against the good old Fascist stand-bys of persecution and murder, some of which have been lavished upon our own citizens (remember the Panay?). Results—nil.

Another "note," in several instalments, is now being written, addressed to dictators in general—this time, however, by some Congressmen who, no doubt, are not skilled in the art of diplomatic writing. At any rate, it seems that they are dispensing with the usual fine "dress suit" clauses and are preparing this new note in a sort of cypher—the symbols used being principally figures and dollar marks with mere code references, here and there, to "national defense," "battleships," "airplanes," "naval bases," etc.

Yes, I fear such crude and cryptic phrasing will give pain to our diplomats, trained as they are in the niceties of international communication, but, dear me, it certainly possesses a great potentiality for causing chills to run up and down the spines of several well-known tyrants of Europe and Asia.

Without question our diplomatic note writing is being transferred from the State Department to Congress. Can those boys on the Hill, using only the ungarnished language of an appropriation bill, make themselves thoroughly understood by the three black widows now weaving their sticky webs at Berlin, Rome and Tokyo? I'll say they can. ROGER GISH McDARE.

Did Mr. Lane See George Washington?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Relative to the article in The Post of February 23 on whether John Lane, interviewed by William Atherton DuPuy, ever saw George Washington in the flesh, I think I can shed some light on the matter, as I well remember the newspaper story on the interview.

Mr. Lane did see George Washington, and Joseph Reed is also right about the coffin not being opened. Mr. Lane said that the leaden coffin had a pane of thick glass set into the lid over Washington's face, and that the coffin was filled with alcohol. The glass plate was covered with dust and was discovered when the committee which attended the removal of the coffin cleaned off the lid in looking for inscriptions.

Mr. Lane said that Washington's head could be plainly seen, in an excellent state of preservation, with the exception of the hair, and one spot on the cheekbone, which had protruded above the surface of the alcohol.

Mr. Lane was a young boy at the time and accompanied one of the committees of Congress and other officials who were designated to attend the ceremonies of the final interment of Gen. Washington.

F. S. WILSON.

Chevy Chase, Md., Feb. 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Referring to the article appearing on the front page of The Post of February 23, headed "Story of Ghouls' Raid on Tomb of Washington Recalled Here," the following variant quotations are from a book printed in 1840 entitled, "Tomb of Washington at Mount Vernon," the dedication of the book being by William Strickland and Henry Clay:

". . . The coffin containing the remains of Washington was between the coffins of Mrs. Washington and Judge Washington in the extreme back part of the vault, which had not been opened during the last seven years . . . the case being much decayed was stripped off and the lead of the lid was discovered to have sunk very considerably from head to foot; so much so, as to form a curved line of four to five inches in its whole length. This settlement of the metal had perhaps caused the soldering of the joints to give way about the upper or widest part of the coffin.

"At the request of Maj. Lewis this fractured part was turned over on the lower part of the lid, exposing to view a head and breast of large dimensions. A hand was laid upon the head and instantly removed; the lead of the lid was restored to its coffin, and the ponderous cover being put on and set in cement, it was sealed from our sight on Saturday, the 7th day of October, 1837. In the presence of Maj. Lawrence Lewis, his son, Lorenzo Lewis, John Augustin Washington, George Washington, the Rev. Mr. Johnson and lady, Miss Jane Washington, John Struthers, William Strickland and Mr. Hill, who then retired to the mansion . . ." W. H. GARDNER.

Holland And The Nazis

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Before "History" banishes anyone from Chevy Chase, D. C., to St. Helena he should perhaps look into the facts and learn a wee bit about the history of Europe. The Post article of last Sunday, "Is Holland Next?" told no more than the simple truth, however painful it may be to Nazis to have the truth revealed so early.

Holland is undoubtedly in danger of ultimate Nazi attack, and well does that brave little country know it. For centuries powerful neighbors have looked upon the Netherlands as a very desirable prize, and not less than three times have major conquests been attempted: by Spain, France and England. In the past these were all successfully resisted, but never has little Holland faced such a cold-blooded and implacable pair of enemies as she now faces in Germany and Japan.

The Nazi press is continually threatening Holland, not even hesitating to attack Queen Wilhelmina. There are many reasons for this, all typically Nazi. The mouth of the "German" Rhine lies in Holland, and consequently much German shipping from the Ruhr district has to go through the Netherlands port of Rotterdam before reaching the outside world or even other parts of Germany. The Nazis consider this intolerable, although most Germans don't mind it. Again Holland is a small country owning valuable colonies, some still unexploited; while powerful Germany owns none at all. This also causes much heartburning in Berlin. The Nazis say such a situation is "so unnecessary."

But most important of all is the fact that Hitler has decided that the Netherlanders are really Germans; he includes them in his scheme for making up that bloc of 200,000,000 Germanic peoples in Central Europe. With the help of the Japanese navy he intends to return the Hollanders to their "natural kinfolk" and teach them how to make proper use of colonies. When "History" referred to "gangs of robbers and blackmailers" he was putting things mildly. As Dr. Goebbels says, "what is right and just is merely a matter of what is advantageous to the Third Reich."

On Educating Motorists

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The work of the traffic department to educate Washington pedestrians and motorists in our new regulations is a rather amusing spectacle.

It is such a simple requirement for the pedestrian to wait for the light and for the motorist to give the pedestrian an opportunity to cross in safety. What the traffic department is really trying to do is to overcome the typical American's senseless hurry and haste and, too often, downright discourtesy.

Last September I stood at a street crossing opposite Westminster Abbey. I was gazing with approving eye upon the impressive statue of Abraham Lincoln and had not thought of crossing the street until I realized that a great number of motorists had stopped at the crossing (there was no signal) waiting for me to cross the street. Not a horn was sounded, not a word was said. I crossed the street; the traffic moved on.

I can't help wondering how long it took London's bobbies to educate the motorist to demonstrate so much courtesy.

EUGENE E. GRIFFITH.

The Post Impressionist

The Main Stem

I WAS WALKING along an ancient brick sidewalk in a section of the city where the best people are not seen. Sleet was falling, the undulations of the bricks harbored numerous puddles and a nasty wind was blowing from the north. The glare of lights in a burlesque house across the way disclosed photographs of the players in enticing postures, long draped furpieces and high-heeled slippers. Sometimes there was a picture hat as well, and that was about all. The reflected brightness flooded a slushy, narrow street and a stray beam gave me an outline of him in a doorway as I passed.

There he stood, peering out into the night and in a wink, with a sort of side-shuffle, he was at my shoulder. I hastened, but a voice followed, and I had to turn despite myself. It was a dilapidated figure struggling on a cane, and a voice of faint heart, but the words were all-familiar:

"Mister, can you let me have a dime?"

Now, I remember my dear grandmother, rest her soul, who always said these beggars were loafers, men who would rather plead their way upon the susceptibilities of such as me and get an easy living. Mostly, they were rich and had stored thousands in bank, whereas you and I have nothing for our years of labor. Shouldn't encourage such low persons.

But, I am a pushover for panhandlers and I make the confession before proceeding. That man to whom I turned was fast approaching, was taking up speech.

"Thanks for hearing me, mister. Most of 'em keep going. Now, I'll tell you I'm trying to collect two bits for a ball (a shot of rye with a beer chaser). I like to tell the truth. I'm cold and I need a drink. Now, lots of fellows say they want some coffee, or they want a meal, but I'd rather come out with it. I have a nickel; if I get four more, I'll have two bits and then I'll have a ball."

He was a skinny man and his face was blue with cold. Highlights glanced from its taut structure and a drop of water glistened at the tip of a Panurgean nose. If the limp that the cane supported was learned, it was learned well. It seemed to me that he needed a drink and I told him so. He in turn explained that it was not a sound idea to tell people that you were going to buy liquor; they thought food was better, something connected with piety, and the mere suspicion that whisky was in a man's mind would keep them moving, or produce a tirade upon the evils of alcohol.

"Mister," I said, "I think you're right to get that drink. I admire your honesty and I wish you luck." He wished me the same and I was thinking of my own bottle at home as we waved in the dark alley and he only two doors from a barroom.

It was again evening, but a day later, with weather scarcely changed and I was to meet my confirmation of something taking form in my mind, a mere hypothesis, I suppose. But much has come from hypotheses. As I slithered along an icy walk and braced myself above and below, a glint of an eye 20 feet distant and approaching caught me like a radio beam. Face to face we came. This time, it was a sturdy individual in a leather jacket, and the sparkling look of him was begot only indirectly by nature. I edged foxily toward the curb for an oblique across the street.

"Now, friend, before you step down that curb and into the street, do me a favor. I want to buy a drink and I'm going to ask for a dime. I won't lie. I don't want food, but I do want a ball. Some fellows tell you they want a meal, or they want coffee and a roll, but I'm going to buy a drink as soon as I have the money and I'm tellin' the truth about it."

He was feeling good, almost joyful, certainly ebullient, and I could see a considerable thirst was upon him.

"And . . ." he added as though to clinch the point, "I don't mind tellin' you I've had a couple already. I want just one more to be right."

"Mister," I said, "I agree with you. And I like your way of putting it. If a man wants a drink, that's what he wants, and I see no objection."

By this time, I can feel out a dime rapidly and thus avoid the display of great wealth in the hand while considering the difference between generosity and alms. We waved to each other and said good luck. My hypothesis was confirmed. Tactics had changed. Perhaps it was the New Deal; or again, it might be the dawn of a new morality. Or considered from another angle, it was perhaps the desire of the artist to tell the same story in a different way. And lastly, it might be just utilitarian like a lot of other morality before it got dressed up in its Sunday best and became an ethic. But, I am not equipped to judge the morals of men in dire need.

A few days later, while the dregs of the same storm were slush in the streets, I gazed into a bargain window with the chill damp creeping up my socks and shins. Soon, there was a voice behind—there is always a voice behind if one stands for long anywhere at any time or in any place—and it was saying a very familiar saying in a soft and faded tone.

"Mister, could you spare a nickel for me to get a cup of coffee? I'm really hungry. Now, I know some fellows tell you they want coffee or something to eat, and then they go and buy liquor. But, I'd rather tell the truth. I'm not a drinkin' man."

He was pale and he was hunched within a tattered topcoat three sizes too large. He was also about 5 feet as he stood and I wondered that he stood at all. He was waiting patiently.

"Mister," I said, "you look to me as though you need a meal, and I like a man that tells the truth."

"Thank you, mister," and he was holding the dime in his palm weighing its potential power.

"D'y know what I can get for that over at the Volunteers? A big plate of beans, four slices of buttered bread and a large coffee with cream in it."

"Well, good luck mister," I said. I am sure he got the beans.

Splitting Hairs

"IT IS ALL too frequently held that there is no difference between communism and fascism," writes Harry Elmer Barnes, who could be thinking of these dispatches which have said as much a time or two to the picturesque wrath of both sides. "They may be equally un-American," says he, "and equally to be resisted, but certainly there is a difference. In the Soviet Union the benefits of dictatorial rule are conferred primarily on the masses. Stalin indulges in no such lavish extravagances and Roman holidays as do the Nazi hierarchy in Germany.

"Further, they differ in their attitude toward liberty. The Fascists regard liberty as a permanent nuisance, never to be tolerated. The Communists at least pretend to regard liberty as an important human value which has to be temporarily put into cold storage during the struggle to stabilize the Soviet Union. Whether the Communists ever will render more than lip service to democracy and liberty remains to be seen, but the Fascists do not even give lip service."

Rulers Termed Stalin Fascists

BUT EARLIER in the same piece Mr. Barnes notes that the Trotzky Communists and other schismatics, all claiming to be true Marxian fundamentalists, contemptuously refer to the governing party in Russia and its accredited American branch as Stalin Fascists, and he could have quoted from their arguments to the distress of his own contention. For the Trotzky Communists, though they may be read out of the party or shot for dissenting, make out a strong case of similarity between the nationalized or local communism of Stalin and the even more bolshevistic Nazism of Adolf Hitler. It may be that neither is true communism, but that would be immaterial in a discussion of their mutual likeness.

He concedes that they are both dictatorial, and I think the matter of Hitler's extravagance in bunting, courts of honor and all such circus work may be reduced to a petty difference hardly worth the mention by a Ph. D. There was a time when the Russians also rolled out the red carpet, beat the drums and blew the trumpets to hop up the spirit and imagination of the clods. Moreover, if a man is dictator he claims to know best, and if Stalin thought it wise to do so he could hold big parades and Roman holidays in Moscow without embarrassment to his communism. Anyway, any time Hitler honors himself with a great demonstration of popular affection in a setting that costs several million marks, that extravagance speeds the day when private ownership and capital will vanish utterly.

Essay Recalls Communist Song

MR. BARNES suggests a belief that in Germany the benefits of the dictatorial rule are conferred not on the masses, as in Russia, but on the rich and middle class. There is a trap in that. You are asked to concede that the masses do receive the benefits of the dictatorial rule in Russia before proceeding to inquire who receives them in Germany. But the testimony does not agree that the faceless people primarily receive the material benefits of the Russian system. Much of it holds, on the contrary, that they went through years of sacrifice and woe and that now, when there are a few spare shoes, there are also classes in Russia. It may hurt to admit it, but the German masses have profited as much or more in material things.

But the kernel of the discussion is the wishful distinction between the Fascist repudiation of liberty and the pretense of the Russian dictatorship that liberty has been suspended only temporarily. For the time being, then, as to liberty, there is nothing to choose between communism and Hitler's bolshevism and Dr. Barnes places greater store by lip service to liberty than one would expect of a man so highly learned. Experience has it that people get liberty only by killing those who deprive them of it. He doesn't know, for he says it remains to be seen, whether Communists will ever render more than lip service to liberty, and that phase of his essay recalls with mocking irony the old song of the Communists, "You'll have pie in the sky when you die."

Philippine Fears

By Vicente Albano Pacis

The Japanese Line Moves Closer

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Manila.

NO OTHER PHASE of the Sino-Japanese war has excited the Filipinos more than the Japanese occupation of Hainan, a Chinese island only 750 miles west of Manila. But they are not quite so excited as the Chinese themselves, the British, the French, and the Dutch.

With Japan in Hainan Island, the Philippines is now halfway surrounded by Japanese territories. If some of them are fortified as they must be if Japan continues its aggressive policy, they will form a steel ring and, in the scheme of the Japanese navy, the Philippines may become entirely swallowed in the resulting new Japanese life line.

Japan now occupies the former German possessions scattered east of the Philippines all the way from a line touching the southern tip of Mindanao to another line touching the northern tip of Luzon. Some of these islands, according to reports, are already being fortified by Japan alone or jointly with Germany. They form a life line that could deny this part of the Pacific to American forces in Hawaii and Guam.

North of the Philippines are Japan itself and Formosa, which appears like a suspended hornets' nest above Luzon. And now comes Hainan Island in the west, with which Japan has projected itself into British and French lifelines. Thus Japan is advancing southward past the Philippines; hence, some thoughtful Filipinos cannot help but inquire how long the apparent desire of Nippon to respect Philippine territory can last, especially after it shall have been engulfed by further Japanese acquisitions farther south.

A Challenge To The U. S.?

ALREADY, even with Japan no nearer than Hainan, the German military weekly, Der Wehrmacht, declared in its last issue, in which it purported to expose America's designs in the Pacific, "The Philippines lies within the Japanese sphere of influence. For many decades the Japanese have been colonizing the Philippines . . . and are by far the masters of the islands' economic matters."

Philippine reaction has been cautious and uncertain. A sector of the Manila press has sought to allay possible fear by pointing out that Hainan is no nearer to the Philippines than Formosa. Another sector, commenting on the statement of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek that by the occupation of Hainan the Japanese are on the way to challenging the United States in Guam and to directly endangering the Philippines, simply stated the generalissimo's words were food for thought. Neither United States High Commissioner McNutt nor President Quezon has commented on the matter in their press conferences.

There is some talk, however, of hastening the Philippine national defense plan not so much because of Japan's presence in Hainan but of the fear that the United States is inevitably drifting into possible war and the Philippines, an American territory, must be ready to protect itself. But even as this talk is just cautiously starting, it is revealed without any denial that during the recent European crisis when mobilization became general, Britain commandeered the first torpedo boat completed of a number ordered by the Philippine Commonwealth for its off-shore patrol.

The boats were designed and approved in Washington but are being built in England. The first of an order of five was to be delivered early in February but it was commandeered by the English navy just as it was leaving the slipway. With the crisis apparently over, however, the boat has been released and is being turned over to the Philippines with something—so some people gratify themselves—of the British naval tradition already ingrained in it.

Acceleration of the ten-year Philippine national defense plan is talked about mainly because of the belief that America may fight a war within the next few years. This belief has been inspired by the demonstrated readiness of Congress to approve the Roosevelt defense program, and the strengthening of American foreign policy both in Europe and in Asia. By lining herself up with the democracies for the predicted spring showdown, America, in the opinion of Filipino leaders, may eventually fight the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo axis. If America is a combatant and Japan is one of the belligerents on the other side, the Philippines will become a legitimate booty for Japan.

MacArthur Ready To Speed Plans

GEN. DOUGLAS MacARTHUR, military adviser to the Commonwealth, has so far shown no inclination to believe in such talk. But the defense plan which he drew up is being carried out successfully, and an acceleration would not be impossible. In fact when President Quezon asked Washington for the grant of independence in 1939 or 1940, Gen. MacArthur declared that he was ready to adjust his plan according to the resulting requirements. If the American general staff drops him a hint that even with independence still to come in 1946, he better be ready to fight in 1940, Gen. MacArthur will probably simply shift gear to third and tell his own general staff to give his plan everything.

So far, the carrying out of the defense plan has been without any speed-up indications. Trainees are being turned out at the rate of 40,000 a year as planned, the air force is gradually being enlarged with Filipino military aviators constantly being sent to American flying schools, and the off-shore patrol will be organized with the arrival of the torpedo boat the British have just released. MacArthur, observers agree, will be the last man to be caught with his pants down.

D. C. Men Less Self-Conscious Than Others, Folk Dances Show

It took folk-dancing to show that Washington men are less self-conscious than those of any other American city.

Six weeks ago Gene Gowing, of the English Folk Dance and Song Society of America, came to the Capital to spread the society's doctrine that one good folk dance is as beneficial to mind and body as a Mediterranean cruise and three psychiatrists.

"Everywhere else in the country the women have come to our demonstrations in droves and the men have stayed away in equal numbers," Gowing said yesterday.

"But here the men don't seem to have any inhibitions about folk dancing. Of the 250 or 300 who have enrolled in classes so far, at least half are men."

His greatest triumph came last week when a group of men requested a class in the Morris dance, a form which has been marked "for men only" since its origin centuries ago.

Gowing's only explanation of the phenomenon is the local popularity of the square dance, great-grandchild of the English country dance. "I guess the men have done enough square-dancing to lose their inferiority complexes," he suggested.

Gowing plans to present a group of high school boys in a Morris dance and a traditional mummers' play at the sixth annual National Folk Festival, to be held at Constitution Hall April 27, 28 and 29 under the sponsorship of The Washington Post Folk Festival Association. The mummers' play, a form of expression which has existed in English villages ever since there were any English villages, has not been given the attention it deserves by most folk experts, he believes.

Washington recruits to the pastime of folk-dancing will welcome Gowing's announcement that Douglas Kennedy, director of the English Folk Dance Society, will visit the Capital as part of a brief American tour. He will give a lecture, with song and dance illustrations, at the Wesley Heights Community House March 13 at 8:30 p. m.

During his visit here, Kennedy will discuss the approaching National Folk Festival with Miss Gertrude Knott, director of the festival.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

New Administration Policy:

1. The election returns begin to reach Washington.

IT IS, I think, the fact that Mr. Hopkins would not have wanted to make his Iowa speech and that Mr. Morgenthau would not have been allowed to open up tax reform, were it not that the President has at last begun to hear the election returns. He spent the autumn refusing to believe them. When he wrote his message to Congress, Mr. Roosevelt was still under the impression that a short pause, rather than a change of direction, was all that his political situation called for.

But for eight weeks the newly elected Congress has been in Washington. Direct contact with the representatives of the people has begun to convince the President that the seasoned observers were after all correct when they pointed out in November that the total failure of the Democratic purge and the great Republican gains marked the end of a political era. No matter how much Mr. Roosevelt wished to believe that he still had behind him personally a majority of the voters, it was plain that the New Dealers had lost control of the Democratic Party as an organization and that the divided party was on its way to defeat in 1940.

Trying To Keep New Dealers In Line

WHAT IS happening now is Mr. Roosevelt's response to what he has learned from Congress about the results of the elections. Mr. Roosevelt is attempting to solve a very difficult problem. He is trying to keep the New Dealers in control of the Administration and the party by letting the New Dealers try to remedy the grievances from which the opposition draws its strength.

The theory behind the present policy is that the popular following of the New Deal can be held in line by keeping in the key positions men, like Mr. Hopkins, whose New Deal sympathies are well known. There is, in fact, no place else for the New Deal following to go. Then, the opposition is to be managed by making concessions which will bring about such substantial economic recovery that the discontent dies away.

2 Objectives Not Easy to Reconcile

WEAKNESS OF this strategical plan lies in the fact that the President has two objectives and they are not easy to reconcile. It is admitted that recovery depends upon a resumption of private investment, more particularly of private investment by the large corporations. In any amount large enough to make a real difference, private investment will not be undertaken unless the big investors believe they can earn profits large enough to justify the risks.

As long as they see the New Dealers in all the key positions, they will think, no matter what Mr. Hopkins and others may say, that the risks are great, that the prospects of profits are not secure. They will say that sudden conversions are not guaranteed to endure, that men who can change their minds so suddenly can change back no less suddenly.

Radical Concessions Held Necessary

WHETHER OR not this is fair, the hard-boiled fact is that by keeping New Dealers in all the key positions, the President will find that it costs much more in the way of political concessions to restore confidence among corporate investors than if he had reorganized his Administration. To keep his political friends in power he will have to sacrifice more of his principles than would have been necessary had he chosen to make a political peace with the conservative Democrats.

With the New Dealers still in full control, all the concessions will have to be, so to speak, on a cash basis. If the President had accepted the results of the election, if he had realized that the New Dealers are politically lame ducks, if he had reorganized his Cabinet and his inner council to give effective representation to the winning faction, he would have re-established his political credit. He could then have gotten large results by essentially minor concessions.

But on the line he has chosen, he will have to make radical concessions to obtain results. These concessions, even if they produce a fairly good recovery, will not really reduce the opposition. For the Democratic opposition consists of politicians who will never forget that they were marked for extinction until they are placed in positions of power and given their share of the responsibility. On the other hand, in the attempt to buy off the opposition, the President will be driven to make such concessions to the conservatives that he may end by dividing and demoralizing the New Deal constituency.

President Still Misjudges Situation

SO THE ERROR of the President's policy is, it seems to me, that he is still misjudging the political situation, failing to see that the primary remedy called for is a change of men rather than a change of measures. After the purge and the elections of 1938, the New Deal faction had lost its control of the Democratic Party, and, therefore, it had lost its control of the country. The only workable response to that development was to reorganize the Administration so as to make it truly representative of the election returns.

There is not, I think, a real alternative to a reorganization which would have united the Democratic Party. A change of mind on the part of the New Dealers, even a change of heart, even a change in measures, is no adequate substitute for a candid recognition of the political overturn which has occurred in the past eight months.

For a man so ardently devoted to the ideals of democracy, it is indeed strange that the President is so unwilling to abide by so decisive an expression of the popular will.

Elmer On The Double-Bed Issue

A recent poll showed that wives favored double beds over twin beds by a vote of three to one. Among the reasons was, "It's harder to continue a quarrel in a double bed." Elmer Twitchell, who has quarreled in both kinds, branded this today as nonsense.

"It ain't hard at all to continue a quarrel in a double bed," declared Elmer. "Only an amateur quarreler would say so. In fact, it's just the contrary. Continuing a battle from a twin bed is hard. It's like retiring to a previously prepared position. A husband has got to shout to be sure she hears him, and even then it is difficult to be sure she is paying attention.

"In a double bed he can tell by her manner, and vice versa. From a twin bed you have got to keep repeating your mean digs and asking, 'Do you hear me or am I just talking to myself?' You've got to sit up every little while and peer into the darkness to survey the situation. You can't always be sure the wife is still there.

"In fact, I had been carrying on a running fire of rebuke and recrimination the other night for an hour before I switched on the light and found she had sneaked out and gone to bed in the attic."

Mr. Twitchell and Mrs. Twitchell, it was revealed, are both for the double bed. Twin beds, they pointed out, were unknown in most homes twenty-five years ago. They were a novelty seen only in New York store windows and in Avery Hopwood bedroom farces. A few society people got to sleeping in 'em and then the twin bed became known as smart. All over the country people who had been happy sleeping together began sleeping apart.

One never knew when the other needed a hot-water bottle in the middle of the night or was sitting up in bed demanding that a suspicious noise downstairs be investigated.

There can be no proof of true love when a husband is put in a position where he can't respond to whispered demands that he go down to the first floor and see if anybody is stealing the silver.

Indifference and unhappiness have been spreading ever since the old-fashioned double bed went out.

"There is only one big drawback to a double bed," said Mr. Twitchell, summing it all up. "It is harder to pretend you don't hear the wife when she shakes you about 3 in the morning and tells you she forgot to let the cat in and can hear it meowing at the front door."

SPRING SONG

I heard the singing of a thrush
While heading for the morning crush
Into the subway, if you please,
Propped up by elbows and by knees.

It was a very cheery song,
But, oh, the subway ride was long!
I wish that I could hear a thrush
When I'm not in an awful rush.

Labor Peace And Radicals

By Mark Sullivan

Motives Surveyed

FOR PRESIDENT Roosevelt's attempt to bring together the American Federation of Labor and the Congress for Industrial Organization, a reporter observes several motives. Within the Administration, a strong motive is to help business recovery. Rivalries between labor groups cause "jurisdictional" disputes. These lead to strikes in which the employer is an innocent and helpless bystander. Union of A. F. of L. and C. I. O. would largely end this kind of strike, and thereby help recovery.

Back of the Administration's wish for recovery, in turn, there is a further motive. This motive is political. Administration strategists believe that business recovery would do two things: (1) help the Democrats keep power in the 1940 election; (2) help Mr. Roosevelt keep a grip on the Democratic Party.

So much for the Administration's motive in calling on A. F. of L. and C. I. O. to get together. Within the two labor organizations, especially within C. I. O., is a separate motive. The labor leaders think the country is in the beginning of a strong conservative reaction. They fear that after this reaction goes far enough there may be legislation which might undo even some of the wholesome part of the national labor relations act. They are quite certain there will be legislation bearing down hard on the sit-down strike and other radical practices that came with C. I. O. Before that happens, the wiser C. I. O. leaders are anxious to get under the shelter of A. F. of L., against which there is no charge of radicalism.

Nation As Whole Deeply Interested

IN A THIRD group is a third motive. This group is the Communists and other collectivists everywhere. This group is never to be forgotten. They know the technique of bringing about collectivism, and they never lose sight of their purpose. When the day they hope for comes, when the country is carried into collectivism, they expect all labor unions to be abolished, as they are in Russia and Germany. They expect labor to be taken over in the same way and at the same time as industry. And they think labor will be easier to take over if it is organized into one body.

But let us omit these varying motives from interested groups. Turn to the concern of the whole country, as a country. The country as a whole has a strong interest in the merger of A. F. of L. and C. I. O., if it takes place, and in the terms upon which it takes place.

Let us look at the two organizations from the paramount point of view, the point of view of preserving the American form of society and government. From that standpoint there need be no concern about A. F. of L. During seventy years of existence, A. F. of L. has vigorously supported the American system. Wherever radicalism appeared in A. F. of L. the leaders disciplined it and expelled it.

C. I. O. is not the same story. Just what is the degree and extent of radicalism in C. I. O. is not easy to say, for it is a sprawling, loose-jointed organization. Some of C. I. O. is completely conservative Some is radical.

C. I. O. reflects the time in which it was born. During that time, 1935, much of the thought within the Roosevelt Administration—about labor and everything else—was typified by Prof. Rexford G. Tugwell, then high in power and close to President Roosevelt. About labor organizations there is a passage in a book Dr. Tugwell wrote, "The Industrial Discipline."

Tugwell Remarks Are Recalled

TOWARD THE older American unions, such as the A. F. of L., Prof. Tugwell's attitude was one of disdain. "Trade unionism," he wrote, "has been, traditionally, with us a submissive doctrine, one which accepts the domination of the businessman and the incentive of profit-making." Because the older type of union, such as A. F. of L., concerned itself only with hours and wages, and did not attempt more, Prof. Tugwell jeered at it: "It has asked nothing but larger bribes for greater degradation."

This, Prof. Tugwell said, must not be. "Submission," he said, "cannot make a workers' world." And Prof. Tugwell declared that labor must go on toward "creating a workers' world which will not involve a return to any system which ever before existed."

It was when this sort of spirit was strong in the Roosevelt Administration that C. I. O. was founded. How much of this spirit C. I. O. took on is not possible to say. But there has been enough to call on the country to be vigilant now.

When and if C. I. O. and A. F. of L. follow Mr. Roosevelt's request that they get together, the getting together should be on a basis which drops the radicalism that C. I. O. brought with it. This is much the same as saying that, with respect to the attitude of labor unions toward society and government, the getting together should be largely on A. F. of L.'s terms. A. F. of L. has made a long, hard fight for upholding the American system, for rejecting and expelling communism wherever it appears in the field of labor. A. F. of L. ought not to give up this point of view, nor compromise it, for the sake of the unity Mr. Roosevelt wants.

Whither Spain?

By Barnet Nover

The International Struggle Continues

THE SPANISH civil war is over. After a struggle lasting more than 2½ years Gen. Franco's final triumph is at hand. He is today the putative master of all of Spain; it is at most only a matter of days before he becomes the actual master. Already Great Britain and France recognize him as such.

But the international struggle centering around Spain is not yet over. On the contrary, with Franco victorious it enters a new and, it may be, very dangerous stage. It is no longer possible for Great Britain and France to postpone a showdown with the totalitarian powers over the Spanish issue as they managed to do as long as the republican armies were in the field and the civil war went on.

It is that very fact which explains the almost obscene haste of the London and Paris governments in recognizing Franco. For, when the showdown comes, they want Franco and his regime to be on their side and not on the side of those powers without whose assistance his victory would have been impossible to attain.

THE SPANISH situation today is thus the reverse of what it has been for the last 31 months. In that period developments within Spain depended, to a marked degree, on international developments.

Every stage in the civil war, from the outbreak of rebellion in Morocco to the collapse of resistance in Catalonia and the events of the last week, has reflected, to a greater or lesser extent, the activities of outside powers. It was the acts of commission and omission of those outside powers—Germany and Italy, Russia, France, Great Britain and not least the United States—which played a part of the greatest importance in determining the final outcome of the civil struggle.

Now developments within the international sphere bid fair to be affected, and it may be very seriously affected, by the trend of events in Spain.

Franco Heavily Indebted to Italy

GEN. FRANCO owes a great deal to Mussolini and Hitler. Germany and Italy, and particularly the latter, have spent much in the way of blood and treasure to bring about the victory of the Spanish Nationalists. To assume that they did so for purely ideological reasons is to assume a degree of unreality in their foreign policies which their past actions do not in the least support.

The assumption must be that they supported Franco because they believed such action would advance the national interests of Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy.

So far as Hitler is concerned, the gamble of Spanish intervention has already paid him very considerable dividends. The preoccupation of Italy with the Spanish problem helped make it possible for Germany to swallow up Austria without so much as a protest from the other partner of the Berlin-Rome axis. And the weakness and pusillanimity displayed by the European democracies in pursuing a policy of nonintervention when the nonintervention agreement was being openly and persistently flouted by the totalitarian states, encouraged the Fuehrer not only to embark on his Austrian adventure but to follow this up by his assault on Czecho-Slovakia.

UNTIL NOW, however, Italy's intervention in the Spanish struggle has been a net liability for the Duce. It made possible German-Austrian Anschluss, which brought the Third Reich's border to the Brenner. And it further impoverished the already anemic exchequer of the Italian kingdom.

In what way does Mussolini expect to be compensated? He cannot receive adequate compensation from Spain itself; the compensation must come from other powers, notably France, using Spain as a means of leverage. And if that compensation is to come at all it must come soon, while Franco and his regime are presumably in a mood to compensate their friends and to punish those who hitherto have been lukewarm in their regard for him.

Gratitude happens to be a very ephemeral emotion in international affairs. No one knows this better than Mussolini himself who, after getting all he could out of France in 1935, turned around, in 1936 and formed the axis with France's historic enemy. He must act soon to cash in on the Spanish victory if he is to act at all.

There is every reason to believe therefore, that he will try with might and main to keep Franco in line just as Great Britain and France are now doing all in their power to wean the Nationalist chieftain away from his erstwhile foreign friends and supporters.

Troop Withdrawal Issue Now Dominant

IN THIS STRUGGLE the question of the withdrawal of Italian troops still in Spain is of immediate and vital importance.

In the Anglo-Italian agreement of January, 1937, Mussolini agreed to withdraw those troops once the civil war had ended, if not sooner. He repeated that assurance in the agreement with England of last year and reiterated it again on the occasion of Prime Minister Chamberlain's recent visit to Rome.

Will those troops now be withdrawn and, if so, on what conditions? To expect that Mussolini will submit to Anglo-French pressure, without adequate compensation, is to expect a great deal. A great deal, therefore, will depend on developments within Spain itself.

If Franco, having won the war, quickly succeeds in consolidating his rule and if he decides that it is to his best interests to co-operate with Great Britain and France, Mussolini's international position might become parlous. But it is doubtful if the Duce would, under such developing circumstances, sit by with hands folded and let the prize he had worked so hard to win slip out of his hands. Mussolini's capacity for stirring up trouble in Spain has hardly been exhausted by victory.

On the other hand, if Franco agrees to play the Berlin-Rome game, the temptation for Italy to go after what her statesmen call her "natural aspirations" will be very great indeed. The best advice remains: watch Spain.

Pius XI Revealed as Valuable Contributor to Scientific Work

British Magazine Describes Pontiff's Influence in Reconciling Religious Men to Research

By G. B. Lal

International News Service Science Editor

London, Feb. 27.—The late Pope Pius XI was a contributor to the progress of science, the editors of Nature, scientific journal, said today.

G. B. LAL

After careful investigation they found the Pope's influence of great significance in reconciling religious men to the attitude and accomplishments of science.

L. J. F. Brimble, one of the editors, himself a distinguished biologist, listed these among the Pope's scientific accomplishments:

"Pope Pius XI, as curator of the Ambrosian and afterward of the Vatican libraries, always favored the development of positive sciences in their various fields of application. He was convinced there could be no real incompatibility between science and faith.

"In 1936 he reconstituted the Pontifical Academy of Sciences, which is now housed in the Vatican Gardens. It now consists of 70 members, and includes such world-famous scientists as Sir Charles Sherrington, Dr. Alexis Carrel and Prof. R. A. Millikan."

According to Brimble, the Pope fostered many links of scientific research of which the world is ignorant.

The Pope's antagonism to racial prejudices and intolerance was partly attributable to his understanding of scientific biology, genetics and anthropology, according to the Nature editors.

There is a story current here that the late Pope Pius was the first man to have discovered the original manuscript of Volta's famous paper on voltaic current, that is, electricity as it flows through wires and other conductors.

The age of electric current began with just such work as that of Volta. Somewhere in Milan the original paper was concealed. The Pope's eager search is said to have resulted in its discovery and preservation.

Concretely, Pope Pius XI was always deeply interested in, and encouraged, the psychological investigations of Father Gemelli at the Catholic University of Milan.

Said the editors of Nature:

Should Girl Revert to Courtship With Man Which Once Ended in Painful Humiliation for Her?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a single woman, 30 years old. There is a young man (there's always a man!) who has recently returned to the city after a year's absence. I knew him for approximately four years and was completely fascinated, as we were almost constantly together. At that time his intentions were strictly dishonorable, a fact of which I was aware. However, I refused to put an end to our association until I suffered an extreme humiliation which forced me to recognize the seriousness of the situation.

Now he is back and apparently has developed much more of a "crush" on me, telephoning nearly every night. However, his charm has just about faded, and I have accepted only two of his invitations. His actions seemingly have changed to a marked degree. He consults my wishes in everything and hasn't made the slightest amorous advance. Perhaps he's now looking for companionship rather than conquest.

My question is whether to renew the association or let it die. I am not swamped with masculine admirers, and this man is very constant, despite his shortcomings. His attentions serve to assuage a secret conviction of personal failure, at not yet having achieved a happy marriage, although I don't mean to say I have an inferiority complex, because I enjoy the love and confidence of quite a few friends and have received two bona fide proposals of marriage. Do you think I might find myself once again playing with fire if I continue seeing him? It would be a case of being my own worst enemy—since I seem to have an immoral streak inherited from somewhere. Please give me your opinion. READER.

Avoid Temptation

DEAR READER: Since your veiled remarks justify the assumption that you were once upon a time commited to an affaire d'amour with this man; and since—one gathers—it is your present desire and intention to steer a more self-contained course in future, I think you are making things unnecessarily difficult for yourself in continuing to see him. For one thing, you admit that your own "immoral streak" is essentially your worst enemy, and for another thing, it is virtually impossible to reconstruct barriers of moral reticence that have once been razed between a given man and woman. Seldom, if ever, can they belatedly forswear illicit intimacy in favor of a more casual and seemly social interchange, so long as any vestige of warmth characterizes their manifest interest in each other. The only trustworthy means of permanently outlawing the possibility of reverting to the disturbing former pattern of behavior lies in discontinuing the association altogether. M. H.

"Justice" Is Challenged

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Why didn't you ask "Justice" (your married-man correspondent of February 24, who wants you to denounce that class of people who address anonymously defamatory letters to persons involved in "triangle" affairs) just what his sense of justice can possibly be, since apparently it takes no account of the wrong he is doing in encouraging "a sweet and genuine young girl" to link her life with his—instead of being man enough, and gentleman enough, not to see her?

He is, in my opinion, something of an "oily" person. I know what strength of character it takes to follow the step you suggest, i. e.: stay apart. I have taken that step and sometimes, even now, I am assailed by doubts as to whether, after all, I might not have been better off with a little stolen, but real, happiness, instead of wasting away with a broken heart. But my allegiance to principle holds me straight to my course.

What must this man take you for—asking you to side with him? Does he suppose you give no thought to principles, morals, standards, etc.! He is indeed doing wrong to the young girl, for, in my opinion, when a man truly loves a girl he does not expose her to the possibilities of shame or gossip. Rather he keeps his love for her locked in his breast, if he is a married man and the odds are against divorce.

Let this man prove his love for the girl by divorcing his wife and marrying her—if he can. And if the girl has any spunk, let her ask him, squarely and frankly: "Do you love me enough to marry me?" . . . All this girl is doing, in curbing this man's philandering instincts through her own display of fundamental decency, is getting herself talked about, and she has nothing to gain. But I suppose she will have to learn for herself. She really should take warning from the clippings sent to her and profit from them. For I don't believe the clippings were sent in a mean spirit, for if so, a note to that effect would have accompanied them, don't you think? It seems someone was trying to help her. Very truly yours, C. S.

Gentle Endorsement

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Please pay no attention to the man who wrote some time ago criticizing your use of unusual words. He is probably one of the "dese, dem and dose" boys, and, like most people of little or no education, fired with a strange dislike of persons with superior gifts.

I well remember the first of your articles which I had the privilege of reading. It was a letter from a cultured gentleman asking how to relieve the discord in his home—coupled with your reply. I have not, now or ever, had the privilege of mingling with educated persons, and as I read those two letters it was like listening to a beautiful symphony for the first time, after a lifetime of the hurdy-gurdy. I just can't explain the effect it had on me. I never knew the English language was so beautiful, so musical.

I read the article many times just to fill my mind with its beauty. So please don't change your style. None of the words seem forced or extravagant. I meant to write you before, but your critic's letter helped me to make up my mind. I am an old woman, who entertains a sincere admiration for and a great deal of envy of, your mental and spiritual qualities. And from now on I am going to be your CONSTANT READER.

The Music of Words

DEAR C. S.: Nothing could be kinder or more encouraging than your foregoing remarks. Like you, I am, and always have been, fascinated by the musical possibilities implicit in our mother tongue. And I fear me that I have an instinctive tendency to yield to the rhythm of words, as against subordinating them, strictly and sternly, to economical usages. Thus it may be that I often offend persons who do not sense their intrinsic beguilement, and who ask of them only that they serve a practical purpose, unadorned.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Ironing Day Advice

Do you keep your ironing board spick and span? It pays. Often smudgy spots appear on light colored clothes due to stains or dirt on the ironing-board cover. The covers are inexpensive and it is advisable to have several on hand and use a fresh one for each ironing. You will probably save time and money in the long run.

World's Fair Compact Features Flags

Flags of all nations are unfurled across the top of this dashing new compact. Volupte, who designed this aid to beauty, had the thousands of World's Fair visitors in mind, for few gifts to stay-at-homes could be more timely than this type of accessory. Black enamel is the base of this compact with multicolored flags enameled in their nation's brilliant hues. Patriotically enough, the stars and strips wave in the foreground

4,000 Applicants Turn Up to Ask Billy Rose For a Job; Are Told Theatrical Type Is Wanted; Home Girls Haven't a Chance

THE ENORMOUS number of young ladies who want jobs in show business here was well demonstrated the other day when Billy Rose issued the chorus call for his Aquacade at the World's Fair come next spring. No less than 4,000 baby dolls turned up, of all shapes and sizes. Some were dancers, others were show girls, swimmers and divers—but they all wanted to work for Billy out in the waters of Flushing Bay.

ALICE HUGHES

So huge was the throng of job seekers that it took a large platoon of constables. The jury consisted of Billy himself, Eleanor Holm, the famous and beautiful swimmer who is expected to marry the minute impresario some day, and John Murray Anderson, his stage director. I never saw such a mess of girls in my life, and it was a long job going through them and tossing out the impossibles. I got quite a kick out of Maestro Rose's speech to the mob when he first addressed them. He spoke, in part, as follows:

"I want theatrical types. The home girl hasn't a chance here. She had better go home now. I want personality and no excess poundage."

There was no great rush for the exits, since all the young ladies present felt they were theatrical types and defied the boss to know whether or not they could boil an egg. They did not wear bathing suits, since the Hippodrome was unheated, and goose-pimples never got a chorus girl a job. Over 500 were to be chosen, and the first dancer picked was Betty Bonnez, who lives right here in town. "I was thrilled to death," she told the press. A Cleveland girl named Dorothy Van Hest, who worked for Billy at the Cleveland Aquacade a few summers ago, was number two. And so the shambles went on for hours, and finally little Billy had his 500 honeys. But it was a long, trying process. Just the same, I'm glad so many girls will have a summer's work at our strangely feeble fair, speaking from the standpoint of entertainment.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: The most publicized young girl in our town has just celebrated her fifteenth birthday without any fuss. Needless to say, she is Gloria Vanderbilt, daughter of Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, and set to inherit over $4,000,000 some day. The natal day took place at the girl's school in nearby Connecticut, but there was not the faintest sign of a party, since it is against the rules of that classy academy. Studying her pictures in all the newspapers, it does not seem that little Gloria will ever possess the great beauty which is her mother's—but then, what can you tell about a kid of 15?

I always get a belt out of the local dispatches from Palm Beach, Fla., where our rich youngsters waste their winters in what must be a delightful way. At a recent party to celebrate the Palm Beach night club debut of the songstress, Adelaide Moffet Brooks, it appears to me that the chain store boys stole the show. Eddie Reeves, of the grocery stores, escorted the beautiful Lili Damita, while Woolworth Donahue, whose small change comes from the same source as that of Barbara Hutton, was the partner of the wild little Mexican, Lupe Velez.

This being the season of the year when it is customary to ask the Nation's college students all those silly questions, we have now received the results of the poll at Columbia University, the freshwater college here in New York. You may be amused to know that the movie star the boys chose this year as their theoretical companion on the hypothetical desert island is that darling from middle Europe named Hedy Lamarr—and all this on the strength of her only American appearance to date in that first-class melodrama, "Algiers."

Local fashion writers are now trying to bridge the gap until Easter, and they recommend pretty prints for the in-between season. Try it.

Sinus Operation Only Advised as Last Resort

I get a good many letters asking about sinus disease, about its cause and whether or not it can be cured. The answer to the latter question depends on what kind of sinus trouble is present and what sinus is involved. Nobody can answer the question dogmatically because it requires an examination by an experienced nose and throat man to determine the type and location of the infection. Not only the nose itself should be examined by a good light and by the X-ray, but the entire body should be gone over because many cases of sinus disease are systemic in nature. Diabetes, high blood pressure and kidney trouble may predispose to sinus infections and keep them going once they are started.

In treatment, general measures to increase the immunity of the body, such as the use of vitamins A, B and D, exercises, proper clothing, avoidance of chill, are all valuable. Local applications of ephedrine or colloidal silver, or of electrical treatment by diathermy, will often give complete relief. The important thing is to keep the sinuses drained. "Good ventilation and free, uninterrupted continuous drainage" was the motto of treatment advocated by Dr. Herbert Tilly, of London.

Home Treatment

When conservative measures have failed, surgery must be considered. Deviations of the septum of the nose should be straightened so as to promote drainage; small growths such as polyps should be removed, and other methods of promoting drainage are indicated.

The most radical surgery aims to eliminate the mucous membrane of the sinus entirely. This, however, is an operation of last resort and should be used only after all other methods have failed.

On the whole, it may be said that the treatment of sinus disease in proper hands is quite hopeful, and there is little reason for many cases dragging on indefinitely in a state of chronic invalidism.

Spots Off Wallpaper

Spots on wallpaper can often be removed by covering with talcum powder or cake magnesia. After three days, brush off the powder with a clean cloth or soft brush.

Your Figure, Madame!

Thin Must Cater To Appetites to Gain Weight

IF YOU are one of those thin girls with an appetite as fickle as April weather, you will have to cater to it for a while. Instead of always eating out, try preparing a few simple meals at home. Or dine out occasionally to break the monotony of meals at home.

Your weight-gaining program depends on the ability to eat three good meals a day and you will probably have to resort to a few tricks to make food interesting. Otherwise, you might not be able to eat enough.

None of the thin girls seem to appreciate breakfast . . . Maybe you have been boiling your coffee over and burning your toast until you would rather skip the whole thing. Try walking part of the way to work before you have breakfast, and you'll be surprised at what you can do to a plate of bacon and eggs.

Some of you must reverse this process. You are tired of the corner drug store fare and you will enjoy trying your hand with breakfast. The aroma of steaming coffee may be all that is needed to awaken your appetite, but the entire meal should be tempting. If you were brought up on homemade bread, you will be surprised at the homemade breads you can buy at some of the bakeries. Look around until you find a bakery specializing in the kind your mother used to make, and have a couple of slices crisply toasted for breakfast.

Milk in the Morning

There is always some way of managing to take one-third of the day's calories at breakfast. If these suggestions don't work, think up a plan of your own. And don't forget your glass of milk in the mid-morning. After you have been drinking it for a week you will look forward to this morning beverage.

The underweight girl who is with people all day needs quiet and relaxation at dinner. Don't go to a restaurant when you have no appetite and are almost too tired to sit at a table. It would be better to have a simle supper in bed, even though you have to serve yourself. Open a can of creamed soup and have a poached egg on toast and a glass of warm milk.

The Big Bad Wolf

"You know, I've just decided that the thing to do is not to think about it."

"Think about what?"

"The grip."

"There you go! Just like a woman! Scaring yourself into getting it."

"No, I wasn't thinking of myself. I was thinking of you."

"Don't worry about me. I'm not the type that goes around catching everything—say, what's the matter with your voice?"

"It's all right. Why?"

"I thought it sounded a little hoarse. You haven't caught a cold, have you?"

"No, I haven't. Have you?"

"Certainly not. But I tell you you've got to be careful. You don't wear enough clothes for one thing. Of course, though, if you want to go out and expose yourself, it's none of my business——"

"Oh, I won't catch it. It's you I'm thinking about. Those things always go so much harder with a man. Are you sure your throat's not sore?"

"It's all right. What are you hugging that radiator for? Are you chilly?"

"Not in the least. The light's better here. Were you starting to cough?"

"I was just clearing my throat. Now, say, if you don't stop thinking about this thing so much, you are going to bring it on yourself."

"Oh, I don't feel as if I'd ever get it. You're the one."

"Well, I know it won't bother me—if you'll just get it off your mind."

"All right, I'm just going to dismiss it entirely from my consciousness. I do think there's a lot in thought . . . Well, how did things go at the office today?"

"Rotten. Of course, with so many people out——"

"Say, did you gargle your soda water?"

"I will later. You know, a fellow in the drugstore was telling me today that grapefruit juice was the best thing you could take."

"Well, a woman at the bridge party said——"

"You don't mean to say you went to a bridge party! You ought to have sense enough to stay out of crowds. Of course, though, it's no use for me to say anything. You'll do just as you please——"

"Oh, I won't get it. It's you downtown in an office——"

"There you go! I thought you were going to stop talking it."

"I am . . . We had the most wonderful chicken aspic today."

"Chicken aspic! You ought to eat something more substantial. The trouble with you is you don't eat enough. You're undernourished. And those are just the kind of people who are always the first to——"

"First to what?"

"Well—get sick."

"I'm all right. Say, why are you moving away from that radiator?"

"It's too hot."

"Are you sure you haven't any fever?"

"I'm perfectly all right. You act as if it were chilly in here. You ought to put on some clothes. Of course, though, I'm wasting my time talking. If you wan't to kill yourself——"

"Oh, I'm all right. I don't like the idea of your being too hot."

"Say, I thought you were going to forget it."

"I am. I'm going to put it completely out of my mind, only I want to do one thing first."

"What's that?"

"Get the thermometer and see if you have any fever."

American Deb Defense Raises British Storm

Letters of Protest Pour in to Post Society Editor Following Her Answer to English Critic

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

IF I WERE a stamp collector, my life these days would be one thrill after another. It seems my reply to Charles Graves' lengthy criticism about American debutantes at the White House ball in December has just been reprinted, in part, in Mr. Graves' column in the London Daily Mail. And as a result, a flood of protests have started pouring over from England.

HOPE R. MILLER

Mr. Graves himself described my defense of American debs as being "somewhat rude" and emphasized that he meant as a compliment his statement that "the American debutante is obviously out to please." Some of the readers of his column were not quite so restrained in voicing their reactions. Others protested mildly but with more effect.

By way of closing once and for all the "Graves episode," I shall quote two of the letters, each of which represents both types of reactions to my piece.

"If Charles Graves' remarks hurt American girls, then let me, as an Englishwoman apologize for him. The old idea that the American woman is a harsh-voiced husband-nagger has gone here, I hope. Please help to kill in America the idea that the average Englishwoman is cold and unsympathetic. Think of the things that have hurt you most in life and you will realize how we feel when we think that is the Americans' idea of us. The truth is that there are lots of charming and kindly women on both sides of the Atlantic. We are human beings—let's be friends." Suits me.

Now for another side of the picture. "The diatribe published against the English deb, which no doubt will be treated by them with the contempt it deserves, calls forth an answer from one of the British public who learnt all he wished to know of the American debutante during the Coronation. They are 'Yankee trash' . . . speech impossible, manners nil, and whose filthy dollars contaminated English society and which Britain would be well rid of.

"Why such craving for Royalty from a Republican country. Be consistent—a country cannot be both." Well, well, well.

IT'S GOOD NEWS to loads of Washingtonians that the former Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings will be returning April 1 and will make their home here. The announcement that Mr. Cummings would enter partnership with William Stanley in private law practice did not come as a surprise to a number of persons, but it's good to know it's all settled now.

Meanwhile, the Cummingses will continue their Florida vacation until the end of next month. From Boca Grande, where they are basking in the sunshine, Mrs. Cummings writes they are admirably located in a cottage; that Mr. Cummings plays the nine-hole golf course almost every day; and that the fishing and swimming are the best ever.

"I brought along 2 play suits and 15 dresses," writes Mrs. Cummings. "If I came again I'd reverse the number." Before returning to Washington, she and her husband plan to move northward, perhaps to Augusta, Ga., for a brief stay.

CLARE BOOTHE (Mrs. Henry Luce), noted playwright, who will come to Washington this weekend to be an honor guest at the Women's Press Club shindig, will be the house guest of Mrs. George Grant Mason, jr. . . . Julia Peterkin, noted novelist, also coming to the press party, will be feted at a small luncheon to be given by Mrs. John O. Herrick on Friday at the Willard . . . Miss Louise A. Boyd, famius explorer and geographer, another who will be honored at the press party, will be the house guest of Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt over the weekend . . . The only guest Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will bring to the party will be her mother-in-law, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt.

Ordway Whitford To Be Bride Mar. 12

Miss Ordway Whitford, whose engagement to Burton Grant Wadsworth was announced some time ago, has selected Saturday, March 18, as her wedding date. The ceremony will take place at St. Alban's Church at 4 o'clock.

The bride-elect, who is the daughter of Mrs. George Langdon Whitford, of Washington, will have as her attendant her sister, Miss Harriet Whitford. Names of the ushers and the best man will be announced later. Mr. Wadsworth is the son of Mrs. Natt Wadsworth and the late Mr. Wadsworth, of Warner, N. H.

Mrs. Roosevelt's Schedule Full

Mrs. Roosevelt "wouldn't be a bit afraid to fly across the Atlantic." She thinks, in fact, "it would be a thrilling experience," but she probably won't be doing it for another year, at least. She won't leave home.

She said as much at her press conference yesterday after announcing that she will christen the Yankee Clipper, transatlantic ship of the American Airways System, at 2:30 p. m. Friday. This appointment will be worked into a crowded day in which the First Lady will attend the luncheon of the League of Women's Voters at the Mayflower Hotel; receive a group of students from Stephens College at the White House in the afternoon, and attend the stunt party of the Women's National Press Club that evening.

After spending part of the weekend in Washington, Mrs. Roosevelt will leave today for New York, returning here early Friday morning. Saturday, she will attend church services in connection with Inauguration Day and the joint session of Congress at noon. Later, she will be present at the Women's Archives luncheon, and following that, will make a brief visit to the new building of the Washington Self-Help Exchange. The Cabinet dinner for President and Mrs. Roosevelt will take place that night, and the following day the First Lady will be off on a lecture tour.

Maj. Gen. Henry And Wife Move To Alexandria

Newcomers to Alexandria are Maj. Gen. Guy V. Henry, retired, and Mrs. Henry who have taken up residence on Prince street. They are occupying the house owned by Mrs. Harry N. Cootes, widow of Col. Cootes, and will be there until June. After that they will make their home in Washington. They are accompanied by their daughter, Miss Patricia Henry.

Gen. Henry at one time was chief of cavalry, and now he will be only a short distance from Fort Myer, center of some of the best riding in the country. When he left Washington, after his staff position, he was assigned to Fort Knox, Ky., and then went on to Fort Riley, as commandant of the Cavalry School there.

Another daughter of the Henrys is Mrs. Hamilton H. Howze, who is the wife of Lieut. Howze and who is now with her husband at Fort Stotsenberg in the Philippines. Mrs. Howze is the former Miss Mary Ingraham Henry.

Capital Society Interrupts Lenten Lull to Help Dominicans Celebrate 95th Birthday of Nation

De Pastorizas Greet Hundreds of Guests at Legation

By Elizabeth Henney.

Washington society, which had retired into temporary quiet for the Lenten season, emerged yesterday afternoon to assist the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza in celebrating the ninety-fifth anniversary of the Dominican Republic.

As befits a birthday party, the tea table at the legation bore two large birthday cakes, with the flag of the Republic iced boldly atop each.

Hundreds of Guests On Hand for Event

From 5 to 7 a steady stream of cars wound round the driveway of the legation on Sixteenth street. Inside, the reception rooms, though they seemed almost as large as Union Station, were crowded to the walls until well after the official end of the party.

The Minister and Senora de Pastoriza received in the library, just off the main drawing room. The hostess wore a tea gown, fashioned with a long black crepe skirt, which flared slightly into a train, and a bodice of sequins embroidered with coral beads in a rose pattern.

In the drawing room and library were massed baskets and bouquets of spring flowers, with roses and gladioli predominating. The tea table was centered with a huge bouquet of jonquils, iris and sweet peas, and the conservatory was also a mass of flowers.

Mme. Ertegun Among Those Assisting

Assisting at the tea table were Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador; Senora de Fuentes, wife of the Counselor of the Mexican Embassy; Senora Lopez, Senora de Recinos, Mrs. Parker West and Senora de Valdes Rodriguez. The table itself was loaded with a variety of tasty dishes, from hot tamales to salads and ices.

While Washington celebrated the event yesterday, citizens of this Central American republic in the Caribbean were also en fete for the occasion in many other places. Last evening a gala ball in New York was given by the American colony there. Last evening, also, Minister Pastoriza broadcast a goodwill message to his native country and to all Latin America over a short wave hook-up. Also on the radio program were Consul General Rafael Espaillat de la Mota, Consul General of the Dominican Republic in New York; Senor Luge, secretary of the Santo Domingo Chamber of Commerce of New York; and music by a Santo Domingo orchestra, which is now in New York, but will come soon to Washington.

Colonized by Columbus' Brother

The Dominican republic has had a stormy history since it won its independence from Spain in 1844, due to the efforts of Juan Pablo Durate, Francisco del Rosario and Ramon Mella. Those three contributed especially to the emancipation of the country which was the first strip of land colonized for Spain by Bartolome, brother of Christopher Columbus, in 1496.

Among the guests were Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Mrs. Millard Tydings, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Senorita de Sosa, the Turkish Ambassador, Mehmet Ertegun; Mrs. Charles Drake, Gen. and Mrs. Dion Williams, Mme. Benech, Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. Ralph Brewster, Mrs. Charles D. Carroll and Ricardo Alfaro.

Many Ambassadors Attend Celebration

Also there were Mrs. John Allen Dougherty, Mrs. Emerson Howe, Mr. and Mrs. John McClure, Representative Hamilton Fish, Senator Claude Pepper, Mrs. Fred Britten, H. Charles Brooks, Ellis Briggs, Mrs. Sol Bloom, Miss Vera Bloom, Minister and Mme. Irimescu of Rumania, the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Thatcher, Senora de Campbell and Senorita Eleanor Campbell, Senorita Anna Arcaya, Senorita Anna Maria Arcaya, Counselor of the Chilean Embassy, Sergio Huneeus and Senora Huneeus, and the Latvian Minister and Mme. Bilmanis.

The Ecuadorean Ambassador Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, was also present, as were Mr. and Mrs. Preston McGoodwin, Gen. and Mrs. Clayton S. Vogel, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, the Peruvian Ambassador Manuel de Freyre y Santander, the Counselor of the Argentenian Embassy Hector Ghiraldo, Eugene Carusi, Representative and Mrs. Aaron Ford, Mme. Fotitch, the Minister of Portugal and Mme. Bianchi, Miss Sibilla Skidelsky, Jaime Lopez, the Colombian Ambassador and Senora Lopez Pumerajo, the Colombian Counselor and Senora de Samper Ortega, the Secretary of the Ecuadorean Embassy and Senora de Crespo, the Panamanian Ambassador and Senora de Boyd, the Bulgarian Minister and Mme. Neoumoff, the Rumanian Counselor and Mme. Babes, and Mme. Zadeikis.

Sergio Huneeus, Charge d'Affaires Of Chilean Embassy, to Quit Washington Post Early in April

THE many rumors anent the transfer of Sergio Huneeus, Charge d'Affaires of the Chilean embassy, are at last confirmed with the news that he will definitely leave Washington early in April. It has been reported that he would be recalled sooner, but along came the earthquake in Chile, and Senor Huneeus has been busy ever since helping with Red Cross relief funds.

His successor is Guillermo Gazetua, married, and formerly with the Chilean consulate in New York, Miami and Havana. He will arrive from Santiago about March 10.

Attractive Senora Huneeus is a cousin of Mme. Charles Saint, whose husband was a member of the French embassy staff until a year or so ago, and who had many friends here. Senor Huneeus will be with the foreign office.

THIS month brings a whole batch of changes in the American Foreign Service. Mr. and Mrs. Francis Spalding, who have been in Stuttgart, where he was Vice Consul, will leave for Cairo, where Mr. Spalding will serve in the same position. They are son-in-law and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik. . . . Mr. and Mrs. John Carter Vincent, of Washington, are delighted with his new post as consul in Geneva. They will sail May 17 and motor there from Paris.

AN attractive newcomer to Washington is Mrs. Shaw Parker, who has taken a house on O street in Georgetown. Mrs. Parker, the former Joan Shaw, is an excellent rider. She is a granddaughter of Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird of Walpole, Mass., and a first cousin of Mrs. Marshall Field, the former Joan Bass, daughter of former Gov. Bass of New Hampshire. Mrs. Parker has a farm in Peterboro, N. H., and a ranch in Arizona, where she spent the early part of the winter.

ANOTHER Peterboro resident, who lives in Boston in the winter, is Elizabeth Morison, at present in Washington on the trail of a job. Yesterday she was guest of honor at a small cocktail party given by Sarah Smith in the latter's apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street.

It was Miss Morison's birthday, and many of the guests arrived bearing gifts. The guest of honor wore a corsage of pink camelias, and carried a bunch of violets brought by another admirer. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sanger, Alice Dodge, Thomas Eliot, former General Counsel of the Social Security Board and more recently candidate for Congress from Cambridge, Mass., who was here on business for a day or so; Laura Tuckerman, in a smart beige wool frock and black hat with a veil; Neil Connor, Henry Ehrlich, and Mannix Walker, who with Alan Squire has a leading part in the play "The Watched Pot," which will be given a preview tonight at the Civic Theater.

BARON BAEYENS of the French Embassy was also host at cocktail time yesterday in his apartment at the Shoreham. Among those who dropped in were Jacques Truelle, counselor of the embassy; the Third Secretary and Mme. Lucet, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Clark, George Duca, Mrs. S. Kent Legare, Count Gabriel de Gramont and the Charge d'Affaires of the Netherlands Legation and pretty Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, who hope to sail the end of March for a visit to the azalea gardens of Charleston, S. C.

Also among the guests were Gregory Merrill of the State Department and Mrs. Merrill, who knew Baron Baeyens when hll were stationed in Japan. Mr. Merrill is en route to his new post at Antwerp after a tour of duty in the Philippines.

MORE party notes: Miss Mabel Boardman entertained at dinner last evening . . . The buffet supper which the Belgian envoy and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz will give March 9 is in honor of their daughter, Countess van der Burch, who is visiting them.

Ecuadorean Envoy Heads Notables at 'First Lady'

With the Ecuadorean Ambassador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro heading the list, a long line of Washington notables will swing down the Memorial boulevard, past Mount Vernon to Fort Belvoir, Va., next Saturday evening to view the play "First Lady," the second production of the seventy-seventh year of the Essayons Dramatic Club.

A second drawing card that evening will be the dance at McKenzie Hall, in Fort Belvoir, which will follow the play and to which all those who attend the play have been invited. The play itself is that sparkling satire of drawing room politics of the Washington Merry-Go-Round, written by Katherine Dayton and George Kauffman.

A great many dinners have been planned before the performance, with the hosts taking their guests on to the play, Mr. and Mrs. David St. Pierre Gaillard will take friends down with them as will Mr. and Mrs. William Wrightson.

Ambassador Alfaro will have with him his two nieces, Senorita Carmen Inez Arias and Senorita Eugenia Sosa. They will be dinner guests of Col. and Mrs. H. R. Herwig, who are having a reunion dinner before the play of the officers of the class of 1913 of West Point, of which Ambassador Alfaro was a member.

Other guests at that dinner will be Col. and Mrs. Walton Walker, Col. and Mrs. Robert Perkins, Col. and Mrs. Lawrence W. Weeks, Col. and Mrs. Francis E. Newcomer, Col. and Mrs. Howard C. Davidson, Col. and Mrs. Gordon Russell Young, who play the leading parts, and Col. William A. Copthorne.

Others having dinners before the play or taking groups of guests will be Col. and Mrs. Notly Y. Du Hamel, Col. and Mrs. Logan M. Weaver, Col. and Mrs. James O'Connor, Capt. and Mrs. Charles W. Stewart, Maj. and Mrs. H. R. Cole, Lieut. and Mrs. John P. Buehler, Mrs. A. B. Shattuck, Mrs. Frederick A. Henney, Lieut. and Mrs. Donald A. Phelan, Lieut. and Mrs. George Kumpe, Capt. and Mrs. Kenneth S. Olson and Capt. and Mrs. William C. Baker.

Among those going down from Washington for the play will be Brig. Gen. John J. Kingman, Assistant Chief of Engineers, and Mrs. Kingman; also Col. David McCoach, Engineer Commissioner, and Mrs. McCoach.

Hulls to Celebrate Anniversary in N.Y.

Former residents sof Washington will gather at a dinner this evening at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York to attend the fiftieth wedding anniversary of former Representative and Mrs. William E. Hull, of Peoria, Ill.

Among the guests will be Harry F. Dougherty, who at one time was assistant solicitor of the Treasury Department, and Mrs. Dougherty. They now make their home at Grove City, Pa., but when in the Capital resided at the Wardman Park Hotel, as did Mr. and Mrs. Hull.

Still others at the dinner will be Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Forrest, of New York. Mr. Forrest formerly served here as correspondent for the New York Herald Tribune.

All the way from Canada will come Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Webster, of Toronto. Mrs. Webster, the former Miss Virginia Harris, is a niece of Mrs. Hull and lived with her aunt in Washington until her marriage.

Mrs. Dougherty plans to come to Washington from New York to spend a few days before she returns to Grove City.

A Dry On A.B.C. Board Women Ask

Impartial Control Asked at Meeting Here; National Delegates Chosen

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

A resolution requesting the D. C. Commissioners "to see that we have an alcohol beverage control board which is impartial, and one member of which is a dry" was passed unanimously amid applause yesterday afternoon at the February meeting of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs at the Roosevelt Hotel.

Although William A. Roberts, former people's counsel, spoke in the morning on the A. B. C., sharing the program with Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, who discussed "National Representation for the District," the resolution was not the result of his talk. It had been prepared previously by the legislative committee, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Ernest William Howard after the women had attended hearings of the board last month on the renewal of a license for a liquor store in the vicinity of McKinley School.

The federation also passed a resolution opposing the portion of the Griffenhagen report proposing the abolition of the Board of Education in its present setup, and recommending that repairs for schools and playgrounds be under the jurisdiction of the Board of Education with large jobs under contract and smaller ones under the custodian.

Another resolution, offered by Mrs. D. G. Davis, chairman of the division of poetry of the federation, petitions Congress to give the former home of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes into the hands of a responsible group of worthwhile poets, which would conduct it as a poetry shrine. It would remain in the possession of the Government.

Suffrage Up To D. C. Women

The fight for woman suffrage will not be completed until women of the District have the right to go to the polls and vote, Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, told members of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday. When women of the District win the vote, they will carry the unenfranchised men over the top with them, he added.

Speaking on "National Representation for the District" at the federation's monthly meeting in the Roosevelt Hotel, at which William A. Roberts, former people's counsel, also spoke, Senator Capper declared an amendment granting District residents representation in Congress was not only equitable in itself, but compulsory under the American conception of government. This guarantees the right of representation to those who are under obligation to pay taxes and bear arms, he said.

General laughter greeted his statement that there were people in other sections of the country who regarded the District as "a tax-free paradise." He refuted this idea with the fact that the District pays internal revenue greater than any one of nine States, but its taxpayers have no voice in the expenditure of the money.

He disposed of the arguments as to the population being that of a city rather than a State, with the fact that there are eight States with less population than that of the District and that the voting population here, with residents who vote in their own States and the unnaturalized foreigners subtracted, would approximate that of Utah and New Hampshire and exceed that of five States.

Reorganization Won't Solve Problem

No matter what plan of reorganization is adopted for the District government, he said, the District will still be at the mercy of a National Government in which it has no voice and no representation. He cited the frequently mentioned fact that the present status of District residents is that of criminals and lunatics and that they have not the right accorded citizens of other States to sue and be sued in Federal courts.

The program yesterday was arranged by Mrs. Lloyd Morrison, chairman of the American Citizenship Department of the federation. Senator Capper was introduced by Miss Elaine Eppley, chairman of the committee on national representation. Mrs. Leo W. Kasehagen, chairman of the division of public welfare, introduced Mr. Roberts who discussed the functions of the Alcoholic Beverage Cohtrol Board and the proposal under the Griffenhagen report to abolish it and place liquor control under the police department. The abolition of the board would be an improvement from the standpoint of the city government from an administrative standpoint, he said, but would not take care of the quasi-judicial function of the body. He was of the opinion the board should be kept in existence to perform this function.

Cites Vigorous Enforcement of Law

Mr. Roberts discussed problems which the liquor control board handles and quoted figures showing a decrease in the number of arrests for drunken driving last year over 1934 as well as in the number of arrests of minors on charges of intoxication.

He declared there was vigorous enforcement of the law against serving liquor to minors and most violations were in serving it to girls rather than boys. This, he attributed to the fact that "you can't tell nowadays whether a girl is 16 or 36."

Mrs. Hazel Brown Piers, was in charge of the musical program, presenting Mrs. Raymond Mackay, violinist, and Mrs. Howard J. Klossen, pianist.

Mrs. Morrison Is Honored

Following the program there was luncheon in the Roosevelt dining room and at the afternoon business meeting delegates chosen to attend the General Federation Council meeting in San Francisco in May were Mrs. Le Verne Beales, Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley and Mrs. Edgar Briant Meritt and alternates, Mrs. Otto Hammerlund, Mrs. Charles Langley, Mrs. Charles H. Lane and Miss Mary Downey.

Mrs. Morrison was honored by members of her department at the luncheon. Others in the party given in her honor were Mrs. Wiley, Mrs. Henry Van Arsdale, Mrs. Kasehagen, Mrs. Daniel, Mrs. Roy O. Woodruff, wife of Representative Woodruff, Mr. Roberts, Jesse Suter, Miss Eppley, Mrs. Harry Landrus, Mrs. Grattan Kerans, Mrs. W. W. Sloan, Mrs. Johan Kondrup, Mrs. Hammerlund, Mrs. George E. Stringfellow, Mrs. Meritt, Mrs. Eugene E. Thompson, Mrs. Theodore Holdcamper and Mrs. H. King Stone.

Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas (left), yesterday addressed the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs on "National Representation for the District." With him in the picture are Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, federation president, and William A. Roberts, former people's counsel, who was also a speaker, discussing the Alcohol Beverage Control Board. The meeting was at the Roosevelt Hotel.

League to Honor Mrs. Roosevelt

Several hundred guests are expected for the luncheon being given Friday at the Mayflower by the D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters honoring Mrs. Roosevelt. Miss Marguerite Wells, president of the national league, will attend and the program will be a dramatization of the work of the organization's departments.

Mrs. Sydney Greenbie, author of "The American Saga," is directing the production, in which 60 will take part. The department chairmen who have collaborated in writing it are Mrs. Henry Chalmers, orientation; Mrs. Charles Hodge, child welfare; Mrs. Pearl B. Klein, legal status of women; Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, foreign policy, and Mrs. Charles Moore, education.

Mrs. Richard Hogue, past president of the Washington branch of the A. A. U. W., will have as her guest at the luncheon Miss Bhipoo Batlizala, who is here from India on a lecture tour. Miss Batlizala is an Indian nationalist and barrister and was formerly in charge of women's education for the government of Baroda.

Mrs. Alexander Wiley, wife of Senator Wiley, who was an active member of the league in Wisconsin, will be among the guests of honor. Among others who have accepted invitations will be Miss Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau; Miss Mary Anderson, chief of the Women's Bureau; Miss Belle Sherwin, former national president of the league; Mrs. Prentiss Brown, Mrs. Fred Bartley, Mrs. William Byrne, Mrs. Clarence Cannon, Mrs. Cassius Dowell, Mrs. H. P. Eberharter, Mrs. Harry L. Engelbright, Mrs. Samuel King, Mrs. John Lefinski, Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Mrs. Fred Bradley, all wives of members of Congress, and Mrs. Lucile McMillin, of the Civil Service Commission.

Miss Mary Winslow will have as her guest Miss Margaret Thompson, of London, and Mrs. Chester Williams will bring as her guest Mrs. John W. Studebaker.

Mrs. Wendell Lund is in charge of reservations, which close tonight.

Democratic Club Women Discuss Neutrality Act

"What About Neutrality?" was the subject discussed yesterday at the forum luncheon of the Woman's National Democratic Club.

Mrs. Howell Moorehead, of the board of directors of the Foreign Policy Association spoke urging an objective, thorough study of the provisions and effects of the present neutrality act and proposed amendments to it, and Mrs. George Hyman, introduced by Huston Thompson, gave a brief sketch of the art and its effect on belligerents during the time it has been in force. "It is one thing to try to stay out of war, and quite another thing to try to prevent war," said Mrs. Hyman, in urging the members of the club to make a study of the amendment to the act proposed by Senator Thomas.

By a large majority the members voted to continue such a study.

Mrs. Moorehead was introduced by Mrs. David Tucker Brown, the recently elected president of the club. At the speakers' table were Mrs. Huston Thompson, Mrs. George Hyman, Mrs. Charles Putnam, Mrs. Frederic William Wile and Copley Amory, in addition to the speaker of the day.

Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, chairman of the hospitality committee, was assisted by Mrs. Barton Stone Embry and Mrs. Alan W. Pease in receiving the guests attending the luncheon.

Texas State Society Holds Second Dance

The Texas State Society which has formed a dance club supervised by the Arthur Murray Studio, held it's second meeting last night.

The club meets each Monday night at the LaFayette Hotel for a one-hour session, and is proving very successful. Any Texan may join.

Methodist Home To Burn Mortgage Sunday Evening

The board of managers of the Methodist Home will have its annual meeting Thursday at the home, Connecticut avenue and Ellicott street, and on Sunday evening will sponsor a mass meeting in Foundry Methodist Church at which the mortgage on the institution will be burned.

Clearing the home of debt was the goal accomplished in celebration of the golden anniversary of its founding. Not only has this been attained but enough additional funds raised to warrant plans for a 12-room annex to the home and an elevator. These will be discussed Thursday.

A buffet luncheon will be served at noon to all who attend the annual meeting, sessions of which are open to any persons interested.

Mrs. Harry Hoskinson, to whose leadership much of the success of the anniversary fund-raising campaign is credited, is slated for re-election as president when new officers are voted on Thursday.

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, D. D., will speak at the mass meeting in Foundry Church Sunday evening at 8, and the music will be by the choir of Hamline Methodist Church, directed by John H. Marville. Dr. J. Ellis Williams, district superintendent, will preside.

Radio Party Is Tomorrow

Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, will open the General Federation headquarters, 1734 N street, tomorrow afternoon for another "radio party" and forum discussion in connection with the monthly federation broadcast from New York. The "radio party" is sponsored by the D. C. Federation, under its radio chairman, Mrs. Flora McGill Keefer.

Dr. Charles Pergler, dean of the law school of National University, has been announced as the leader of the forum discussion which will follow the half-hour broadcast, beginning at 3:15. The radio speakers on the subject, "Why Is There a Refugee Problem?" will be Dr. Emily Hickman, professor of history in New Jersey College for Women; Dr. Frank Kingdon, president of the University of Newark, and Raymond Gram Swing, radio commentator.

The meeting is open to members of federated clubs and others. Those who desire to attend have been asked to notify either Mrs. Keefer or Mrs. Edgar Briant Meritt, of her committee.

'Glacier Priest' To Lecture Here

The Ignatian Guild of Washington is presenting the Rev. Barnard R. Hubbard, S. J., the "glacier priest," in an illustrated lecture at Constitution Hall Wednesday evening, March 15. He has just returned from an 18-months expedition among the King Island Eskimos.

Last evening, the committee of which Miss Katharine A. Ruppert is general chairman, met at the home of Mrs. Bernard M. Wise, chairman of the box committee. Others present were Mrs. John J. Beatty, chairman of the patrons committee, and Mrs. Michael McDermott, Miss Cecilia O'Leary, Miss Mae Fuller and Mrs. John Reckert, members of her committee; Mrs. William F. Yates, chairman of the program committee; Miss Ellen T. Becker, chairman of the ticket committee, and those assisting her, Miss Mary Herlihy, Miss Mary E. Riordan, Mrs. Walter Donahue and Mrs. William Troy; Mrs. James E. Connolly, chairman of the schools committee, and Miss Brigid O'Flynn; William Troy, chairman of the publicity committee, and his members, John C. Reckert, Mrs. Julia Riley and Mrs. J. B. Horigan.

Proceeds from the lecture will go toward the completion of a sacerdotal burse for the education of Jesuit priests and work among the Alaskan missions.

2 State Groups Plan Gaiety

The Arkansas State Society will give a reception and dance at Hotel 2400 Sixteenth street, Friday night. Receiving and acting on the floor committee will be the entire Congressional delegation and the society officers, including Dr. Erwin H. Shinn, president; Ed R. Hicks, D. A. Dollarhide, Thomas Tatum, Miss Marie Coltart, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Miles, Mrs. Louise Hartley Wassell and Miss Betty Leigh Jacoway.

There will be entertainment features and prizes awarded for best waltz, ballroom dancing and chestnut tree.

The Montana State Society will honor Senator Burton K. Wheeler and Mrs. Wheeler, Senator James E. Murray and Mrs. Murray, Representative and Mrs. James F. O'Connor and Representative and Mrs. Jacob Thorkelson at its annual dinner and dance at the Wardman Park Hotel, March 11.

Other prominent Montanans and former Montanans expected to be present are Representative and Mrs. John H. Tolan, Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Carl McFarland, Mr. and Mrs. Chester C. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. Clinton M. Hester, Judge and Mrs. Joseph R. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Romney, Capt. and Mrs. Emmet C. Gudger, Dr. and Mrs. William M. Mann, Judge and Mrs. Walter J. Casey, Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Walker, Miss Jeannette Rankin, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry J. O'Connell and Mr. and Mrs. James H. Rowe, jr.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne

MRS. SAIDIE ORR DUNBAR, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, is returning today from Boston, where she addressed a meeting of the Mothercraft Club yesterday and was guest of honor at an informal supper arranged for her by club women Sunday night.

Friday she addressed a meeting of the Bergen County Tuberculosis Association and the Public Health Association at Hackensack, N. J., and Saturday was a guest at the fiftieth anniversary celebration of the Woman's Press Club of New York.

Mrs. May Dickinson Kimball, who for years has been chairman of mothercraft for the general federation, heads the Boston club and was originator of the mothercraft work.

MEMBERS of the Washington Club will hear a talk this morning at 11 by Nicol Smith on "Hainan Island." Mr. Smith some time ago led an expedition into the interior of the island which recently has been occupied by the Japanese.

Mrs. Gilbert H. Grosvenor, who has just returned from a trip to the West and South, will preside.

THREE CHAPTERS of the P. E. O. Sisterhood will meet this afternoon and tonight. Mrs. William E. Andrews, 1225 Fairmont street, will be hostess at tea from 4 to 7 to members of Chapter B, following their business meeting, with Mrs. Charles Marvin Jones presiding.

Miss Myrtle I. Seidler and Miss Adah L. Bagby will be joint hostesses at the meeting of Chapter D, tonight at 8, when State officers will be special guests. The session will be at headquarters of the Washington Federation of Churches, 1749 N street, with Dr. F. R. Moulton, permanent secretary of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, as speaker. His subject will be "Consider the Heavens."

The third meeting will be that of Chapter J with Mrs. Edgar A. Stansfield, 1752 North Troy street, Arlington. The president is Mrs. Elizabeth Wine Clark. Mrs. Bert E. Frost will have charge of the program on "Conditions in Germany."

Miss Hazel B. Nielson, president of Chapter O, presides tomorrow at the monthly reciprocity luncheon in which all of the chapters join at Woodward & Lothrop's tearoom.

BRIGHTWOOD REBEKAH LODGE and Brightwood Lodge, No. 30, tonight will give a joint reception in honor of Grand Master Hiram F. Johnson and others who are also members of the lodge. These include Fay F. Hunter, grand matriarch and captain of the Canton of Washington; Marguerite Ison, warden of Rebekah Assembly; Belle C. Thompson, president of the Ladies Auxiliary and Hazel Hunter, sentinel of the Ladies Auxiliary, P. M.

ALPHA TAU CHAPTER of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority at Wilson Teachers College, has initiated five new pledges, including Frances Boebel, Elizabeth Hall, Elvira Little, Elaine O'Flaherty and Margaret Ruckert.

Mrs. Henry Van Arsdale, chairman of the committee on war veterans of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, left following the federation meeting for Larchmont, N. Y., her former home, where she will spend a week with relatives and friends.

A GENERAL DISCUSSION of the relative merits of conventions and primaries for selecting party candidates will be held tonight at the meeting of the Arlington County Republican Club. The session will be in the Ashton Heights Woman's Club. John R. Hutchison is president.

ZETA CHAPTER of Chi Sigma Sorority has three members who this month celebrate their tenth year as members. They are Mrs. Dorothy Casey, Mrs. Mary Turner and Mrs. Catherine Henley. A testimonial dinner was given in their honor a few days ago with Margaret Bell and Loretta Cunningham, both former national presidents, among guests.

The chapter has its regular meeting tonight.

DELTA CHAPTER of Delta Alpha Sorority will hold a sorority fair or "What Have You" party tonight at the Eckington Church, North Capitol and Q streets.

Each of the four chapters of Delta Alpha will have display tables for exhibition of handiwork such as crocheted bedspreads, afghans, handmade quilts, needlepoint, knitted articles, drawings, etc., and hobbies such as stamp collections, knick-knacks, unusual snapshots, odd letters, and many other items of interest. Blue ribbons will be awarded for the best article in its class.

The committee in charge is headed by Harriet Whelan, assisted by Marianna Couch, Dorothy Plager, Grace Alley and Margaret Button.

Hugh Walpole Visits Papal Election Cells

Novelist Describes Rooms Where U. S. Cardinals Will Live

By Hugh Walpole.

Copyright, 1939, by International News Service.

Vatican City, Feb. 27.—Today I paid a final visit to the area of the conclave. I saw the cells or rooms where the cardinals will live, the dining room where they will eat, the beautiful corridor where they wil walk, the San Damaso Courtyard which will be for them a kind of out-of-doors garden, and the wonderful Sistine Chapel where the voting will take place.

The first thing that interested me was that the room allotted to Cardinal Pacelli, one of the most favored candidates, has 13 for its number Cardinal O'Connell drew No 44; Cardinal Mundelein, 54, and Cardinal Dougherty, 6

No rooms could be simpler than the cells which are spread over three stories in the Vatican Palace. Each is furnished with an iron bedstead one armchair, a washstand, a prayer stool, a plain chest of drawers and a crucifix. There will be several exceptions to this, special privileges of comfort having been accorded to the American cardinals.

Comforts for O'Connell

The aged Cardinal O'Connell who will arrive early Wednesday morning and who is in feeble health will have a room close to the Sistine Chapel so that he will not have far to go. And since this room has been recently occupied by one of the monsignori, it has a number of comforts and a splendid library of books.

Cardinal Mundelein will have a fine large, red plush chair and a comfortable bath room. Cardinal Dougherty also will be allowed a comfortable chair. The only difference in sleeping arrangements made for the cardinals and their secretaries will be that the cardinals are allowed two mattresses and the secretaries one. The beds all have several white wool blankets.

To my mind one of the finest rooms in the whole of Vatican City is the Borg A Hall. This contains magnificent tapestries and paintings by Pinturicchio, special favorites of mine because of their lovely soft colors and the perfect harmony they give the whole room.

It is here the cardinals will dine. They will eat at a simple long rough table of boards on trestles, and I doubt if there could be a finer sight in the world than these 62 magnificent cardinals seated amidst gorgeous masterpieces.

Conclave Tomorrow

The only other thing as fine pictorially in the whole conclave will be when they are seated in the Sistine Chapel to record their votes beneath the great Michaelangelo ceiling.

The congregation of cardinals today decided that each cardinal should be conducted to his chair in the Sistine Chapel by a member of the noble guard. Cardinal O'Connell will be escorted by Marquis Ignazio Lannari; Cardinal Dougherty by Count Alessandro Datti; Cardinal Mundelein by Marquis Giovanni Bisleti.

Everything is now ready for the opening of the conclave on Wednesday, and from 3:30 o'clock on that day this living world within the world will be hidden completely from that intense curiosity which surrounds it. From that hour, every moment will be a question mark.

Schafer Charges Mrs. Roosevelt Insured Clipper

By the Associated Press.

A heated exchange developed in the House yesterday when Representative Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, asserted that Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt had written insurance for a Pan-American Airways clipper. He said the insurance had been written by the firm of Roosevelt & Sargent, the concern in which James Roosevelt formerly was a partner. Later, Mrs. Roosevelt became a director to look after her son's interests.

Representative Ford (Democrat), of California, charged Schafer was maping a "pure, demagogic misstatement."

Texts of Court Opinions on 'Sit-Downs'

Here is a partial text of the Supreme Court's majority opinion, written by Chief Justice Hughes, holding that the Labor Relations Board had no authority to order the Fansteel Metallurgical Corporation to re-employ sit-down strikers:

First—The unfair labor practices. The board concluded that by "the antiunion statements and actions" of the superintendent on September 10, 1936, and September 21, 1936, by "the campaign to introduce into the plant a company union," by "the isolation of the union president from contact with his fellow employes," and by the employment and use of a "labor spy," respondent had interfered with its employes, and restrained and coerced them, in the exercise of their right to self-organization guaranteed in section 7 of the act (national labor relations act), and thus had engaged in an unfair labor practice under section 8 (1) of the act.

Owing to the fact that in September, 1936, the union did not have a majority of the employes in the appropriate unit, the board held that it was precluded from finding unfair labor practices in refusing to bargain collectively at that time, but the board found that there was such a refusal on February 17, 1937, when the union did have a majority of the employes in the appropriate unit, and that this constituted a violation of section 8 (5).

These conclusions are supported by the findings of the board and the latter in this relation have substantial support in the evidence.

Unquestionably Unlawful

Second—The discharge of the employes for illegal conduct in seizing and holding respondent's buildings. The board does not now contend that there was not a real discharge on February 17 when the men refused to surrender possession. The discharge was clearly proved.

Nor is there any basis for dispute as to the cause of the discharge. Representatives of respondent demanded that the men leave and on their refusal announced that they were discharged "for the seizure and retention of the buildings." The fact that it was a general announcement applicable to all the men in the plant who thus refused to leave does not detract from the effect of the discharge either in fact or in law.

Nor is it questioned that the seizure and retention of respondent's property were unlawful. It was a high-handed proceeding without shadow of legal right. It became the subject of denunciation by the State court under the State law, resulting in fines and jail sentences for defiance of the court's order to vacate and in a final decree for respondent as the complainant in the injunction suit.

This conduct on the part of the employes manifestly gave good cause for their discharge unless the national labor relations act abrogated the right of the employer to refuse to retain in his employ those who illegally take and hold possession of his property.

Third—The authority of the board to require the reinstatement of the employes thus discharged. The contentions of the board in substance are these: (1) That the unfair labor practices of respondent led to the strike and thus furnished ground for requiring the reinstatement of the strikers; (2) That under the terms of the act employes who go on strike because of an unfair labor practice retain their status as employes and are to be considered as such despite discharge for illegal conduct; (3) That the board was entitled to order reinstatement or re-employment in order to "effectuate the policies" of the act.

(1) For the unfair labor practices of respondent the act provided a remedy. Interference in the summer and fall of 1936 with the right of self-organization could at once have been the subject of complaint to the board. The same remedy was available to the employes when collective bargaining was refused on February 17, 1937. But reprehensible as was that conduct of the respondent, there is no ground for saying that it made respondent an outlaw or deprived it of its legal rights to the possession and protection of its property. The employes had the right to strike but they had no license to commit acts of violence or to seize their employer's plant . . . To justify such conduct because of the existence of a labor dispute or of an unfair labor practice would be to put a premium on resort to force instead of legal remedies and to subvert the principles of law and order which lie at the foundations of society.

Retain Right to Dismiss

As respondent's unfair labor practices afforded no excuse for the seizure and holding of its buildings, respondent had its normal rights of redress. Those rights, in their most obvious scope, included the right to discharge the wrongdoers from its employ . . .

(2) In construing the act in National Labor Relations Board vs. Jones & Laughlin Cteel Corp., 301 U. S. 1, 45, 46, we said that it "does not interfere with the normal exercise of the right of the employer to select its employes or to discharge them;" that the employer "may not, under cover of that right, intimidate or coerce its employes with respect to their self-organization and representation, and, on the other hand, the board is not entitled to make its authority a pretext for interference with the right of discharge when that right is exercised for other reasons than such intimidation and coercion." . . .

It is apparent under that construction of the act that had there been no strike, and employes had been guilty of unlawful conduct in seizing or committing depredations upon the property of their employer, that conduct would have been good reason for discharge, and discharge on that ground would not be for the purpose of intimidating or coercing employes with respect to their right of self-organization or representation, or because of any lawful union activity, but would rest upon an independent and adequate basis.

But the board, in exercising its authority under section 10 (c) to reinstate "employes," insists that here the status of the employes was continued, despite discharge for unlawful conduct. . . .

We think that the argument misconstrues the statute. We are unable to conclude that Congress intended to compel employers to retain persons in their employ regardless of their unlawful conduct, to invest those who go on strike with an immunity from discharge for acts of trespass or violence against the employer's property, which they would not have enjoyed had they remained at work . . .

Here the strike was illegal in its inception and prosecution. As the board found, it was initiated by the decision of the union committee "to take over and hold two of the respondent's 'key' buildings." It was pursuant to that decision that the men occupied the buildings and the work stopped: This was not the exercise of "the right to strike" to which the act referred. It was not a mere quitting of work and statement of grievances in the exercise of pressure recognized as lawful. It was an illegal seizure of the buildings in order to prevent their use by the employer in a lawful manner and thus by acts of force and violence to compel the employer to submit. When the employes resorted to that sort of compulsion they took a position outside the protection of the statute and accepted the risk of the termination of their employment upon grounds aside from the exercise of the legal rights which the statute was designed to conserve.

Authority Not Unlimited

(3) The board contends that its order is valid under the terms of the act "regardless of whether the men remained employes." The board bases its contention on the general authority, conferred by section 10 (c), to require the employer to take such affirmative action as will "effectuate the policies" of the act . . .

The authority to require affirmative action to "effectuate the policies" of the act is broad but it is not unlimited. It has the essential limitations which inhere in the very policies of the act which the board invokes.

Thus in Consolidated Edison Co. vs. National Labor Relations Board (decided December 5, 1938), we held that the authority to order affirmative action did not go so far as to confer a punitive jurisdiction enabling the board to inflict upon the employer any penalty it may choose because he is engaged in unfair labor practices, even though the board is of the opinion that the policies of the act may be effectuated by such an order. We held that the power to command affirmative action is remedial, not punitive, and is to be exercised in aid of the board's authority to restrain violations and as a means of removing or avoiding the consequences of violating where those consequences are of a kind to thwart the purposes of the act. We repeat that the fundamental policy of the act is to safeguard the rights of self-organization and collective bargaining, and thus by the promotion of industrial peace to remove obstructions to the free flow of commerce as defined in the act. There is not a line in the statute to warrant the conclusion that it is any part of the policies of the act to encourage employes to resort to force and violence in defiance of the law of the land . . .

Discretion Confused

What we have said also meets the point that the question whether reinstatement or re-employment would effectuate the policies of the act is committed to the decision of the board in the exercise of its discretion subject only to the limitation that its action may not be "arbitrary, unreasonable or capricious." The board recognizes that in "many situations" reinstatement or re-employment after discharge for illegal acts would not be proper, but the board insists that it was proper in this instance. For the reasons we have given we disagree with that view. We think that a clearer case could hardly be presented and that whatever discretion may be deemed to be committed to the board, its limits were transcended by the order under review.

The board stresses the fact that, when respondent was able to obtain possession of its buildings and to resume operations, it offered re-employment to many of the men who had participated in the strike. The contention confuses what an employer may voluntarily and legally do in the exercise of his right of selection and what the board is entitled to compel. . . .

Fourth—The requirement of reinstatement of employes who aided and abetted those who seized and held the buildings. There is a group of 14 persons in this class who were not within the buildings and hence do not appear to have been within the announcement of discharge, but who went on strike and fall within the order for reinstatement. The board made no separate findings with respect to these particular persons and refers us to the evidence to show their relation to the transactions under review. . . .

It cannot be said that independently of the act respondent was bound to reinstate those who had thus aided and abetted the "sit-down" strikers in defying the court's order. If it be assumed that by virtue of section 2 (3) they still had the status of "employes," that provision did not automatically provide reinstatement. Whether the board could order it must turn on the application of the provision empowering the board to require "such affirmative action, including reinstatement of employes" as will "effectuate the policies" of the act. We are thus returned to the question already discussed and we think that in that respect these aiders and abettors, likewise guilty of unlawful conduct, are in no better case than the "sit-down" strikers themselves. We find no ground for concluding that there is any policy of the act which justifies the board in ordering reinstatement in such circumstances.

Justice Stone's concurring opinion said in part:

I concur in so much of the court's decision as holds that the board was without statutory authority to order reinstatement of those employes who were discharged on February 17, 1937. But I rest this conclusion solely on the construction of Section 2 (3) and Section 10 (C) of the national labor relations act. By Section 10 (C) the board is given authority to reinstate in their employment only those who are "employes." Before the board made its order, respondent's employes, by reason of their lawful discharge for cause, had lost their status as such, which would otherwise have been preserved to them under Section 2 (3).

The national labor relations act, as its purpose and scope are disclosed by its preamble and operative provisions and explained by the reports of the congressional committees recommending its enactment, report No. 573, Senate committee on education and labor, Seventh-fourth Congress, first session; Report No. 1147, House committee on labor, Seventy-fourth Congress, first session, is aimed at securing the peacable settlement of labor disputes by the prevention of unfair labor practices of the employer and by requiring him to bargain collectively with his employes. Since one means adopted by the act to secure this end is the reinstatement, by the discretionary action of the national labor relations board, of employes when unfair labor practices have caused them to cease work, it was necessary to provide that they should not lose their status as employes by reason of that fact. This was accomplished by Section 2 (3), which provides:

"The term 'employe' shall include any individual whose work has ceased as a consequence of, or in connection with, any current labor dispute or because of any unfair labor practice . . ."

Having in mind the purposes of the act and the end sought by the enactment of this section, I think its fair meaning is that attributed to it by the Senate committe report, supro, pp. 6-7, which declared:

"The bill thus observes the principle that men do not close their right to be considered as employes for the purposes of this bill merely by collectively refraining from work during the course of a labor controversy. And to hold that a worker who, because of an unfair labor practice, has been discharged or locked out or gone on strike is no longer an employe, would be to give legal sanction to an illegal act and to deny redress to the individual injured thereby."

But it does not follow because the section preserves this right to employes, where they have ceased work by reason of a labor dispute or unfair labor practice, that its language is to be read as depriving the employer of his right, which the statute does not purport to withdraw, to terminate the employer-employe relationship for reasons dissociated with the stoppage of work because of unfair labor practices. The language which saves the employe status for those who have ceased work because of unfair labor practices does not embrace also those who have lost their status for a wholly different reason—their discharge for unlawful practices which the act does not countenance . . .

As to the 14 employes who aided and abetted the sit-down, strike, but who were not discharged, I think they retained their status under section 2 (S), and that the board had power to reinstate them. Whether that power should be exercised was a matter committed to the board's discretion, not ours . . .

Justice Reed Dissents

Justice Reed, in dissenting, said in part:

This court agrees with the conclusion of the Labor Board that the respondent was guilty of unfair labor practices, prior to the strike, in campaigning for a company union, isolating the union president, making, through its superintendent, antiunion statements and employing a labor spy. It also accepts the board's conclusion that there was further pre-strike violation by respondent of the labor relations act by refusal to bargain collectively. None questions the power of the board to reinstate striking employes as a means of redress for unfair labor practices. The issue while important is narrow. Can an employe, on strike or let out by an unfair labor practice, be discharged, finally, by an employer so as to be ineligible for reinstatement under the act?

The issue so stated flows feebly apart from the fire of controversy. But it may permit a more objective appraisal than to examine it when illustrated by conduct on the part of the employes which is thought to put "a premium on resort to force" and to subvert "the principles of law and order which lie at the foundations of society." None on either side of the disputed issue need be suspected of "countenancing lawlessness" or of encouraging employes to resort to "violence in defiance of the law of the land." Disapproval of a sit-down does not logically compel the acceptance of the theory that an employer has the power to bar his striking employe from the protection of the labor act.

The Congress sought by clear language to eliminate this prolific source of ill-feeling by the provision just quoted which should be interpreted in accordance with its language as continuing the eligibility of a striker for reinstatement regardless of conduct by the strkier or action by the employer. The constitutional problem involved in such a conclusion is not different from the one involved in compelling an employer to reinstate an employe, discharged for union activity. There is here no protection for unlawful activity. Every punishment which compelled obedience to law still remains in the hands of the peace officers . . .

The point is made that an employer should not be compelled to re-employ an employe guilty, perhaps, of sabotage. This depends upon circumstances. It is the function of the board to weigh the charges and countercharges and determine the adjustment most conducive to industrial peace. Courts certainly should not interfere with the normal action of administrative bodies in such circumstances. Here both labor and management had erred grievously in their respective conduct. It cannot be said to be unreasonable to restore both to their former status. Such resoration would apply to the sit-down strikers and those striking employes who aided and abetted them . . .

conduct of the Fansteel management "reprehensible" in its alleged interference with employes' right of self-organization, he declared there was no ground for saying this made the company an "outlaw" or deprived it of right to the possession of its property.

"The employes had the right to strike, but they had no license to commit acts of violence of to seize their employer's plant," said Hughes.

"To justify such conduct because of the existence of a labor dispute or of an unfair labor practice would be to put a premium on resort to force instead of legal remedies and to subvert the principles of law and order which lie at the foundations of society."

Justice Reed, joined by Black in his dissenting opinion, protested that "disapproval of a sit-down does not logically compel the acceptance of the theory that an employer has the power to bar his striking employe from the protection of the labor act."

"Courts certainly should not interfere with the normal action of administrative bodies in such circumstances," said Reed. "Here both labor and management had erred grievously in their respective conduct. It cannot be said to be unreasonable to restore both to their former status. Such restorations would apply to the sit-down strikers and those striking employes who aided and abetted them."

Justice Stone, in his opinion partially concurring with Hughes, agreed the labor act does not safeguard the jobs of employes who have been discharged "for unlawful practices which the act does not countenance." But while Hughes ruled against reinstatement of 14 employes who were not in the buildings, but who "aided and abetted" those who were, Stone contended, these 14 "retained their status" and the board "had power to reinstate them."

Setting aside a board order against the Columbian company's alleged refusal to bargain collectively with employes, Justice Stone in another decision said the court could find no "substantial evidence" that the company refused to bargain with workers, under the act.

Stone based his conclusion partly on the fact that the labor relations act was passed while the Columbian strike was still in progress. The board had ordered reinstatement of workers employed before the strike and displacement of some new workers hired afterward.

Justice Black, joined by Justice Reed, sharply dissented from the Stone ruling in the Columbian case and took particular exception to the lower court finding that the union struck in violation of a "no-strike" arbitration clause in a contract between union and company.

In another majority opinion, setting aside a board orde for reinstatement of Sands Manufacturing Co. employes, Justice Roberts ruled the company met its obligations to attempt to bring about a settlement. He held the employes violated a contractual provision not to strike and said the company was "at liberty to treat them as having severed their relations with the company because of their breach and to consummate their separation from the company's employ by hiring others to take their places."

Roberts contended the labor act "does not prohibit an effective discharge for repudiation by the employe of his agreement." Reed and Black also noted dissent in this case.

Black Rules for Colored

Other court action:

Set aside conviction and death sentence of Hugh Pierre, Lucy, La., Negro, accused of murdering Ignace Roussel, white constable. The decision was by Justice Black, whose former membership in the Ku Klux Klan provoked controversy at the time of his appointment to the court. Black held that Negroes had been unconstitutionally and systematically "excluded—because of race—from a grand jury and venire from which it was selected."

Justice Frankfurter handed down his first opinion, holding unconstitutional a Florida law imposing a fee for inspection of imported cement. Frankfurter, who said "it can never be pleasant to invalidate the enactment of a State," delivered his decision from memory, without use of notes.

The court refused in effect to set aside a labor board order against the American Potash and Chemical Corporation of Trona, Calif., directing reinstatement with back pay of 17 discharged workers.

The court refused to review a decision that the Federal courts lacked jurisdiction to halt picketing of the St. Louis stores of the S. S. Kresge Co.

The court refused to interfere with labor board withdrawal, for further proceedings, of an order against the American Cyanamid Co. and the Calco Chemical Co. of Bound Brook, N. J.

Mine Disaster Mysteries Keep Retired Specialist Busy

DR. GEORGE S. RICE

Dr. George Rice, Who Left Federal Service in 1937 at 71, Can't Quit Field in Which There Is Much to Do

[This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.]

By Gerald G. Gross.

Savers of human life generally are visualized in the dramatic garb of the fireman or the surgeon. It would jar the picture to introduce a certain elderly gentleman who wears no uniform, who just sits quite unspectacularly at an office desk, and yet he has prevented the loss of untold thousands of lives.

Furthermore, Dr. George S. Rice, although he officially was retired as chief mining engineer of the Bureau of Mines more than a year ago, desires to continue working at that desk just as long as he is able and until all mysteries surrounding mine disasters are solved. Slight correction: He is not satisfied to carry on all his future activities at a desk but hopes confidently that the after-effect miseries of an auto accident will soon subside sufficiently to permit him to go into the field again, which means down into dangerous coal workings.

Putting it in just those words, though, places Dr. Rice in a melodramatic light, which is not only unfair but misleading because he is a modest, unassuming scientist who is simply doing what he likes to do and to blazes with the heroics.

Developed Experimental Mine

On September 30, 1937, he left the Bureau of Mines—technically—after nearly 30 years' service, during which he drafted plans for the world's first experimental mine, directed its accident prevention tests, developed the method of "rock dusting" as a disaster prophylaxis and, in short, played a leading role in reducing this country's mining death toll from 1,000 to less than two score annually. At his retirement he was 71, having received a year's extension.

Since that time he has maintained the 9-to-4:30 office routine, as usual, except for that unhappy interval last year when he was laid low for several months as the result of being struck by an auto. The reason for his continued service is not an inability to break three-decade-old habits but that he still has so much work to do.

For one thing, there is the exhaustive report on mining conditions of this country and Europe which he completed shortly before going on the retirement list but which is still in the laborious prepublication stage. Covering approximately 500 printed pages, it probably will be the most ambitious work of his career, a crown for the numerous bulletins Dr. Rice has written on mine safety and which are in wide use here and abroad.

No One to Help Him

Working as a volunteer, Dr. Rice is supremely happy, except for one thing. Formerly he had a spacious office, with plenty secretarial and filing assistance. Now he has a small sanctum—which is perfectly all right with him—and no one to help him keep his voluminous papers in order. "I can't locate a thing any more," he says with a preoccupied laugh.

There is a chance that this little sketch of Dr. Rice will be read by a man, perhaps more than one, who owes his life directly to the mild-mannered scientist. The reference is to the Cherry Mine disaster in Illinois on November 13, 1909, in which 259 men perished. But 20 were saved as the result of a decision made by Dr. Rice, then a newcomer in the Bureau of Mines with headquarters in Pittsburgh.

Rushed to the scene of the mine fire on orders from Washington, he was met by company officials who told him they were preparing to seal the blazing works in order to stop the fire. Every man in the mine must be dead, they thought, and further rescue operations would be futile.

Dr. Rice had a different opinion. Some of the workmen, he reasoned, might have barricaded themselves in some far corner. His recommendations against sealing the mine was heeded and a fresh rescue crew was formed, himself included.

Result was that 20 men, quite unhurt, were found safe. They had had the good sense, as Dr. Rice theorized they might, to barricade themselves and just sit by to hope rescue would arrive in time, rather than trying to rush through the flames to attempt to reach the elevator.

House Passes 3 D. C. Bills, Senate One

Reorganization Plan Hearings Scheduled To Open Thursday In sub-Committee

By James D. Secrest.

Three local bills passed the House yesterday in the first District day session of the Seventy-sixth Congress and the eleventh District measure was adopted by the Senate. At the same time, hearings were tentatively scheduled on the Griffenhagen reorganization plan and the $13,000,000 tax program.

Bills that passed the House were:

Designation of the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge as the John Philip Sousa Bridge.

Reinstatement of David Thompson and Ralph S. Warner in the Metropolitan Police Department.

The bill adopted by the Senate provides:

Protection for banks from unjust claims in transactions having to do with deposits.

Two Go to White House

Two of the bills which the House approved without debate now go to the White House, having been approved by the Senate, while the third goes to conference due to a difference over whether reinstated policemen wrongfully accused of accepting bribes should be paid $20,000 in back salaries.

The District bill passed by the Senate is designed to protect banks from unjust claims by the enactment of various provisions relating to payment of old checks, forged checks, and the refusel to honor checks.

Pay Roll Tax Bill Introduced

Other local legislative developments in Congress included the introduction by Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, of a bill to give the Commissioners authority to fix the pay roll tax under the unemployment compensation act and sets a limitation of $10,000,000 on the reserve fund.

The present pay roll tax of 3 per cent, John A. Marshall, director of the Unemployment Compensation Commission, said, should be reduced to prevent the accumulation of further funds in the excess of unemployment needs.

After calling a meeting of the House sub-committee on reorganization of the District government for today to outline an objective and procedure, Chairman Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, said he hoped to start public hearings on the Griffenhagen proposals Thursday.

The Griffenhagen report leaves these questions to the sub-committee and Congress while suggesting that the District be accorded all the powers ordinarily assigned to a municipal corporation. This would include the authority to make local appropriations, now handled by Congress.

Budget Hearings Opened

Meanwhile, Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, started executive hearings on the District's $47,600,000 District budget for 1940.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan opened the appropriations inquiry with his customary financial statement, which showed that the District budget for 1940 is now $4,207,930 in the red, but that this deficit is expected to be covered in the $13,000,000 tax bill.

Earlier in the day the House District Committee favorably reported two bills affecting District firemen. One would give them a 5-day, 60-hour week, while the other would permit them to join the International Firefighters Association.

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, and a Senate sub-committee agreed after a conference to report favorably a bill which would establish a division for recording motor vehicle lien in the department of vehicles and traffic.

At the same time the sub-committee rejected an alternate bill, sponsored by Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, to establish a motor vehicle lien unit in the recorder's office.

Wet-and-Dry Debate Rages On After 5 Years

Prohibitionists See Return of Ban On Hard Beverages

By Edward T. Folliard

Five years ago this week John Barleycorn, allegedly an exile for 17 years, came back to Washington in legal guise. The date was March 1, 1934—just after midnight. What have these five years of repeal wrought in the National Capital?

They have not ended the controversy that raged here for so long. Regularly, in every Congress, Representative Ulysses Samuel Guyer (Reblican), of Kansas, introduces a bill to make this a "bone dry" city. Guyer, an alfalfa farmer who credits Kansas drys with sending him to Congress, says that he introduces the bill by request—that it was written by a committee representing Washington's combined prohibition forces.

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, which administers the local liquor law, looks back over the five-year period and concludes that repeal has been a vast improvement over the "unrestrained and unbridled days of prohibition." Here, according to the ABC board, are some of the results:

Revenue amounting to $9,000,000 has flowed into the District's treasury from liquor licenses and excise taxes in the 5-year period, a compared to no revenue in the prohibition era. Nine million dollars would support the police and fire departments for a year, and there would be enough left over to pay for the $2,000,000 John Philip Sousa Bridge, a new junior high school, and a new public library building.

Intoxication Arrests Drop

Arrests for intoxication, allowing for the population increase, have fallen off sinre prohibition. In 1933, the last full year of prohibition, 16,447 drunks were arrested. Washington's population then was estimated at 495,000, whirh made the ratio of arrests to population 3.32 per cent. In 1934, the first year of repeal, the city apparently went on a debauch, , the percentage of arrests soaring to 4.58. However, in 1938 it was down to 2.94 per cent. (There were 18,246 arrested, and the population was estimated at 620,000).

1936—331.
1938—238.

To the members of the A. B. C. Board—Chairman George W. Offutt, Agnes K. Mason and Isaac Gans—this is one of the most gratifying aspects of the repeal record. Back in 1927, when it was "smart" to get drunk, 414 youths and girls between 17 and 21 were arrested for intoxication. Now, according to information reaching the board, young people are becoming more and more convinced that it is smart to stay sober.

Fewer Drunken-Driving Arrests

1934—347.
1935—379.
1936—389.
1938—331.

A. B. C. officials recall that the drys, back in the pre-repeal days predicted that if liquor were legalized drunken drivers would make America a hell on earth. However, police figures show that, in the "dry" year of 1927, a total of 598 persons were arrested in Washington for driving while intoxicated, 267 more than last year.

Another gratifying development to the A. B. C. board last year was a falling off in the amount of hard liquor that was consumed, and an increase in the consumption of wine. In 1937 an excise tax was paid on 16,459 gallons of wine. In 1938 this jumped to 27,686 gallons.

400 Liquor Stores

Washington now has 400 retail stores that sell hard liquor, beer and wine, 647 that sell only beer and wine, 343 restaurants and hotels that serve all forms of intoxicants on the premises, and 340 establishments that sell only beer and wine. It has one licensed brewery, 20 wholesalers who handle hard liquor, and 19 who handle beer and wine. The ABC board administers the law at an expense of only $179,656 a year, which is 2.03 per cent of the revenue. That is the second lowest in the country.

What do Washington's drys think of the five-year repeal record? They think it is pretty bad, so bad they forsee the day when the city again will go legally dry. Their spokesman is Dr. Everett M. Ellison, of 1720 M street northwest, president of the United Dry Forces of the District of Columbia, made up of the Anti-Salon League, the W. C. T. U. the Y. M. C. A. and other organizations.

A ruddy-cheeked, white-haired man, who wears a gold chain across his vest, Dr. Ellison is far from the cartoonist's conception of a blue-nosed reformer. For one thing, he knows how to laugh. On the subject of liquor, however, he does not laugh. He calls it a destroyer, a "viper."

He was asked what he thought about the $9,000,000 in liquor revenue.

"That is far less than the wets promised," he said. "Anyway, what is $9,000,000 against the increase in crime, the damage done to human bodies."

"What about the decrease in arrests for intoxication?"

"I'll concede that arrests have fallen off, but the answer to that is easy. The police are more lenient. In the days of prohibition, they arrested everybody who showed any signs of drinking. Now you have to be paralyzed before they will arrest you. I think that's a good thing. The taxpayers ought to be proud of it.

"But anybody with eyes ought to be able to see that there is more drinking. Why, I have seen more drunks on the streets of Washington in one month since repeal than I saw in the whole period of prohibition."

"Do you think that the young people drink less? The police figures show that there are fewer arrests of minors."

"No, the answer is that the police are more lenient with them, too. It's my observation that the young people are drinking a lot. Why, they even take bottles to church parties."

Dr. Ellison said he was not interested in preaching moderation. The only safe definition of temperance is, he said, total abstinence.

"We know how habit-forming it is," he said. "We know that three out of ten who take a first drink turn out to be drunkards. That is confirmed by the Mayo Clinic. Leave it alone and you'll be on the safe side."

He said it was "idiotic" for people to talk about there being less drinking in the country when the Bureau of Internal Revenue figures show that the per capita consumption of alcoholic beverages increased from 8 gallons in 1934 to 14 gallons in 1938. He was reminded that the bureau never got the figures from the moonshiners in prohibition days.

"Well, there are still a lot of moonshiners and bootleggers," he replied.

Did Dr. Ellison think that Congress would ever pass the Guyer "bone dry" bill for the District?

"The prospects are excellent for some future date," he said. "When that will be I don't know. It won't be in the next 12 months. There are too many wets in Congress and the wets have too much money for us."

Will Rogers used to say back in the prohibition days that he wondered why there was so much controversy. The drys had their law, he said, and the wets had their liquor, so why shouldn't everybody be happy. Right now, however, the wets have their liquor and their repeal law as well.

Five years ago, alcholic drinks came the hard way. A knock on a door like that shown above and a "pass word" was often necessary

Bible Class Holds 33d Banquet

Dr. Rufus W. Weaver Calls for Youth Agencies to Dispel Confusion of Times

Unification of the objectives of America's youth agencies under the basic principals of "reverence in action" was urged last night by Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Baptist Union, addressing the thirty-third annual banquet of the A. B. Pugh men's Bible class of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church South. Judge Bolitha J. Laws, class teacher, served as toastmaster.

Dr. Weaver shared the spotlight with Senator Hattie W. Caraway, of Arkansas; Judge Eugene Black, former teacher of the class; Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor; and others. Class members' wives and families were special guests.

"Confusion, disillusionment, lack of employment and failure to possess a workable philosophy of life characterize to a large degree the youth of America," said Dr. Weaver, "while the agencies that mold the opinions of youth, such as secular education, the moving picture, the press with its distressing portrayal of world conditions, current literature with its total absence of inspiration to high moral adventure, and the confusion created by the divisions in the interpretation of religion, are among the important factors in creating the existing perplexities of the 'merican youth."

Other guests of honor were the Rev. and Mrs. Purcell Storey; Dr. and Mrs. Clifton Clark; Class President and Mrs. Daniel A. Dollarhide and family, Mrs. Eugene Black, Mrs. John W. Rustin, Mrs. Bolitha J. Laws, chairman of the class board, and Mrs. Earl Carson.

Deanwood Citizens Deplore D.A.R. Act

Action of the Daughters of the American Revolution in refusing to permit Marion Anderson, colored concert artist, to sing in Constitution Hall and of the Board of Education in denying her use of Central High School auditorium was deplored last night by the Deanwood Civic Association.

A resolution asking churches to aid in increasing membership of the organization also won support. Metropolitan police representatives expressed willingness of their department to co-operate in providing better police protection in the community.

Randolph Tells Society of Natives There Is 'No Reason Why' D.C. Shouldn't Vote in 1940

"There is no reason under the shining heavens why the District should not vote in the Presidential election of 1940," Representative Randolph, "mayor" of Washington, last night told the Society of Natives.

The society met in the auditorium of the Washington Club to commemorate Susan B. Anthony, "emancipator of women," and other great Americans born in February. Randolph made the observance an occasion to express hope that Washington women, through local suffrage, will be given an active part in the city's official life.

In support of greater local authority, Randolph recalled he had found it necessary to ask Congress to permit the District Commissioners to use their own discretion about when street lights should be lighted and turned off.

Randolph deplored the business privilege tax as a burden on small merchants and pointed out that with a sales tax the city annually could tap the pocketbooks of thousands of tourists.

Former Senator Owen, of Oklahoma, said he always felt the women of his State elected him to the Senate and recalled his sponsorship of a State woman's suffrage amendment.

Brookland

The District Government was called the most efficient and honest in the United States by speakers last night at a meeting of the Brookland Citizens Association.

The association adopted a resolution calling for retention of the present form of government and rejecting reform proposals of the Griffenhagen report which recommended a city manager-council form of administration.

Marvin M. McLean, association president, declared Washington is governed with less "graft and corruption" than any other United States city.

District Auditor Daniel Donovan urged adoption of the Overton tax plan for taxing the Federal Government on the basis of value of property it utilizes.

Georgetown

Three changes in District government proposed in the Griffenhagen reorganization report were opposed last night by the Georgetown Citizens Association. They were:

The proposal to make the board of education an adjunct of the city administration rather than an independent agency.

The recommendation that the Public Utilities Commission be abandoned in favor of a one-man agency with an advisory board; the association decided rate-making powers should not be entrusted to a single administrator.

The proposal that the Alley Dwelling Authority be dissolved and its functions assigned to several administrative agencies.

Other action at the meeting included indorsement of the Sheppard resolution for a Congressional study of a liquor dispensary system, approval of the proposal to license coal dealers and reference of Georgetown traffic needs to the organization's traffic committee.

Trinidad

Free admission to Mount Vernon was proposed by members of the Trinidad Citizens Association. With President George J. Cleary in charge of the meeting, the association voted unanimously to introduce a measure before Congress abolishing the entrance fee now charged.

A unanimous vote expressed thanks to the District Commissioners for pedestrian traffic regulation, originally sponsored by the association.

Mid-City Citizens

The Midcity Citizens Association indorsed the bill for investigation of package liquor deliveries in the District, with a view to instituting a municipally-owned liquor dispensary system. It also went on record opposing limitation of the number of taxicabs and asking that laws against coal bootlegging be inforced.

Dr. Frederick Blauch, of the advisory committee on education, spoke on the organization of the school system in the District.

North Capitol

The stand of the Federation of Citizens' Associations indorsing the Griffenhagen report in principle was supported unanimously by the North Capitol Citizens' Association.

Opposition was expressed, however, to provisions calling for revision of the school board and elimination of the department of vehicles and traffic. The group sent a letter to Henry I. Quinn expressing regret at his resignation from the school board.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, called for support of the $75,000 fund drive of the Police Boys' Club.

2 Bandits Rob Store Boy Athlete Saved Last Month

Two bandits last night held up the Pure Wine and Liquor Store, New York avenue and Seventh street northwest, getting $150, then took $1.50 more from a clerk before fleeing.

Victims were Mrs. Helen Mantzouris, 1522 Brentwood road northwest, wife of the proprietor, and Basil Efdimis, 1129 Seventh street northwest, clerk.

Last month a robber who pointed a wrench like a gun and attempted a holdup of the same store was captured after a three-block chase by Nick Mantzouris, 17, McKinley High School athlete.

Former U. of Va. Instructor to Be Aide to Mint Chief

Dr. Frank Leland Howard, 31, former economics instructor at the University of Virginia, will be appointed assistant director of the Mint to succeed Miss Mary M. O'Reilly, who retired in October, it was learned yesterday.

Dr. Howard has been serving as acting assistant director since December 15.

He was born at Hodgenville, Ky., and was graduated from the University of Kentucky in 1930. He started with the Bureau of the Mint as an auditor in 1934.

Capital News In Brief

While an excited audience sat in the Capitol Theater last night to hear winners of the $250,000 movie quiz contest announced, theater officials, including Carter Barron, district manager, wondered what to do with a lusty-lunged infant who had been left in the lobby.

After two hours of pondering, an announcement was made from the stage for the child's mother, if she happened to be in the theater, to please claim her baby.

In the meantime a young lady casually sauntered down F street, grasped the handle of the baby's carriage and continued her way down the street, refusing to answer any questions.

D.C. Bridge Couple Win

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Lemon, outstanding contract bridge players who are residents of the National Capital, won the Wilbur Whitehead Cup in the thirteenth annual Eastern Championship Bridge Tournament played Sunday in New York City. They were teamed with Dr. and Mrs. Llewellyn Lloyd, of Baltimore, Md.

Sistie Imitates F.D.

Washington is chuckling over the fact that Sistie Dall, President Roosevelt's favorite grandchild, can touch the tip of her nose with her tongue, just like her distinguished grandparents, Look Magazine declared yesterday.

The story is that little Sistie was discovered in class sticking out her tongue. Her teacher asked her what she was doing.

"I'm trying to touch the tip of my nose with my tongue," replied Sistie, unabashed. "My grandfather can do it, and my grandmother can do it, and now I'm practicing so I can do it."

Exercise Jockye Hurt

George Jackson, 18, colored, suffered a broken jaw and head injuries when thrown by a horse he was exercising yesterday at Benning Race Track.

Drunk-Driving Charged

Robert G. Langdon, 37, of 2812 Twenty-sixth street northeast, was being held at Ninth Precinct Station last night, charged with driving while drunk, after Policeman E. T. Elliott said he saw Langdon's car bump two others in the 800 block of Fourth street northeast and gave chase in a commandeered auto.

Cleaning Fluid Victim

Fumes from cleaning fluid yesterday overcame Charles Greenbaum, 51, of 4815 Conduit road northwest, owner of a cleaning company at 4241 Wisconsin avenue. A neighbor discovered the unconscious man and summoned the rescue squad which revived Greenbaum.

Home Looted of $900

Mrs. Catherine Wheeler, of 1733 Twentieth street northwest, reported to police yesterday that her home had been entered and looted of $900 in jewelry.

LOUIS-GALENTO TITLE FIGHT IS SET

Football Returns to Hilltop; Hoya Trackmen Prepare for Catholic University Games Saturday

Louis-Galento Fight Slated for New York

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Feb. 27.—Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis will defend his title against Tony Galento, the rotund Orange, N. J., contender, in New York in the last week of June, John Roxborough, manager of the Negro boxer, announced tonight.

Confirming advices from Miami Beach, Fla., that the bout awaited only formal announcement from Promoter Mike Jacobs, Roxborough said he had agreed to the match in a telephone conversation with Jacobs.

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 27.—The anticipated heavyweight championship fight between dusky Joe Louis and portly Tony Galento next June appears to be in the bag, awaiting only the formal announcement by Promoter Mike Jacobs on Wednesday morning to make it official.

After two heavy huddles last night and today, Mike sent out word that he would be "at home" to the press at his beach cabana at 10:30 a. m., Wednesday, and expected to hand out some interesting news. From another source, almost as vitally concerned as Mike is in the project, it was learned that the thing practically is set.

The contract will call for Louis to defend his title against Galento "somewhere in the United States" in June, the site and exact date to be set after Promoter Mike has learned whether any cities other than New York are greatly interested in bidding for the bout. That, of course, is window-dressing, and the fight will be held in New York at one of the ball parks.

Engaged in the solemn and weighty conferences here are Promoters Mike Jacobs, of New York, and Herman (Mugsy) Taylor, of Philadelphia; Joe Jacobs, manager of the great Galento, and Sol Strauss, of New York, who is Mike's personal attorney and a bearcat at drawing up fool-proof boxing contracts. Sol flew in Sunday night to protect Mike in the clinches—not that Mike needs much protection.

Taylor enters the picture because he holds a contract giving him the exclusive rights to Galento's services for five years.

Georgetown Drills For Crucial Game With Nittany Lions

Georgetown's basketball squad, present pace-setter in the Eastern Conference, is drilling hard for its important game with Penn State at Tech gym tomorrow night, when in all probability the league title will be decided.

The Hoyas, with five victories in eight conference starts, are only a half game ahead of the Nittany Lion and Carnegie Tech, tied for second.

Penn State, after an inauspicious start, now is the hottest thing in the conference, and will be a slight favorite over the inconsistent Hoyas, who were upset by Pittsburgh in their last league start.

Penn State defeated Carnegie Tech and Pittsburgh in their last two conference appearances.

Highlander Girls Win

The Highlander girls basketball team, one of the Georgetown A. C.'s strongest competitors for the Washington Recreation League title, joined 34 other victims of the Georgetown aggregation in the past two years last night, losing 40-19 in a title series game at Wilson gym.

Greg Mangin, Fishbach Bow In Net Upsets

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 27. — Illness knocked out Gene Mako and upsets eliminated two other seeded players in the national indoor tennis championships today, leaving only three ranking stars among the last eight in men's singles.

Mako, anxious to make a good showing in his first indoor tournament, withdrew because of a cold. His retirement robbed the tourney of its second seeded player. To the sidelines with Mako went two other ranking entries, sixth-seeded Joey Fishbach, national indoor champion, and seventh-seeded Greg Mangin, only former champion in the field.

Fishbach fell before the smart volleying and pounding service of John Shostrom, of Chicago, 8—6, 8—6, while Mangin, once agile enough to win four titles, put up only feeble resistance in bowing to Gus Ganzenmuller, lanky New Yorker, 6—1, 6—3.

Only Wayne Sabin, No. 11 entry from Portland, Oreg.; Sidney Wood, of New York, No. 3, and Frank Bowden, of New York, No. 4, came through to uphold the wisdom of the ranking committee.

Title Playground SoccerGameToday

Park View and Taft-Burroughs meet for the Playground Department junior soccer title today on the McMillan Playground, Second and Bryant streets northwest, at 3:45.

The winner will oppose Baltimore in the first round of the National Junior Cup competition. The more experienced Park View team is favored in today's test.

St. Alban's and Georgetown Prep will renew their Private School League feud today at 3:30 on the former's field. The hosts won the first game.

Hoyas Start Spring Football Practice; Hagerty Optimistic

Georgetown Mentor Foresees Another Good Year; Dubofsky Pessimistic

By Jack Munhall.

The groundhog is a phoney and now's the time to expose the little varmint. When that respected forecaster of spring darted back into his hole, and the weather men covered their faces with horny hands at the thought of prolonged winter and rain and more rain, he was a-foolin'.

Spring is definitely upon us. We saw the first signs of the wanderlust season at Georgetown's football practice field yesterday.

"C'mon get down there and dig 'til it hurts."

"All right, Mr. Astor, this ain't no tea dance, and it's mighty important, too. Now, one, two, one, two."

The booming tones of Mush Dubofsky's basso resounded across the clearing below the Hilltop, sending the birds scooting back to the South and the knees of 19 freshmen candidates into a St. Vitus.

Fears the Worst

It was unmistakable. There could be not the slightest doubt. When Georgetown's big, shaggy line coach shakes the cobwebs from his eyes and emerges from his spot of hibernation to take the whip hand over the Hoya huskies, spring is here!

It's a big, strong looking squad, isn't it Mr. Dubofsky?

"Huh? Yeah, they'll do. I suppose—until the first game. Boy, when I think of what Temple'll do to that bunch of beer-bellies!"

The thought completely overwhelmed the whole of his 230 pounds and Mush threw his hamlike hands to his wrinkled brow and pulled what was left of his sparse, stiff locks.

This couldn't be so. Didn't Georgetown have its first undefeated football season in 64 years last season? And weren't eight regulars returning, flanked by a promising lot of sophomores?

Maybe Head Coach Jack Hagerty could explain. Hagerty proved a different proposition and fairly beamed—well, he almost smiled.

"Aw, don't pay any attention to Mush. Beside him Gloomy Gil Dobie is an optimist."

"Seriously things are not so bad.

Cleveland Rams Sell Two Regulars To Redskin Club

The Washington Redskin football headquarters yesterday completed the purchase of two players from the Cleveland Rams, Marcel "Red" Chesbro and Carl Brazell, both regulars with the Rams last season.

According to the Redskin office, it was a straight cash deal with no players involved. The purchase price, as is the Redskin custom, was not announced.

Chesbro, a 210-pound tackle, was formerly an All-American player with Colgate, picked on the mythical eleven by Grantland Rice and Liberty. He was a sophomore at Colgate when Don Irwin, Redskin fullback, was playing his last year at the institution. In 1937 he was captain of Colgate's powerful team.

The advent of Brazell with the Redskins may fill a gaping hole caused by the shift of Riley Smith to the coaching ranks. Brazell is one of the finer quarterbacks in professional football, having earned All-Southwest Conference honors at Baylor University. He was a regular on the Southwest team for three years before going with Cleveland.

Army Medical Wins

Army Medical Center's unlimited five trounced the Chevy Chase 145-pound cagemen, 65-55, last night, as the teams prepped for The Washington Post A. A. U. tournament in March. Kremmens, with 33 points and Burgess led the losers while Boyer was high for A. M. C. with 28 points.

Bloodworth Still Seeking Myer's Berth

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 27.—Buddy Myer's successor joined the Nats in training today. Myer has not retired from baseball and he is very much a part of the Washington club's scheme for 1939, but the youth who will eventually take over the second-base job that Myer has held for ten years, is already in a Washington uniform.

His name is Jimmy Bloodworth, and with Bloodworth under contract, Clark Griffith is guarding against the day when the 34-year-old Myer hangs up his spikes or is incapacitated or goes into one of his unaccountable season-long slumps.

Only 20 years old, Bloodworth has already put in three years in organized baseball. Since 1936 he has been regarded by the Nats' bosses as the eventual replacement for Myer. When the Washington club sold the Chattanooga franchise in the Southern Association, to Joe Engel, it was with the reservation that the Nats retain title to young Bloodworth.

Right-hand Hitter

He's a stocky kid, from Apalachicola, Fla., one of the million Florida towns named by the vagrant Seminole Indians, who left behind such tongue-twisters as Palatka, Okeechobee, Alachua and Lacoochee, just to name a few of the easier ones.

He's not big, but he's broad of beam, weighing 165, and one of his charms as far as the Washington club is concerned, is that he's a right-handed hitter. On the day that he breaks into the Nats' infield, he'll be the only right-handed swinger in it.

Long hours spent pulling up fish nets as a lad and in the baseball off-season, have given Bloodworth a powerful pair of arms and shoulders and he'll poke the ball for longer distances than Myer. But that is the only edge he enjoys. In

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 27.

Man's four-minute mile, coveted, but elusive goal of the fastest humans, may never be recorded, but wintering here in Orlando is a horse that has already achieved the four-footed equivalent. He is the 7-year-old trotter Greyhound, and his time of 1:55 1-4 for the mile in front of a sulky last year was no less startling than were Glenn Cunningham to hoof the distance in 3:55.

POVICH.

There are no more trotting fields for the amazing Greyhound to conquer. He has run opposition into the ground. He has, in fact, run himself out of the trotting business. His mere presence in the entries is sufficient to scare out all opposition. Rival trainers know the hopelessness of attempting to beat Greyhound, unbeaten since his first start as a 4-year-old.

No other sports page figure rules the roost in his specialty quite as completely as Greyhound. For him there are no challengers. So acute has become his dominance that there are no more races for the horse. He will race this year on the Grand Circuit, big league of the trotters, only in exhibitions. As an exhibitionist, paid by track operators as a magnet for the harness fans, Greyhound will earn his feed. But there are no more purses for him to win.

"Greyhound 1:55 1-4" is the tag above his stall at the Longwood training grounds, 10 miles from Orlando proper. That "1:55 1-4"—his world record time—is at once the distinction and the cross that he bears. It stamps him as champion and it has removed him from competition because none can hope to beat him.

Cannot Go Into Stud

By their best times are trotters designated. They are known as Axworthy 1:57, or Gay Song 1:58, quite unlike the running horse, which may be known as platers, sprinters, distance horses or handicap and stake steeds. They do not drop down into cheaper company, but race in the class they have attained.

The pity is that Greyhound, winner of the famed Hambletonian, as a 3-year-old, cannot pass on his blood strains to future generations of trotters. Because Greyhound is a gelding, de-sexed early in his career to insure his tractability and guard against meanness and sulkiness, a practice among both harness and running horse breeders.

They gelded Greyhound because they thought he wouldn't amount to much anyway. And thereby hangs a bit of a tale. The horse which has already won $50,000 in purses, was bought at the Lexington yearling sales for $900. He was just another yearling, well-bred, but promising little as a stallion. He promised little because he was a gray horse. And never in the long history of harness racing has a gray horse ever sired a champion or even near-champion. Veteran harness men do not attempt to explain the prejudice against grays. They merely know that grays do not reproduce their speed in stud. Mares do, sometimes, but gray stallions, never.

Ungelded, Greyhound would be the most desired sire that has ever come to harness racing. His stud fees would match the $50,000 he has earned in his races. But he is fated to be a bachelor horse and will not give his image to future harness racers.

Compared to running races with its high-pressure training, its commercial aspects, its intrigues, doping, plotting and battery work, harness racing is a refreshing sort of business. They are not of an ilk, harness men and running-horse men. There is an affection between harness trainers and their horses than seems to run deeper than the bond, if any, between running horses and the men who handle them. With the harness men, a horse is a personality, not a medium with which to win a bet or a purse.

Like to Keep Their Horses

That's why, perhaps, there are few claiming races in the trotting sport. Harness men don't like to give up their horses to the halter brigade which can drop a certified check in a box and lead a steed away from the track as his own property. What is this bond between harness men and their horses? A veteran trainer here said he'd try to explain it.

"Well, I dunno what you'd call it exactly. Kinda reminds me of the time I went into the mountains of New York State. I was driving a buggy when I saw a bearded old fellow smoking a pipe on the step of an old shack. I asked him what he did around there and he said, 'Nothing much, just livin' here.' There were no provisions to speak of in his cabin and God knows how he made a living. I noticed an old bull pegged to a stake behind the house and asked him about that.

"'Wal, some damfool hunter shot his mother years ago, and I'm just keeping that bull. Can't give no milk of course, but he's company.' He had one old boar pig in a pen, and I asked him about that. 'Wal, I dunno, I'm just keeping him, I guess," he said.

"That's the way it is with the harness men and their horses. They don't want 'em claimed. Even if they're no account. They just like to keep 'em and have 'em around. For company, I guess."

Unattractive to Bettors

It's an expensive sort of sport, harness racing. They train their horses ten months a year to race two months for purses on the Grand Circuit and at the fairs. Rich men who have adopted harness racing as a hobby have been the salvation of the sport. They've introduced big stables and helped the game, else it might have devolved into a county-fair business.

Harness racing men, though, are looking with envy on the progress of the running-horse game. They think it's an inferior sport, but they admire its progressiveness. They have their own ideas about making trotting more popular. First thing they'd like to do is dispense with the program of running the trotting races in three heats.

"The heats kill off interest in our races," a trainer was saying. "Who wants to bet on a horse that has just won the first heat by ten lengths. The bettors know they won't get any return on their bet. Our horses are too consistent. If we can ever get the association to let us run our races in one dash—like the runners—it will help our game. It will be attractive to bettors. And if betting will help us get more tracks and more harness racing, why, I'm all for it."

The Brighter Side

By Damon Runyon

(Copyright 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc. International Copyright and all others rights reserved.)

Our old man always contended that men were ten times greater gossips and tattle-tales than women. He said one big reason for this was that the men had more opportunities for gossiping than the women.

He pointed out that the average married woman had to put in most of her time at home attending to her household duties and her children. She ordinarily had few social callers in the course of a working day and therefore no one to gossip with.

RUNYON

He said that while it was true a good many single women were on the loose, the majority of them also usually worked most of the day in the house or downtown in offices and stores where they did not get much chance to do any considerable gossiping.

On the other hand, our old man said, look at the clubs and saloons where men were to be found gabbing at all hours of the day. He said he had noticed that a raft of the busiest of business and professional men always seemed to be able to find time to spend in chewing the rag in clubs and saloons, or over a luncheon table, and generally much of of their conversation took the form of gossip about their fellow citizens.

100 Men and a Woman

He said that for every pair of women you could find standing gabbing on street corners, he could show you 20 pairs of men doing the same thing. He said the ratio was about the same for hotel lobbies and the corridors of the post-office and courthouse and city hall.

When it came to sitting on steps, our old man said it ran a hundred men to no women. He said he could not recall ever seeing a woman sitting on steps except perhaps in her own yard, while he could take you out almost any pleasant day and show you steps of public buildings fairly lo-

BAER FACTS

By "Bugs" Baer.

The Republican futurity committee claims 21 States for 1940, which leaves only 27 doubtful.

It's a sort of photo finish with no film in the camera. If that had been Will Hays or Jim Farley they would have claimed everything, conceded nothing and demanded a recount.

The campaign committees are getting as modest as a bubble dancer with no balloons. Why claim only 21 when you have a nucleus of Maine and Vermont to start with. Mighty hoax from little acorns grew.

On the Line
With Considine

CONSIDINE

It may interest you (and you) to know that you have gone into the sports stadium business. With a generosity that may astound even you, the part-donor, you will soon give the City of Washington a $9,000,000 arena, situated so close to the Capitol that when the President throws out the first rassler he'll land on the Ways and Means Committee.

Backed by Senator Tom Connally, the old fire eater from Texas, the bill for your arena has already swept through the Senate, been blocked once by certain members of the House, and shown enough life to indicate that it will pass the next time it rears its head.

The only thing that is doubtful about your sumptuous salon de socko is its exact location. Just at the moment there is a toss-up between two sites, one of which would ruin the symmetry of the fabulously expensive string of new administrative buildings. The other site is just where the Capitol is now located, but certain statesmen plan to have the building razed to make way for the finest edifice ever to house a dog show.

They used to laugh when C. C. Pyle, Tex Rickard, Humbert Fugazy and George Marshall went into their respective types of trances and dreamed out the blueprints of sports arenas with pearl studded shower baths. But the New Deal dreamers make bums out of those pros.

The Very Best That Money Can Buy

Or perhaps we should say that you are making bums out of those pros, because Mr. Connally has shown no inclination up to this point to pay for the arena himself, but will let you in on the good thing. Don't worry about the taste of the architecture, or the quality of the canvas on the boxing ring, because it's going to be the very best that can be bought. Your joint will seat 16,000 for fights, 2,000 less than Madison Square Garden and 4,000 less than the Chicago Stadium. But both those places hardly cost $9,000,000—but then neither of them have red plush ring ropes like your place probably will have.

The New Deal has always been sports-minded, except around the disfranchised City of Washington where it stands to gain no votes in return for a Government-built sports place. From June of 1933, when the PWA became the sports department of the Administration, 137 recreational projects have been built at a cost of $23,674,000. The money mostly went into field houses, playgrounds, tennis courts, swimming pools and the like. An additional $16,300,000 has been spent on 131 other types of projects, mostly community buildings, school gymnasiums and the like.

The cost of the dozens of outdoor stadiums that have been built by the Government since 1933 hasn't as yet been tabulated. It will run, of course, into many millions. The PWA will plunk down 45 per cent of the price of the stadium, as a starter, and it has often been spectacular in its choice of cities. Some stadiums have been built that hold more people than the city in which they now squat. The Orange Bowl, recently graced by a titanic cultural event that pitted Tony Galento against Abraham Feldman, was given to Miami because one or two important New Dealers were grateful to the Miamians for inviting Catholic University to play in the first bowl game.

The Real Reason Why It Failed

Since it will be completely impossible for the sports fans of Washington to turn out in great enough quantities to keep the mortgage wolves away from your expensive gift-arena, it seems likely that the Government will have to take over your marble barn and run the thing for you, which may mean a small addition to your tax. This presents an interesting prospect, with a Federal Boxing Commission, and other commissions to keep at a high level of sportsmanship such standard exhibitions as the horse show, dog show, cat show, six-day bike race, hockey, Bund meeting, dance marathon, Golden Gloves, professional tennis, girls' softball, track meets, and midget auto races. We want to see the first time Hymie Caplan appears before the Supreme Court to get a reversal on a decision against Solly Krieger.

It certainly is nice of you fellows to give this arena to Washington. All they asked for down here was a modest little stucco hall to congregate and yell, and to hell with the marble columns. But that isn't possible, of course. Its got to be colossal, and presumably the only reason why it caught its pants on a nail the first time it slid through the House of Representatives was that it didn't cost enough.

He said he never recalled seeing any women standing watching men at work, either, though that was a popular pastime with many men. He said they liked to accompany their watching with a little offhand gossiping, perhaps about the fellow who was having the work done. He said some of the watchers could generally recall something to the fellow's discredit.

Men Are Gabbier by Nature

Our old man said he had come to the conclusion that men were gabbier by nature than women, though through persistent propaganda across the years the men had pretty well established the women as the gabby and gossipy ones. He said since time began it had been a favorite trick of the men to make themselves out superior to women in every way. He said it always made him snicker when some fellow that he knew had a tongue loose at both ends spoke of women as gossipy.

He said, as a matter of fact, nearly all gossip started with the men who picked it up downtown and carried it home to their wives and other members of their families who otherwise would never have heard it. He said just let every man who is honest with himself just sit down and figure how much gossip he had heard from his wife as compared to what he had taken home and he would see the difference right away.

Our old man said to tell the truth he enjoyed a little gossiping himself now and then. He said he had never found himself in a gathering in a club or saloon or Pullman car or hotel lobby but what he soon heard his own voice wagging gossipily with the best of them. He said he would hear his own voice telling rumors he had heard about someone, or dissecting characters or speculating on motives.

Washington brought him up for a few days in 1937 at the end of the Southern Association season on the strength of his performance at Chattanooga, and he was not overly impressive. But since then they've seen him in exhibition games for Chattanooga in the spring, and Bucky Harris has taken a shine to him. At Chattanooga last year he blossomed as a .310 hitter and pounded the ball for extra bases. The Nats' Charlotte farm claimed him in the last month of the season, and he helped Charlotte to win the Piedmont League championship by batting .376.

Bloodworth's is a very unenvied job this year. He is attempting to displace in Myer one of the finest infielders in the league, and the man who was the fifth leading hitter in the American League last year. But Myer has a habit of slumping in alterate seasons and Bloodworth will not be farmed out.

A disconcerting note injected itself into the workout, incidentally, when big Roberto Ortiz, proved utterly unable to get the ball over the plate in pitching to batters. It was the first time during his stay here that he gave evidence of wildness Ortiz complained of feeling ill, and Manager Harris is still pondering that excuse.

Seton Hall Plays Cards; G.W. Away

Catholic University's surprisingly improved Cardinals seek their second consecutive and their third victory of the season, meeting strong Seton Hall, a previous conquerer, at Brookland at 8:15, and George Washington travels to play Baltimore University in the new Friend School gym.

The assignments for both local schools appear difficult. Seton Hall, one of the most formidable of the smaller court powers in the East, will bring to town a fast, high-scoring outfit which decisively beat C. U. in New Jersey.

Baltimore University is noted as an exceptionally effective home town team and is a match for the best opposition. The Oriole squad's biggest achievement of the current season was an easy triumph over New York University.

Post's All-High Quintet Is Selected

Eastern, Tech Are Awarded Two Places

Hancock, Battiste, Shulman, Blank and West Are Selected For High Positions

By Bill Burnett.

The Washington Post's official all-high basketball team, chosen after conferences with the seven public school coaches, the 60-odd first-string players on the teams and referees of games during the month and a half of competition, is made up of two players of Eastern, two of McKinley and one of Roosevelt.

Eastern's players to receive the honor are Capt. Howard (Soup) Hancock, senior, and Francis (Bap) Battiste, also a senior. The pair furnish the defensive of The Post team, both being guards. Though less than 6 feet in height, Moe Shulman, Tech's floor general, takes the pivot spot without an argument, and his teammate, Eli Blank, gets a forward berth. The other forward position goes to George West, Roosevelt's tow-headed speedster. The last three named are juniors.

That only three of the seven public school teams are represented should be an indication of the mythical team's strength. Whether a player was a sophomore, junior or senior was not taken into consideration in picking the team, nor was any equal distribution between the schools attempted.

Superior Players

The five men on the team got there one way—by showing superiority over other players in the league. Only one stipulation was made, and that was that each man take part in every one of his team's interhigh games. Several outstanding players might have cracked the outstanding five if they had been available for all the contests.

To "Soup" Hancock, the red-headed sparkplug of the White Tide, goes the captaincy of The Post all-high. For three years he has led the Lincoln Parkers in their basketball battles, working hard and efficiently in all games because he liked to play.

There can be no doubt of Hancock's defensive ability as well as his point-making talent. He paced Eastern's scoring attack with 56 points, being one of the most accurate pot-shots in the series.

Steadiest of Guards

Hancock's running mate at the guard position, Battiste, has been named by coaches as the steadiest basket protector in the high schools. Transfering from St. John's to Eastern this year, he got off to a slow start, but by the time the title tourney rolled around he was holding other stars to no points as he scored profusely. He was third high among Eastern scorers with 37 points.

Blank and Shulman, of Tech, earned precedence over another Mighty Midget, Moe Tannebaum, only because the latter missed two of the team's games. After several spectacular scoring sprees, Blank's selection was only a matter of course. The chunky and deceptive star was well up among other series players in the point department with 64 in 9 games, slightly better than 7 a game.

Though numerous centers boasted more height than Shulman, his all-round play was the largest factor in Tech's last-ditch scramble to the runner-up spot. When the chips were down, in the final game with Eastern, Shulman turned in 12 points and held his man to a scant 4. He was called the "dead-pan" player of the series, never frowning or smiling whatever the outcome. His work under the backboard was better than players with six inches more height.

George West's selection from the third-place Roosevelt squad may be a surprise to those who had high regards for Les Cooksey, Bart Fugler and other stellar forwards. West has operated throughout the season with alternating back and an appendix trouble. Slight, almost to the point of frailty, he was as aggressive as any in the league, amassing 66 points to take individual scoring honors of the series.

Lou Gevinson Favorite Over Felix Garcia

Pair Meet in 10-Round Arena Feature; Wilson Boxes Vic Finazzo

With one Felix Garcia supplying the opposition, Lou Gevinson—a veteran of some 15 professional fights—takes the second step in the latest of his "comeback" attempts tonight at Turner's Arena, engaging the swarthy Puerto Rican in a 10-round test.

Unknown and unheralded, except for some turgid pieces authored by Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn's purveyor of propaganda, Garcia is expected to succumb to Lefty Lou's gnawing left hook before the engagement is over. If you think otherwise, your opinion can be publicly proclaimed at juicy 2-1 odds.

Garcia, pinch-hitting for Johnny Dube, who went and got himself knocked out at Madison Square Garden last week, comes to town well recommended, however, by a group of gentlemen who give us their word he is durable and capable of surprising the slow-thinking Gevinson. Garcia is reported to have met the best in the business, although data is not available on his record.

The supporting card includes a promising six-rounder between aging Bob Wilson, of this city, and Vic Finazzo, of Baltimore. It might be the best fight on the program. Vic's brother, Eddie, tangles with Billy Corrigan in another six. Two four-round bouts pit Ben Cohen against Bobby Rube, and Kid Howie against Bobby Morris.

Badminton Results

District and Alexandria teams of the National Capitol Badminton Club retained their joint leadership and undefeated ranking last night at Central Gym, the former troucing Takoma, 4 matches to 1, and Alexandria toppling Interior, 3-2. Y. M. C. A., in the only other match of the evening, shut out Capitol, 5-0.

A. A. U. Tourney Encourages Regular Fives, Not All-Stars

Close Observers Agree Brand of Play Here Improved; Entries Close Thursday

Charley Reynolds, Joe Bertolini, Winfree Johnson, Joe Holman and others who keep a close watch on basketball played hereabouts in independent and league circles, agree that the brand of ball being shown this winter is the best in the last decade. They contend that there is more team-play than ever. Instead of having "fly-by-night" line-ups, the clubs are sticking to eight or ten players and are clicking in better style.

The District A. A. U. is, in a way, responsible for this. It has been discouraging all-star combinations and this fact has made players feel more secure in their positions and has made for better passing and less individual play. In addition, the players have come to know their dependable scorers and, in most cases, have sacrificed the personal glory of scattered point-making for a better chance to be on the winning side.

Rules to Be Followed

Chairman Johnson, of the A. A. U. basketball committee, said last night the rules, as printed on the backs of the entry blanks, would be adhered to throughout the tournament which opens at Eastern High gymasium on Monday night. He is particularly anxious that team managers familiarize themselves with this rule:

"No college or high school player will be allowed to represent any club unless he shall have entirely finished representing his educational institution in competition and shall file with the registration committee a letter from the head of the athletic department consenting to such competition.'

This does not mean that a high school, or even a college team, cannot be in the tournament, although as far as can be learned, none is entered. It does mean that high school and college players, if they are going to represent their school again, cannot see action in the A. A. U. competition.

There are college and high school players, many of whom graduated in February, who are eligible and may play. However, as Chairman Johnson brought out last night, no all-star combination has ever won an A. A. U. title.

For Regular Teams

"We believe that the tournament should be exclusively for the teams which have been together throughout the season and we are doing our best to keep it for them," said Mr. Johnson. "Please make it clear, also, that players who have registered during this season with one team cannot shift to another for the tournament."

In the meanwhile, managers continue to flock to the Boys Club, Third and C streets northwest and to The Post sports department for entry blanks. Thursday at midnight, the entries close at either of the above places.

Gonzaga Beats Mt. Rainier

Gonzaga Prep dug itself out of a 13-4 disadvantage with Mount Rainier yesterday on the Mount floor, nosing out the home team, 17-16.

It was O'Brien and Freddy Rice who paced the winning attack of Gonzaga. They scored six points apiece. Glynn, O'Connor and Baumann were high for the losers, each totaling four points.

Astor Clarke Tops Federal Pin Matches

Turns in Game of 148 And Set of 413 for Honors of Night

Astor Clarke, making a bid to retain his No. 1 ranking, monopolized honors for the second consecutive week in the Federal League at Arcadia, with a 148 game and 413 set. It followed his 471 set last week in the same league.

Clarke's scores led the F. B. I. team to a sweep with a game of 631 and set of 1,803.

ODD FELLOWS

Perce Elliott, Washington Duckpin Association president, topped the Odd Fellows League pinmen last night at Brookland Alleys with a 134 game and 360 set. The leading Columbia No. 1 five lost two to Mount Pleasant and Eastern and Brightwood gained by sweeping three-game sets.

TRANSIT WINS

NAVY DEPARTMENT

Ken Douse, of the Marine Barracks, topped the high sets in the Navy Department League at Arcadia with 379, while Wyndham had the best game, 135. Marine Barracks had top team game of 580, and Hydrographics top set, 1,682.

GEORGIA AVENUE

Senate Lunch upset the league-leading Silver Spring Dyeing and Cleaning team in the Georgia Avenue League at Silver Spring, led by Frank Miller's 360 set. Petworth Pharmacy won all three over Grotto Grill, with J. Knapp high with 306, while Grand Palace Valet won the odd tilt from Williams Heating, led by Bill Parsons' 352. Sanford's Cleaners, paced by Ken Schroyer, swept a set from National Electric Machines.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY

Harry Sole, bowling for the Operations team, had a 137 game to lead the Southern Railway Clerks League at Arcadia. Rudy Jarman, of the B. of R. C., had a 354 set and his team monopolized the honors with a 574 game and 1,617 set.

TAKOMA CHURCH

John Smith showed the way in the Takoma Church League with a 147 game and 368 set, as Presbyterian No. 1 won three from Emory No. 1. Knights team set of 1,670 and Christian's 597 game divided the honors. The leading Catholic team won three from Christians.

PROCUREMENT

J. B. Armstrong, of the Modernists, hit high game in the Procurement League at Lucky Strike with 149, while Ed Wilson, of Aztex, had 380, and the Aztex high game and set with 566—1,600. Leading Ionics won the odd one from Abodes, while Tutors broke a second place tie with two out of three over Normans.

CHEVY CHASE COMMERCIAL

JEWELERS LEAGUE

Henry May and Paul Schlosser divided individual honors with 139 game and 378 set, respectively. Pirrone and Wolter cleaned up in team competition with a 565 game and 1,664 grand total.

Bill Ackerman

ACKERMAN

"They'll take a fly, and yet there are hundreds of fishermen who'll tell you no one ever caught a shad on hook and line," writes a Baltimore angler who has found out that they do, and is casting his eyes in the direction of the upper Potomac in hopes of extending the short season during which they will strike—about four weeks following the spawning run, and which is but a few weeks off.

He continues: "With a light casting rod, or a fly rod, using a 2 or 3-foot gut leader and a '00' Huntington Drone, and playing the edges of the riffles just below Conowingo Dam, near the mouth of Deer Creek on the Susquehanna, you can hook into the scrappiest little gamesters a sport fisherman could hope for, and—believe it or not—they are Alosa sapidissima, or more familiarly, just plain hickory shad. Occasionally, you will hook a white shad, and believe me, either one of these fish will put up a far greater fight than any bass, trout or other small game fish. They'll tail-dance to throw the hook, and they'll swim ahead of you faster than you can reel. When you do catch up with your lure, they are gone. If they decide to go the other way, you'd better know your stuff.

"As far as I know, however, at no other time, except during about a month of the spawning season, and then only in fresh water, will they even look at a hook or a piece of bait.

"If they come up the Potomac there ought to be plenty of sport between Washington and Great Falls, and new thrills for those who haven't tried this fishing. Will you tell me if you have ever heard of anyone catching shad in the Potomac on rod and reel? If so, where? If not, could you say approximately how far above Washington shad swim, or have been seen?"

This Baltimore angler has found a phase of angling that is truly real sport, and at a place—the Conowingo Pool—where conditions are favorable beyond those ordinarily obtaining in Southern shad-run rivers. He has, however, mixed his fish a trifle. There is only one shad on the Atlantic Coast, the American shad—Alosa sapidissima. White shad to some in vernacular, and in addition Potomac, Susquehanna, Delaware, Connecticut or whatever might be the name of river of its spawning ascension. The so-called Hickory shad is in reality a herring, although often sold by hawkers on the streets of many Southern cities as shad because the run precedes that of the real shad. There can be no comparison in the value of the meat, but after casting their eggs both will strike at flies, bright shining lures and artificial flies.

In the Potomac, under the right conditions and at certain places, they can be so taken, although such angling is undertaken more favorably in the Connecticut River and those of New England and Nova Scotia. The best place in this entire area is just where this angler has found it, where the great Conowingo Dam stops the Susquehanna run.

Not so bad," he emphasized, licking his lips with a hungry tongue. We lost only two regular guards and a tackle, and there's three or four good prospects coming along. It won't be an undefeated season, but we should win more'n we lose."

Nor is Hagerty's outlook exaggerated. Georgetown has potentially the most powerful squad in its history. Back from the eleven which swept through an eight-game schedule without defeat are Joe Mellendeck, All-District halfback and All-American mention, as well as other capable backfield men, Jim Castiglia, All-District fullback and a great blocker; Jack Spencer and Lou Ghecas, running stars, and Joe McFadden, a quarterback who last season became one of the few sophomore signal-callers ever to receive All-City honors.

The line shapes up strong, too. Though Joe Frank and Bill Burke, all-District tackle and guard, respectively, and Jim Hill, a second exceptionally good guard will be gone, Hagerty otherwise has his regular forward wall intact. Al Matuza comes back for center. The ends are plentiful, Joe Daniels, Bob Kercher, an all-District, and William Wixted, although the latter may be shifted to tackle. Earl Fullilove, Frank's tackle running mate, will be on hand heavier and better than ever.

The gaping holes left by the graduation of Hill and Burke, Hagerty feels confident, will be plugged by Mark Ostinato and Augie Lio, a pair of sophomore sensations. And, what's more, there is a pair of backs from last season's unbeaten frosh that look too good to be true. Benny Dulvin, a smart runner, and big Lou Falcone, a savage blocker, are two who do much to soothe Hagerty to peaceful slumber.

Winfrey's Early Settler Wins by 5 Lengths at Hialeah

White Hot Takes Place; Strut Shows

Favorite Pays $4.90 In Turf Event; Eddie Arcaro Rides Winner; 10,000 See Races

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 27.—After four straight favorites had fallen by the wayside, W. C. Winfrey's Early Settler, a $4.90 for $2 shot, gave the talent a chance to cheer in the 1 1-16 miles turf course event, which held the featured spot on today's card. More than 10,000 fans were present as the final week of the Miami Jockey Club's 46-day session began, and they saw Early Settler gallop home by five lengths in 1:47 2-5 under top weight of 122 pounds, which included Eddie Arcaro.

White Hot, representing J. Summers in the field of seven above-the ordinary platers, responded gamely in the closing strides to earn the place by a half length. T. H. McCaffrey's Strut was third.

Victor Gets Away

Showing more foot away from the gate than usual, Early Settler was hustled into second place around the first bend as the speedy Dulcimer opened up a daylight advantage. The favorite, performing as if outclassing his opposition, easily shot past Dulcimer after straightening on the backstretch.

Kept under wraps, the Winfrey 5-year-old just toyed with the field and, in the last furlong, romped farther clear for a hollow triumph. White Hot, a stretch runner, ran past Dulcimer and Strut in the closing drive, while Strut barely outlasted Dulcimer. Skagerrak, a trailer all the way, pulled up lame.

GOLDEN MANDA	(Peters)	118	1	11	12	12	11.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PIQUET, $13.40, $9.00, $7.90; WELDING, $7.80, $5.70; MADAM CAPET, $7.00.

PIQUET, unruly and unhandled at the post, broke rapidly and cleanly followed the pace closely and outlasted her opposition when the final issue came. WELDING, well behaved before the start, went into contention swiftly in the opening quarter mile and finished gamely and just failed to get up. MADAM CAPET assumed a short lead in the run out of the chute while drifting out slightly. She held on tenaciously through the stretch, but was unable to maintain her lead. MARION W., vigorously urged throughout, could not keep pace with the leaders. FRIARS SCOUT, handled at the start, broke into the air and, slowly bearing out after the break, had no chance.

SECOND RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-old maidens. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:33. Off at 2:36½. Winner, Mrs. W. H. Kane's b. c. (3), by Burgoo King—Blue Eyed Peggie. Trained by H. L. Campbell. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:12 3-5, 1:25 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KINGOO, $8.00, $4.20, $3.80; MASTER HOWARD, $3.90, $3.40; BEAU INSCO, $6.70.

KINGOO, in tight quarters while going forwardly in the early stages, swung around the leader coming into the stretch, responded determinedly to pressure and drew out in the final furlong. MASTER HOWARD forced a steady pace all the way, took command on the stretch turn, but was not equal to the winner in the final drive. BEAU INSCO moved into contention while saving ground in the first half mile, continued gamely through the stretch and outlasted HUMMING. The latter broke a bit tardy, worked his way up on the extreme outside, but then hung in the final drive.

Daily Double, Piquet and Kingoo, paid $116.50.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:03. Off at 3:06. Winner, H. E. Enger's ch. f. (3), by Luciullite—Tokio Belle. Trained by C. A. Grande. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 0:46 3-5, 1:13.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DIANAPAT, $32.20, $16.90, $7.70; AMERCUP, $5.60, $4.60; OKLAB, $4.60.

DIANAPAT, away forwardly, went in closest pursuit of the leader under light restraint until straightened into the stretch, closed gamely in the final furlong and outlasted AMERCUP. The latter, poorly ridden and messed about, finished with a game challenge and may have been the best. OKLAB displayed good speed and raced GIBOUR into defeat, but then faltered in the final drive. GIBOUR moved up on the outside with a bold bid entering the stretch, but faltered and was pinched back the last 50 yards.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. Grade C. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 3:34. Off at 3:37. Winner, Glen Riddle Farm's str. g. (3), by Gino-Sunwina. Trained by G. Conway. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:22 2-5, 0:46, 1:11 4-5.

BANNER GIRL	(Yarberry)	106	3	7	7h	7h	7h	11	6.35

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SNOW, $20.40, $9.00, $6.20; BRIGHT VICTORY, $3.70, $4.60; TWIST, $12.80.

SNOW broke tardily, moved up steadily on the inside until midway around the turn, he was taken to the outside, continued to better his position and, wearing BRIGHT VICTORY down through the stretch, won going away. BRIGHT VICTORY, going forwardly while saving ground, was carried out by ROYAL TASTE entering the stretch, but responded gamely and assured the command, but was no match for the winner in the final drive. TWIST, a prominent contender, was troubled by ROYAL TASTE running out. He closed gamely when clear and was easily best of the others. MAJOR B., prominent throughout, was bumped off his stride approaching the furlong pole and then weakened.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (turf). Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Bess Ehrhardt. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:04. Off at 4:06. Winner, W. C. Winfrey's br. g. (5), by Swift and Sure—Rosemar. Trained by W. C. Winfrey. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:47 2-5.

SKAGERRAK	(Hanford)	112	6	7	7	7	7	7	7	6.85

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EARLY SETTLER, $4.90, $3.50, $2.70; WHITE HOT, $6.30, $4.20; STRUT, $3.70.

EARLY SETTLER, away forwardly and going in close pursuit of the leader in the early stages, took command midway down the backstretch and held sway thereafter to win in hand. WHITE HOT, under stout restraint and saving ground the first furlongs, came around the leaders through the stretch and wore STRUT down in the final drive. STRUT, eased off the early pace, moved up stoutly rounding the lower turn, finished gamely under a drive, but was not good enough. DULCIMER outbroke the field, displayed good speed, but faltered in the final drive.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:32. Off at 4:33. Winner, P. Whitaker's ch. g. (3), by Stepan Fetchit—Dicty. Trained by J. Howard. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48 3-5, 1:13 3-5, 1:39 4-5, 1:53.

CHANCE WATCH	(Ashcroft)	105	7	3	7½	7h	8	8	8	14.35

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DICTY STEP, $9.20, $3.80, $3.00; STOCKBOARD, $3.40, $2.80; CORONADO, $3.10.

DICTY STEP held his opposition safe for speed and cleverly rated in front, drew out entering the stretch and won with speed in reserve. STOCKBOARD bettered his position steadily while saving ground in the early stages, responding gamely when the real test came and outlasted the others. CORONADO, on the outside all the way, closed gamely to punishment to outlast GREEDAN. The latter, a forward contender throughout, faltered in the stretch drive.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 5:00. Off at 5:00½. Winner, A. J. Halliwell's br. g. (10), by Epinard—Prudish. Trained by E. Dubois. Value to winner, $700; second, $300; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48 1-5, 1:13 3-5, 1:40 2-5, 1:54.

JEN	(R.Renick)	108	5	4	4h	7h	9	9	9	62.15

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ESPINACA, $6.50, $3.10, $2.80; REBUTTAL, $3.40, $3.20; DON COSSACK, $5.00.

ESPINACA, slow to find his stride, began to better his position while circling the field midway down the backstretch. He wore REBUTTAL down through the stretch, but was ridden out briskly to the end. REBUTTAL, under steadying restraint early, moved up fast and took command entering the stretch, but could not stave off the winner's bid. DON COSSACK showed good speed and raced WINGED VICTORY into defeat in the early stages. He faltered in the last quarter mile, yet held the others safe. MALICE closed a big gap.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:30. Off at 5:31½. Winner, E. Miller's b. g. (8), by Stratford—Corbally Queen. Trained by S. R. Shapoff. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:13, 1:40 3-5, 1:54 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BALLYSTRATFORD, $7.50, $4.50, $3.40; BOGERTIN, $8.20, $4.60; MANY MOONS, $3.90.

BALLYSTRATFORD took command at once and rated in front to the stretch turn, where he started to drift out, but, continuing gamely, outlasted BOGERTIN in the final drive. BOGERTIN, outrun in the opening half mile, saved much ground rounding the lower turn and gained steadily, but could not overhaul the winner. MANY MOONS also saved ground until entering the stretch, then came off the rail and made a bold bid, but hung through the stretch. JOLYON, under a hard drive the last half mile, could not reach the leaders.

Staff Cassell Appointed American U. Athletic Director

Welsh's Successor Forsook Ministry For Coaches Job

Another chapter in the colorful story of one of Washington's most popular sports figures was inscribed in the records yesterday when the board of trustees at American University announced the appointment of Stafford H. Cassell as athletic director.

First a coal miner, then a star athlete and divinity student at A. U. and for the past two years its successful basketball coach, the curly haired Cassell now takes his place as one of the youngest athletic directors in the country.

Cassell's appointment fills the vacancy created by the resignation of Gus Welch, revealed several months ago, and effective March 1. His new duties will include not only basketball and intramural sports supervision but also football and track under the present arrangements.

Cassell made his first appearance at American University as a student and a highly touted scholastic athlete in 1934. Fresh from Dickinson Junior College in Pennsylvania, Staff entered the Methodist institution bearinng clippings to prove he had earned varsity letters in four sports at Dickinson and a scroll testifying his selection as that school's most valuable student for scholarship, character and personality and extra-curricular activities.

Engrossed with his ministerial studies, Cassell remained out of sports his first two years at A. U. Then, having decided to forsake that calling in favor of a possible coaching career, he returned and quickly carved his name deep in the niches of Eagles history.

For his accomplishments on the basketball court he received a forward's berth on the All-District team. He won similar honors in football, the only other major sport at A. U. at that time.

After graduating with honors Cassell took a position as A. U.'s field representative, contacting potential students and lecturing to high school audiences. With that job he was promised later the position of assistant athletic director, which he received last year. Soon after he supplanted Paul Smith as basketball coach and in the spring took over the baseball nine.

Home Loan Bank Assets 4.43 Billion

Up 318 Million in Year; 158 Savings Groups Admitted in 1938

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Membership of the Federal Home Loan Bank System closed last year with total assets of $4,432,238,000, a gain of $318,000,000 over 1937, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board has been notified by its division of research and statistics.

In its annual report on membership progress, the division announced that 158 savings and loan associations and insurance companies with aggregate assets of $134,652,000 were admitted as members during the year. Mergers and consolidations of small associations, together with a few withdrawals, reduced net increase in the membership to 19 from 1937, bringing the total net membership up to 3,951 institutions as of December 31. The division also referred to the large aggregate increase in assets of all members.

Savings and loan associations constitute 99 per cent of Federal Home Loan Bank System membership in point of number and they have 85 per cent of total assets. Savings and loan membership at the end of 1938 represented 43 per cent of the total number of all such associations in the country and 65 per cent of all their assets, which compare with 40 per cent and 61 per cent, respectively, for 1937.

Fifty-three per cent of the total number of members of the system at the end of the year had their accounts insured up to $5,000 for each investor by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation. Their assets constituted 48 per cent of the assets of all members. Comparable ratios for 1937, 48 per cent and 42 per cent, respectively, indicate the growth in number and increasing strength of insured associations, the division stated.

Building and Loan Dinner

One of the last of a series of winter social events given by business groups this year will be the banquet and dance of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League, scheduled for March 25 at the Mayflower Hotel, and indications point to an attendance of more than 500.

Chairman of the general committee arranging the dinner is Martin A. Cook, with Rudolph W. Santelmann, vice chairman. Mr. Cook has selected an efficient group of committeemen whose assignments guarantee an enjoyable evening. The entertainment section lists as its personnel: Fred A. Smith, William N. Payne, jr., Edward K. Jones, Robert E. Buckley, Odell S. Smith, J. Hawley Smith, Edward L. McAleer, Wilfred H. Blanz and Mr. Cook.

Other committees consist of: Invited guests—Arthur G. Bishop C. Clinton James, Edward C. Baltz and Carl J. Bergmann; seating: Raymond K. Espey, Mr. Santelmann, Mr. Buckley, Mr. James, Mr. Jones and Mr. Cook; reception: Mr. Buckley, F. Willson Camp, Schuyler S. Symons, Clarence E. Kefauver, and members of committees listed above.

Controllers Institute

W. R. Little, president of the local control of the Controllers Institute of America will preside at the regular monthly meeting of the institute to be held at the Carlton Hotel tonight. The guest speaker of the evening, William Gordon Buchanan, C. P. A., will discuss the subject, "Capitalism in Democracy."

The meeting will follow a dinner for the members of the Controllers Institute to be held at 6:30 p. m.

Rain, Snow Lower Price of Wheat

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—Reports of good rains and snows in the winter wheat belt helped to lower wheat prices almost a cent a bushel today.

Traders said receipt of beneficial moisture is important just before the growing season begins. The acreage planted to wheat is considerably smaller than a year ago.

Wheat closed ½@⅞ lower than Saturday; May and July, 68¼@68¾; corn, ⅝@⅞ down; May, 48⅝@48¾; July, 49⅞@50; Oats, ⅛@¼ lower.

ICC Officials Hold Rail Rates In South Unfair

Recommend Sweeping Revisions to Equalize Freight Tariffs

By the United Press.

Two Interstate Commerce Commission officials yesterday recommended sweeping revision of international freight rates in Southern States to bring them in line with those prevailing in other areas.

Examiner Michael Corcoran and Commissioner William E. Lee reported to the commission, after studying an appeal by eight Southern States, that rates in the South be adjusted to permit Southern producers to operate on equal competitive terms with those in other sections.

The two officials, however, suggested no immediate action, although they listed many articles, principally iron, on which Southern rates were held to be exorbitant. Because of the "rather extensive revision" which will be necessary, their report stated, a specific basis of adjustment must be reached before the revision is ordered. The full commission will decide later whether the recommendations will be adopted.

Meanwhile, the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee conducted hearings on bills by Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, and others to forbid the I. C. C. to grant "undue or unreasonable" advantages to shippers in any region. The bills propose abolition of sectional freight rate differentials.

C. E. Childe, transportation counsel, of Omaha, Nebr., told the committee the elimination of the differentials would help solve the Nation's labor and farm problems, and increase railroad revenues.

Freight Trains Set New High Record For Average Speed

A new high record in the average speed of freight trains was established by the railroads of the United States in 1938, J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, announced yesterday. This average speed was 61 per cent higher than in 1920.

In 1938, the average distance traveled per train per day was 398 miles, compared with 386 miles in 1937 and 247 miles in 1920. This represents the average time required for the movement of all freight trains between terminals, including all delays en route.

In many instances freight trains are now being operated on what were formerly passenger schedules. The fruit grower in California is now four days nearer the Eastern seaboard markets than formerly, and corresponding reductions in freight train schedules have also been made between many other parts of the United States. Between many important commercial centers, in some cases as much as 500 miles apart, overnight freight service is being furnished by the railroads.

100 Top Stocks Maintain Price Level; Rails, Equipments, Aircrafts in Demand; Treasury and Rail Bonds Advance

New York, Feb. 27.—Share prices turned irregular today as professional traders cashed profits from the spurt of late last week. A strong demand for railroad, carrier equipment and aviation issues, however, supplied needed leadership to maintain the general level of the market. The composite price of the 100 top stocks ended 0.09 point up. Transactions of 745,425 shares were under the total of the two-hour Saturday session.

Speculators appeared to ignore the Supreme Court decision reversing the National Labor Relations Board and outlawnig sit-down strikes. Yet Wall Street observers were of the opinion that the development is even more favorable to business than the gestures and promises of aid and sympathy from governmental leaders.

Good Rail Buying

Buying in the railroad division was described by commission houses as of a good type. Investors are said to be returning to the rails less gingerly, encouraged by the favorable trend of January rail operating income figures. Two good examples of the better drift of carrier revenues were included in the day's news. New York Central's N.O. I. for January was $2,147,000 against a deficit of $173,000 i the like 1938 month. Pennsylvania's figures, which came out after the close, show operating income for the month of $4,998,000, more than double the $2,241,000 reported for January last year. Stocks of both roads appeared in the most active list for fair gains.

International Telephone led the market in turnover following news that France, Britain and some of the smaller nations had recognized Gen. Franco's victory in Spain, and that steps are being taken for a rehabilitation loan. The shares rose ⅜, closing at 9¼ on sales of 26,000.

While aviations were lower, ten leaders included for the first time in the table of stock exchange issues showing a decline of 0.23 point, buying support was in evidence on all recessions. North American was traded to the extent of nearly 17,000 shares and volume for the section was the largest of any big board group excepting grade A rails with ten more issues.

Steels sold off moderately as day-to-day traders evened up. News from the industry was cheering. Steel ingot production recovered following the holiday week to the best level since the week of December 12, 1938, and announcements were made of the placing of substantial tonnages of steel for construction and railroad purposes.

Coppers Improve

Coppers improved a little, reflecting the better tone of metal prices and sales here and abroad. The rise of ¼ cent in the scrap copper price at New York and a 10-point gain in the export quotation on electrolytic as well as larger domestic sales featured. Oils dragged again. Such reports for 1938 as have been made available to Wall Street emphasize the impossibility of operators to reduce pay roll and other costs to conform with depressed prices for products. Indications are that first-quarter earnings will compare poorly with the like period a year ago in this industry.

Foreign exchange dealings saw a recovery in Dutch and Belgian currencies and slightly lower tendencies in sterling and French francs. Buoyant prices for railroad bonds provided a highlight for an otherwise dull market.

U. S. and Rails Lead Bonds

Bond prices on the New York Stock Exchange advanced today under the leadership of railroad issues and United States governments. Several of the rail bonds, stimulated by the favorable January earnings reports, were in good demand. The index of 30 bonds compiled by the New York Herald Tribune showed a rise of 0.21 of a point, with the rails up 0.43 and the second grade rails up 0.56 point.

United States Governments, though not especially active, found the buyers taking the initiative and gains were the rule throughout the list. News of the Treasury's financing plans for March 15 caused the June notes to rise sharply but left the longer dated issues unimportantly affected. The market expects that the Treasury will offer next month a choice of issues in exchange for the $1,294,000,000 of June notes.

Dominican Republic bonds suddenly came to life and scored gains ranging up to four points. Chilean issues were soft, but several of the German obligations, including specially the Agricultural Bank issues, were firm. Uruguayan bonds were strong.

In the corporate group the second grade rail obligations were taken at rising prices, with the gains amounting to more than two points in a number of issues. The growing indications that the Administration may make a real effort to improve the earning power of the carriers, together with the better returns for January, were behind the advance in the rail group.

Young Blood Held Vital to Big Business

Zest and Courage of Youth Called Hedge Against Obsolescence

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser.
International News Service Economic Commentator.

New York, Feb. 24.—The most effective way for corporations to hedge their assets from destruction of obsolescence is to keep enriching their personnel with the zest and courage of youth.

After nine years in the subnormal economic zone, business thinking has become confused. The pressure of job-seekers for employment has been so insistent that there has been in some quarters a tendency to overlook the value to the employer of intelligent hiring of new blood. It is a blunder to put the transaction on the basis of charity to the job-seeker. Through developing excellence and competence in specific tasks, the job-seeker should always make it perfectly clear that he offers a quid pro quo to the employer.

Age Balance

Thoughtful executives know that nothing is permanent in this life except change. Accordingly, they deliberately seek to balance the age groups in their personnel. While they honor the experience and judgment that they can expect in seasoned men over 40, they also recognize the worth of the courage and venturesomeness of youth.

Progressive companies regularly send talent scouts to the college campuses to pick out promising human material.

Parenthetically, this desirable movement is impeded somewhat by the belief of some businessmen that the colleges stress ideologies which makes students inimical to the ideals of business. In view of this, some employers are beginning to show increasing resistance to college-trained personnel.

The lay conference held at Teachers College, Columbia University, last week is an attempt to meet this issue through a candid interchange among various economic groups and the educators. In addition, such educational institutions as the University of Cincinnati and Antioch College have so-called co-operative

Penn. Operating Net $8,253,264 in Month

Pennsylvania Railroad reported yesterday for January a net railway operating revenue of $8,253,264, an increase of $2,779,316 over January last year. Operating revenues were $32,896,733 of which freight revenues accounted for $23,815,906, an increase of $4,361,405, and passenger revenues $6,318,921.

Railway operating expenses for the month totaled $24,643,469 which was $1,651,795 over the same month last year.

Business Loans Continue Gain

By the Associated Press.

Commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks increased slightly in the week ended February 21.

Banks in 101 leading cities reported to the Federal Reserve Board that their business loans increased $5,000,000 to $3,766,000,000 during the week. The increase followed another increase of $16,000,000 in the preceding week, but before then decreases predominated.

Failures Decline

New York, Feb. 27 (AP).—Business failures in the United States during the five-day week ended February 23 dropped to 217, the lowest total for any period thus far in the year. In the preceding five-day week the total was 224 and a year ago, also a short week, 267.

July Cotton Gains 6 Points

New York, Feb. 27 (AP).—Active buying of July contracts by brokers acting for Bombay interests stimulated fair support for the cotton market today, and prices gained 4 to 8 points.

It was understood the Bombay buying represented the putting out of new straddles on the theory that if no Government loan stocks were released during the current crop season, differences with Bombay quotations would continue to widen.

Young Blood Held Vital to Big Business

students who divide their time between the classroom and actual employment in workshops and offices. Thus in these formative years young men and women while studying get an opportunity to make a simultaneous adjustment to realities. This may suggest an educational formula for the future.

Job Competition

Meantime, new graduates of the schools and colleges find themselves in competition with older persons out of work, and these older people have experience and actual contacts. Those who fail to break through the red tape of the personnel office frequently conclude that one needs influence to get a job. That is based on the misconception that a job is a sinecure, and that the worker is not really worthy of his hire.

Generalization gets nowhere, for business is as complex and variegated as human nature itself. The recent publication at the anti-monopoly hearings of a letter from a lawyer-trustee of a life insurance company pleading with the President to favor his brother-in-law with some brokerage business gave aid and comfort to those already paralyzed with destructive thought that "influence," rather than merit, counts.

Merit vs. Influence

On the other hand, the best corporate managers nowadays lean over backward to keep "influence" out of personnel selections.

These chief executives lay down broad principles regarding personnel, but leave the responsibility for choosing individuals to the department heads. The head of one great industrial corporation, whose son was recently graduated from law school, declined to give him letters of introduction to the law firms.

The president of a leading mail order house will not introduce friends to buyers.

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, February 24, 1939. A public hearing having been held by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia in the matter of closing certain street area as hereinafter described, and the said Commissioners being satisfied as to the equity, justice and advisability of the said closings, and that the same are in the public interests and not detrimental to the interests of abutting property owners, NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the said Commissioners have prepared the following order: "Ordered: That pursuant to the provisions of Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, the street area as shown in green on plat filed in the office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia, and numbered as Map 2083, is hereby ordered CLOSED, same to take effect on and after March 25, 1939, the title to the land comprised in said area so closed to revert to the abutting property owners, as shown on said map; the said street area hereby ordered closed being described as follows: Closing of FULTON STREET N.W., between New Mexico Avenue and Foxhall Road; closing 43RD STREET N.W., from its southern terminus south of Fulton Street to Garfield Street; closing part of 45TH STREET N.W., between Fulton and Garfield Streets (providing also for a transfer for widening 45th Street N.W., north of Fulton Street). Any and all parties interested must file objections, if any, to said closings in writing before the effective date of above order; otherwise said order shall become effective on March 25, 1939, as aforesaid; and said street area shall on and after said date become closed in accordance with the provisions of said act. MELVIN C. HAZEN, D. McCOACH, JR., Commissioners of the District of Columbia. feb24,14t,ex8

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, Washington, February 24, 1939. Ordered: That the Police Regulations for the District of Columbia be, and the same are hereby, amended as follows: Amend Section 1 of Article XVIII by striking out the period at the end thereof and substituting a comma therefor, and adding the words "or any person," so that the paragraph as amended will read as follows: "Section 1. No person shall own or keep in the District of Columbia any animal of the dog kind which shall by barking, howling, or in any other manner whatsoever disturb the comfort or quiet of any neighborhood, or any person." Amend Section 2 of Article XVIII so that the section will read as follows: "Section 2. No animal of the dog kind shall be allowed to go at large without a collar or tag, as now prescribed by law, and unless under the control of an attendant, and if he is of a quarrelsome or dangerous disposition, he shall furthermore be secured by a chain or cord held by some person. No dog shall be permitted to run or go on private property without the consent of the owner or occupant thereof." Strike out Sections 6 and 7 of Article XVIII, and insert in lieu thereof new sections to be known as Sections 6 and 7, respectively, to read as follows: "Section 6. All outbuildings used to keep fowls and pigeons are hereby revoked, and all persons holding said permits shall dispose of any fowl or pigeon kept by them within thirty days from the effective date that this section becomes law as a part of these regulations, unless said persons comply with the provisions of Section 7 of this article." "Section 7. No person shall harbor, keep or suffer to be kept contrary to the provisions of this article, within the District of Columbia, any fowls or pigeons, or the progeny thereof, without a permit from the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to be issued only upon the approval of the Health Officer, D. C., upon compliance with all the terms and conditions of this article. Such permit shall be dated and shall expire at the end of one year and may be issued annually thereafter under the same conditions." Add at the end of Article XVIII the following new sections, to be known as Sections 8, 9, 10, and 11, respectively, to read as follows: "Section 8. Applications for permits shall be furnished by the Health Officer, D. C., and shall state name and address of the applicant; the proposed location; an accurate description of the kind and number of said fowls or pigeons or any other information required. Approval of the Health Officer shall be based upon investigation and report that the proposed location is not within 500 feet of the lot or parcel of ground upon which any school, church, hospital or place of public assembly is located; that there is on file with said Health Officer the consents in writing of the owners of the properties immediately adjacent to the premises of the applicant and at least 90% of the householders within a radius of 250 feet (and in the case of an apartment house where more than 5 families are resident thereof, the consent of the owner or his duly authorized agent shall be considered as and in lieu of any other householders); and that adequate coops, pens, cotes, etc., are provided. After permit issuance, coops, pens, cotes, etc., shall be kept dry and well ventilated and clean at all times." "Section 9. No such fowl or pigeon shall be kept or permitted to run, fly or stray within 50 feet of any building used for human habitation. Provided, that this shall not prohibit the flying of homing pigeons." "Section 10. No captured wild animal, or its progeny, such as bear, monkey, fox, reptiles or any other shall be permitted to be kept or displayed within the District of Columbia without a special permit issued only upon the approval of the Major and Superintendent of Police. Such permits shall be issued only for a period of not to exceed 10 days and upon the payment of $10 for each such animal kept." "Section 11. No bees or hives of bees shall be permitted to be kept, where there are human habitations within a radius of 500 feet and then only when the Health Officer has determined that the safety and health of the residents of the District of Columbia will or may not be endangered." M. C. HAZEN, D. McCOACH, Jr., Commissioners, D. C.

The Candle Stick Maker
In other words, stay friendly with your tradesmen. Nothing will ruin friendship quicker than unpaid bills. Here's the way you can avoid them.

THIS IS THE RIGHT WAY!
If you have a group of small, unpaid bills borrow enough from ONE organization to pay them off. Then you have all your obligations grouped under one heading and can meet that one much easier.
A loan (up to $300) on your signature, furniture or car will do it. Come in and see us. We shall be glad to talk it over.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Every time changes in the laws are proposed a large number of contract players throw up their hands in horror and shout "What, again? We just learn the scoring bonuses for one set of laws and along comes a group of enthusiastic draftsmen who seem to be beset with the idea of scrapping all that has gone before and substituting as much that is new and strange as possible."

While it may be that certain of the contract players have so advanced that they are ready for the subtle problems which will confront them in the bidding of equalized suits, it does not follow that the majority of players are ready for this change. Many of them are still wrestling with elementary bidding problems as today's hand will indicate. It was sent to R. A. Brannon, expert and writer, who calls it "the worst bid hand I have ever encountered."

We will not dispute him. By perfectly silly bidding the pair manages to reach a contract at which they cannot make a grand slam when at three other declarations 13 tricks are easily won. Having bid to seven, however, on a four-card trump suit, the players succeed in being set 1,400 points to give themselves a theoretical debit balance of 4,000 points.

"This is a hand to weep over. The South player responsible for the holocaust violated one of the cardinal principles of bidding—that is: 'Never rebid a four-card suit which your partner has refused to assist.' In this case South rebid his four-card suit after his partner had twice refused it, for North had two opportunities to assist in the hearts. But listen! The worst is yet to come. South not only rebid his four-card heart suit after two inferential denials, but darned if he didn't jump the bidding to six hearts, holding only the ace, king and two small."

Mr. Brannon suggests this bidding as one of several variations that might be used:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	3 ◇	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	5 ♣	Pass
6 NT.	Pass	7 NT.	Pass
Pass	Pass

East's double of seven hearts, bad as it is, is only exceeded by South's failure to grasp the opportunity to eseape to seven no trump.

East has not the slightest assurance of defeating a no-trump grand slam, and his double is suicidal, but fortunately for him his confidence in South was not misplaced.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

WELL, to put it mildly, Senator Ellender, of Louisiana, was a surprised man.

He went to the Civil Service Commission the other day to ask assurance that no reprisal would be meted out to civil service employes who testified at the Senator's forthcoming hearings on czarism and petty tyrany in the departments and agencies. The commission itself, in solemn session, told the Senator that this assurance would have to come from the department and agency heads. That's what the Senator told us yesterday.

He was surprised because he thought the commission kept some sort of authtority over the employes after they took their jobs. Anyhow, the Senator yesterday began sending letters to the department and agency heads, asking assurance from them that no reprisal would be visited on witnesses before his committee. He told this column that there should be some sort of reorganization that would allow the C. S. C. to follow the employes through to the jobs; and that his hearings might get under way in a couple of weeks.

He said he could get a thousand witnesses, if he chose, to show petty czarism and unfairness on the part of some Government chiefs. But he only wants a small and representative group to testify. For their protection, he will have the replies he expects to come from the department and agency heads. Interestingly, the Senator has spent not a dime of Federal moneys allotted to his committee. To date, he has done all the work on his own. "I have a ton of literature on the subject," he said.

OF FOLKS: The gentleman in the Triangle, who persistently calls to say that the Federal Government is heading for the caste system heap. His idea is rationalized this way—more and more, he says, the Civil Service Commission is demanding college education and a string of degrees as a prerequisite to getting a job. Furthermore, certain agencies are showing strong favoritism toward what are called Grade A colleges, he says, and it's true. Now, according to the caller, only 5 per cent of Americans have college educations (the Office of Education said the number of graduates in the United States in 1938 was 2,775,546). This percentage, our caller figures, will be sustained for awhile. There are, roughly, 128,000,000 Americans. This great host, our caller says with alarm, is being increasingly dominated and bureaucratized by a tiny minority of favored college graduates. But somehow this column isn't alarmed. The new personnel chief, Dr. Davenport, has too much reality on the ball for theorists to steal the bases on him.

VOTELESS Washington again confronts a bill (H. R. 3650) to make the District bone dry. Capt. W. H. Stayton, executive director of Repeal Associates, blasts out: "The perennial bill to make the Nation's Capital bone dry has blossomed forth again. I wonder why Representative Guyer is willing to sponsor this bill, year after year, when he must know so well that prohibition in his own State of Kansas is responsible for shocking conditions and disreputable drinking habits."

CLERKS and stenographers in the southwestern tip of Agriculture's south building gave themselves up and worked no more when two pneumatic drills and a large air-compressor began operations under the windows. The occasion, from the drill crew's point of view, was the revamping of heating lines . . . Newcomers to the Patent Office are: Bruce L. Calder, F. Keith Shelton, Ernest S. Cohen, Guy M. West, Abbott Levine, Michael Patrick McCormack, Alice C. Replogle, Myron H. Boyer, Edwin Robert Anderson jr.; Carl W. Hoeth, John Trench, John C. Cummins, J. Ervin Godwin and William A. Shira, jr. . . . Frank Kent, of the Baltimore Sun, says of The Washington Post's Ernest Lindley: "Among New Deal journalists none is fairer nor more authoritative than Ernest Lindley . . . He is not only personally close to Mr. Roosevelt but is an absolutely reliable reflector of the New Deal 'inner circle' opinion" . . . The Massachusetts State College Alumni Association of Washington (with half of its membership in the Federal service) will hear an illustrated lecture on "A Summer Vacation in the National Parks," by Conrad L. Wirth, at 8:30 tomorrow evening in the Battery Park Community House, Bethesda. Irene L. Bartlett, of the Agriculture Department, is in charge of arrangements . . . The physical vigor in that sedate old place, the Patent Office, is worth speaking of. There are 400 members in the Recreation Association; 70 active bowlers; 40 active pingpongers; 25 softball players; 20 tennis players; 40 hikers; 10 basketball players, and 800 dancers. And on the aesthetic side, there are 20 employes embroiled in one end or another of amateur dramatics.

Bob Burns Says—

I see where a guy out in Russellville, Kentucky, put electric lights in his hen house an' derned if one of his Rhode Island Reds didn't lay an egg shaped like an electric light bulb!

I told Grandpa Snazzy about that an' he said, "Shucks, that ain't nothin'! I used to put white doorknobs under my hens to give 'em somethin' to aim at. One of my settin' hens was nearsighted an' she tried to hatch out that doorknob along with a batch of eggs.

"Well, sir, Robin—all them eggs hatched an' I needed the doorknob, so I took it out from under the hen. She made an awful fuss about it, but I took it jes' the same an' put it on the kitchen door. That night I heard a heck of a commotion an' I got up to investigate. You know what? On my reputation as the most truthful man in Arkansaw, there was that mother hen, with her hen's feet a-clingin' to the keyhole, hangin' upside down, a-settin' on that doorknob. She was gonna hatch the blame thing or die tryin'!"

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Chatterer Sees His Chance

Your opportunity may be
When some one else is forced to flee.
—Chatterer the Red Squirrel.

How true this is Chatterer learned long, long ago. He has profited by it frequently. It doesn't seem right to profit by the troubles of others. No, sir, it does not. Yet it is done continually, and it is done by people of whom you would least expect it. The misfortune of another may offer you your opportunity. Equally true is it that your difficulty may afford another the chance he has been waiting for.

Without having seen them Chatterer knew that there were eggs in the nest of Hooty and Mrs. Hooty. He knew by the care they took never to leave that nest uncoverel for more than a few minutes at a time. From a hole in a tree very near the tree in which was the nest of the bog Owls, he had spied on them so much that he knew their daily habits perfectly. He knew that for the greater part of the day until late afternoon they spent much of their time dozing, one on the nest and the other in a tree near at hand. Late in the afternoon, or, if the day was dark and gloomy, earlier in the day, Hooty would start out hunting. If he was lucky he would soon be back and Mrs. Hooty would go. But most of their hunting was done after the Black Shadows began creeping through the Green Forest, and that was the time when Chatterer always was safely curled up in his snug home.

"I'm foolish to even think about those eggs," said Chatterer to himself. "I am not likely to have a chance to get one and probably I wouldn't dare take the chance if there should be one. But I just can't seem to forget those eggs."

Then one morning as Chatterer sat looking out the entrance hole to that hollow in which he spent so much time these days he saw something moving over the snow that still covered the ground.

Apparently Jumper wasn't wise, or perhaps he didn't know about that nest of two of his most dangerous enemies, the big Owls. It must have been this, for he hopped about in the most unconcerned manner. Now he would sit up, or perhaps stand up on his hind feet, to reach some twigs or leaf buds. Again he would disappear beneath low branches of hemlock or spruce. Presently he would reappear. All the time he kept drawing nearer. He was as white as the snow about him and at times it would have been hard to keep track of him, but for the black tips of his ears. These gave him away as it were. It was clear that he had no suspicion that there was any special danger in that neighborhood.

For the time being Chatterer forgot this also in his interest in watching Jumper. Then without warning a great dark form swept down from above and for a second or two came between Chatterer and Jumper. Chatterer saw stout feathered legs stretched to clutch with big, black, curved wicked-looking claws. There was a moment of much confusion, of flapping of great wings and flying snow. Then away shot a big white form with astonishing jumps. It twisted and dodged among the trees. Following with surprising speed, avoiding the trees with amazing skill, flew Hooty the Owl

Then Chatterer's heart jumped. Another had poined in the chase. It was Mrs. Hooty. Yes, sir, it was Mrs. Hooty. Jumper was so big that in these days of scarcity of food he would be a prize they could not afford to miss. What one alone might not be able to do, two working together might accomplish. So Mrs. Hooty left the nest and those precious eggs to aid Hooty.

In a jiffy Jumper and his pursuers had disappeared. It was then that Chatterer awoke to the fact that now was his chance to visit that nest. It was unguarded. Its owners were nowhere in sight. It was the chance he had hoped and waited for. Did he dare take it?

Holt Asks Tax Cut, Reforms In Labor Act

Senator Offers Plan For Co-operation of Government, Business

A three point program for govenment co-operation with business was proposed last night by Senator Holt (Democrat), of Wes Virginia, speaking at the Y. M. C. A. forum.

The measures advocated were: A direct aproach to the problem of lightening the tax load on business; amendment of the national labor relations act "in the light of the intsntion of the act itself," and "a little more honesty and a little less politics in government."

In the panel participating with Holt were Dr. Spurgeon Bell, of Brookings Institution; Robert Watt, of the Intenational Labor Organization, and Foster Wood, of the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Wood challenged Holt's charge that the National Labor Relations Board was biased in favor of the C. I. O., and that strikes had increased under it. Watt told the audience that "I agree with very little of what he says except the word co-operation." Dr. Bell said he agreed with Holt in substance but "I doubt if Little Steel and the textile industries will co-operate if it looks as though they are really going to be organized."

K. D. McRae Dies; Was Manager of Typewriter Firm

Kenneth D. McRae, 53, of 5 West Thornapple street, Chevy Chase, Md., a native of Washington, died yesterday at Homeopathic Hospital after several years' illness.

Mr. McRae was for 15 years manager of the Washington office of L. C. Smith Corona Typewriter Co., and had previously been for many years superintendent of the general supply committee of the Treasury Department. Until he moved to Chevy Chase, 15 years ago, he had been a resident of Washington.

Mr. McRae was a member of New Jerusalem Lodge No. 9 of Masons, Washington Commandery, Knights Templar, Almas Temple, the Optimists Club and the Columbia Country Club.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth K. McRae; two daughters, Eleanor E. and Gertrude E. McRae; two brothers, Edward W. and John C. McRae, and a sister, Mrs. Walter H. Nash.

Funeral services will be held at the residence at 2 p. m. tomorrow, Dr. Henry W. Snyder, of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, officiating. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Maj. Wilson Expires; Fought For South at 16

Maj. Robert W. Wilson, veteran soldier of the Confederacy, died yesterday at the home of his son, Robert E. Wilson, 3548 Warder street northwest. He lacked three weeks of his ninety-fourth birthday.

WILSON

A lad of 16 when war broke out, Wilson did not enlist until the tide turned against the South after Gettysburg. But in the spring of 1864 he ran away from his home at Bladensburg, Prince Georges County, crossed the river and made his way behind the Confederate lines, traveling most of the time at night.

Joining the First Maryland Cavalry, Wilson saw action almost daily through the year, and was still with his company in 1865 during the nine-day retreat from Richmond to Appomattox.

He was a member of Camp 171, United Confederate Veterans, of this city, and a member of the board of trustees of the Confederate Memorial Hall, 1322 Vermont avenue northwest.

Besides his son, Robert Wilson, he leaves two other sons, James A. Wilson, of Arlington, Va., and Lieut. Francis J. Wilson, U. S. Navy, of Coronado, Calif., and three grandchildren.

Services will be held at 9 a. m. tomorrow at the Sacred Heart Church, Sixteenth street and Park road northwest, of which he was a member.

Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Miss Stienbarger Rites in Illinois

Funeral services for Miss Mabel Stienbarger, 45, associate home economics specialist of the bureau of home economics, Department of Agriculture who died here Saturday, will be held this afternoon at Fowler, Ill.

Surviving are her mother, Mrs. Anna Stienbarger; a sister, Mrs. H. W. Dierker, and a brother, all of Fowler, Ill.

Appeals Court Upholds SEC Probe Of Delaware Firm

The Court of Appeals yesterday upheld action of the District Court in dismissing a suit of the Resources Corporation International, of Delaware, to enjoin the Securities and Exchange Commission from an alleged "fishing expedition" into its books.

The Resources Corporation, controlling timber and ranch lands in Mexico, registered 35,000 of its 650,000 shares of common stock with the commission last February. The commission gave notice that parts of the registration statement were apparently untrue, and ordered hearings in April.

Later the corporation asked to withdraw its registration statement, but the commission refused to allow withdrawal.

Shocking, but Not Surprising: Nudity Still Draws Fair Crowd

Sally Rand's Beautiful Belles, As 'Ranchers' Top Attractions At San Francisco Exposition

(Copyright, 1939, by International News Service)

Treasure Island, San Francisco, Feb. 27.—Throw up your hands in horror, express your disgust and say you don't believe it, but America still likes its pretty show girls in the nude—or almost that way.

This was a forced conclusion today as Golden Gate International Exposition officials checked up on the first ten days of the World's Fair of the West and found—Sally Rand's Nude Ranch leading the list of all concessions on the exposition's Gayway.

In fact, the Nude Ranch was away "off the nut," as they say in show business, and the girls were cavorting practically bare to capacity crowds, even when daily attendance figures for the exposition hovered around the 30,000 mark.

Competition Coming Up

Seeing the crowds which jammed Sally's ranch to such an extent that police reserves were called out to handle traffic, two other girl shows which had been waiting to see what was going to happen, are now rushing their places to completion in the hopes of climbing aboard the gravy train.

Meanwhile, the shapely redheads, brunettes and blondes who scamper about in their "glass showcase" with a typical Western background, save for the badminton and basketball courts, have everything their own way—they make up the only girl show on the island. Not that they wouldn't hold their own anyway, because there's something about the ranch that draws people like a magnet.

"Stella" Strong at 24

If that were the only reason to believe that Americans like nudity, exposition officials might point to the other concessions, but in third and fourth place in the concessions attracting the largest crowds are "Stella," glorious painting of a nude beauty, which as the sensation of the 1915 fair in San Francisco and "Gloria," another painting of a woman au natural.

Of course, Americans long since have been curious and Ripley's "Believe-It-or-Not Odditorium," with its twelve freaks was a cinch to grab off some of the honors The freaks are in second spot in the cash receipts to date.

Sally Doubles Ripley

However, it was learned that Sally's gals played to 14,000 mildly shocked sophisticates on opening day at two-bits per each and that was just twice as many as Ripley's got with its 40-cent charge.

The average, incidentally, has been running around 7,500 daily for the Nude Ranch with the Saturday, Sunday and holiday crowds coming close to the opening day records.

Snakes still have an appeal for the public but the 10-cent charge doesn't put the cash register totals as high as places which charge more. The various other carnival attractions drag down just the same ratio as they would at any carnival.

Such things as the man who fights the octopus, the diving bell, "dodge 'em"—they call it "scooter" at the fair, incubator babies, various rides and wheels of fortune attract average crowds but fall short of sensational attendance.

"Ranch" for Flushing?

New York, Feb. 27 (I.N.S.)—Sally Rand, fully dressed and in her right mind, arrived here by plane today from San Francisco and hinted the New York World's Fair may see her "Nude Ranch" after all, even though Chairman Grover H. Whalen and Mayor LaGuardia both so far have said, "No, no, no!"

Miss Rand said the "board of directors" of the New York Fair had approved the ranch here and she was to see Whalen and try to get his approval. Whalen had nothing to say today.

Police, Firemen Hunt Missing 6-Year-Old Girl

Larchmont, N. Y. (Tuesday), Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Police and firemen early today serached for Lois Masterson, 6-year-old daughter of Frank Masterson, New York stock broker, who has been missing since late yesterday.

Los Angeles, Feb. 27 (I.N.S.).—William I. Hollingsworth 2d, 32, son of a millionaire real estate man, today filed notice of intention to marry Jane Elizabeth Hamilton, former Washington, D. C., society debutante. Miss Hamilton gave her age as 23.

Circus Is Flamboyant Phoenix Rising Above Labor Troubles

By Inez Robb.

Copyright, 1939, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. Distributed by International News Service.

Sarasota, Fla., Feb. 27.—Flamboyantly the greatest show on earth takes to the road on April 1. Labor difficulties solved for the time being, the circus is coming to town again this year.

ROBB

In winter headquarters of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey, crews are working overtime to ready the big top for one of the longest tours in recent years. Border to the Gulf, from coast to coast and to the two World's Fair cities, New York and San Francisco.

Temporarily down last summer, but not out, the circus is back again this season. Millions who mourned last summer at what they feared was the passing of a great national institution can rejoice.

Out of deference to two World's Fairs, the big top will produce a glittering extravaganza to be called "The World Comes to the World Fair." Representatives of every country, in native dress, will be part of the procession around the hippodrome track to open each performance.

Second in interest to resurgence of the big top is the modernization it has undergone. The very shape of the big top as well as its color has been changed.

The big top, once a long oval like a fat cigar, has been shortened and widened so that customers who once sat in the outfield now will be considerably closer to home plate, or the center ring.

Three shades of blue, from dark to light, will form the top of the big top. The sides will be white, against which red chairs will glisten. Even the tent poles have been glamorized. They are being painted gold and silver.

Air-conditioning a major engineering feat, has been perfected. Twenty-two motor-driven units will pour cold air into the big top.

Even the circus dust has been laid. A harmless chemical powder, spread on the ground and sprinkled with water before a performance, will settle the dust and kill germs.

The soda pop venders already are complaining about it. Settling dust has been their business for years.

Book Carriers, Elevators Delay Library Annex

Congress Has Not Yet Accepted $9,000,000 Job Due Last June

The annex to the Library of Congress, due for completion in June, 1939, has cost the Federal Government $9,000,000, but the new building has been of little use so far because its elevators and book carriers are still balky, Dr. Herbert Putnam, Librarian of Congress, said yesterday in his annual report.

"Even at the date of this report," he added, "it has not been formally 'accepted' by the Government."

Dr. Putnam explained, however, that the card division of the library, with its 100,000,000 printed catalog cards and the large personnel using them, already have been transferred to the new building.

Transfer of the copyright office with its files and personnel, he continued, is now under way, "and there will follow in succession certain groups of material, including the Smithsonian deposit, and certain activities, including the bindery and printing office and, last of all, the accession catalog, co-operative catalog and classification division."

Dr. Putnam listed among the gifts the $33,500 given by Mrs. Gertrude C. Whittall to provide "a secure, convenient and dignified setting for the group of surpassing Stradivari string instruments" owned by the Library. He also mentioned as "an endowment of striking value and significance" the presentation to the Library and the Smithsonian Institution jointly of property at Sixteenth and I streets northwest, valued at $372,000. The gift was made by Miss Annie-May Hegeman.

Mrs. Tehaan Dies; Rites Tomorrow .

Mrs. Tamann Tehaan, 57, of 3418 Prospect avenue northwest, for 30 years a District resident, died yesterday in Georgetown Hospital.

A native of Tripoli, Mrs. Tehaan is survived by her husband, George Tehaan; three sons, Louis, Samuel and Joseph Tehaan, and three daughters, Miss Matilda Tehaan, Mrs. Adele Bass and Mrs. Julia Hillow, all of this city.

Funeral rites will be held a 2 p. m. tomorrow in St. George Syrian Church. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Rites Tomorrow For Herbert Davis

Funeral services for Herbert C. Davis, 66, chief clerk of the National Guard Bureau, War Department, who died Sunday, will be held at his residence, 1210 Buchanan street, Arlington, at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Episcopal services will be held at the grave in Arlington Cemetery at 3 p. m.

A native of Alliance, Ohio, Mr. Davis came to Arlington after serving in the Spanish-American War. He was a member of the Columbia Post, No. 833, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Lawton Camp of the Spanish-American War Veterans Society.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Nan Davis.

A. F. of L. Hails Court Ruling on Labor Board Order

The Court of Appeals yesterday dismissed a petition of the American Federation of Labor to review and set aside the National Labor Relation Board's order establishing the C. I. O. as exclusive bargaining agent for more than 13,000 longshoremen on the Pacific Coast.

Justice Groner wrote in the decision that the labor board's order could be reviewed "only in an independent suit in equity commenced in a district court."

The decision was hailed as a "distinct victory" for the A. F. of L. by Joseph A. Padway and Herbert S. Thatcher, attorneys for the A. F. of L. "Until now the board has taken the arrogant position that a union aggrieved in a representation case ruling has no right of review in any court," said Padway.

Captain, Crew Rescued Twice From Freighter

New York, Feb. 27 (I.N.S.).—Capt. Frank B. Boyer and 16 of his men were rescued again today from their freighter, the Lillian—the second time since the steamer and the North German Lloyd liner Wiegand collided last night in a fog off New Jersey.

They returned to the Lillian aboard a Coast Guard cutter to salvage the ship. The freighter, carrying sugar, had not sunk 18 hours after the collision and the men believed she might be saved.

They were forced to flee as the freighter's deck began to tilt sharply. Then came an explosion and the Lillian sank.

17 Return $1,600 Here in Relief Frauds

Welfare Board Cites Restitutions by Unworthy Clients

The Board of Public Welfare in six months has forced restitution of $1,600 in 17 cases in which relief funds were "improperly received," Director Elwood Street announced yesterday. He released a procedure history to show methods of the Public Assistance Division in retrieving funds.

The 17 cases were handled before the Burdette Lewis relief study was completed, Alice Hill, PAD director, said. Lewis charged that wholesale "graft" was possible under present Board of Welfare administration.

The "typical" procedure history concerned the "A" family, composed of husband, wife and four children. Due to illness, the family was known to direct relief case workers and received allotments. When Mr. "A" died in 1937, his wife was questioned concerning probable insurance.

She admitted receiving some, but withheld details, maintaining it all went to her stepson. It was later learned she had received $369.50. While this was being investigated, the family received $104.90 in relief money.
